French Military Junta In Algiers Extends Control

PARIS (UPI) — French Army generals revolting against President Charles De Gaulle in Algeria Saturday night took over the port city of Oran in a spreading insurrection triggered by paratroop seizure of Algiers at dawn.

Led by four generals and several thousand foreign legion paratroopers the rightist who oppoce De Gaulle's policy of Algerian independence demanded surrender of Constantine, Algeria's third largest city, where officers have remained loyal to the government.

Authorities in Paris confirmed the claim that Oran, second largest city in Algeria, had been taken by the rebels. They said the loyal commander fled to a command post at Tlemcen, 75 miles away, after previously rejecting a surrender ultimatum.

DE GAULLE ACTS

De Gaulle declared a state of national emergency and began mobilizing armed forces with a vow to smash the challenge to his Fifth Republic and bring the ringleaders to trial. Sources reported 100 anti-Gaullists arrested in police raids in metropolitan France.

A broadcast from the insurgent radio Algiers declared 14 hours after foreign legion paratroopers had ringed Algiers, the capital, that the second largest city of Oran had been taken over. There were no reports of violence or bloodshed in either place. Europeans in the cities who oppose De Gaulle's plans for independence in Algeria, erupted with joy and shouts of "Algeria is French." French."

A colonel identified only as Argoult was said to have "assumed military and civil power" in Oran, where earlier two De Gaulle emissaries had conferred on an emergency mission from Paris.

Public buildings in Oran as well as Algiers were occupied by anti-Gaullist troops, the broadcast said.

Reports reaching Oran from the blacked-out Algerian capital said the right-wing army units were passing out arms to civilian recruits and armed civilians were manning barricades in the streets in defiance of De Gaulle. The Gaullist delegate general and Algerian supreme military com-

Bandit Robs City Western Union Office

Between $1,500 And $2,000 Taken By Armed Robber

By SARAH LITTLE
World Staff Writer

A blue-jean clad bandit took between $1,500 and $2,000 at gunpoint Saturday night from the Western Union office here.

Twenty-nine year old Perry Dupree, 411 Georgia St., night manager at Western Union, said the "dirty and desperate" bandit shook hands with him after the robbery was finished.

PRODUCES GUN

The crime occurred at 11:15 p.m. Dupree said that when the bandit walked in he thought he was a customer. "I walked to the counter and asked, 'May I help you'" Dupree said.

The bandit laid a .38 caliber revolver on the counter and handed him a 10-pound paper bag, saying, "Put your money in there."

Dupree stated that he walked to the cash drawer, put some money in the bag, and walked back. The robber said, "The safe, too."

Dupree said he reached into the safe, took two rolls of $100 bills and placed these in the bag, hoping the bandit would think that was all.

The robber, not to be fooled, said, "All of it!"

Unofficially Dupree said he believed the amount taken was between $1,500 and $2,000.

The unmasked bandit did not ask for any change or checks, only currency.

The night manager described the bandit as being in his late 20's, extremely nervous, wearing tennis shoes, filthy blue jeans, a khaki shirt and cap and a blue denim jacket.

The bandit said to Dupree during the robbery that he was very hungry and hadn't eaten in four

Scientist Says U. S. May Win In Moon Race

DES MOINES, Iowa (UPI)—The United States may still be the first nation to land a manned spaceship on the moon despite the recent Soviet successes in space, Dr. James A. Van Allen, University of Iowa scientist predicted Saturday.

"It's not that getting to the moon itself is so important," Van Allen said in a speech here at a district convention of the Advertising Federation of America. "It is important, though, to have a clear goal, a symbol."

He urged President Kennedy to make the landing of a man on the moon a national goal "right away."

"It's perfectly feasible technically" for us to land a man on the moon by 1970, Van Allen said. "We have the resources and the people to do it."

The Iowa physicist said the 1970 goal "is reasonable and possible. . ."

A spaceship would have to pass through the deadly Van Allen radiation belts surrounding the earth which he discovered and which were named for him. But he said this would be "not risky in terms of chances men take today."

Monroe News-Star

Burglars hammered Sterlington again Friday night or early Saturday morning when three business establishments were raided, inflicting a loss that was still being counted and expected to run into several thousand dollars.

The burglars tore their way into Oglesby's supermarket, Sterlington drug store and Ward's Jewelry, appliance and variety store.

Loot taken included a wide range of items, among them all the narcotics in the drug store safe which was forced open.

A breakdown of the stolen articles, after a quick survey by the victims, was:

Drennan Asks Incorporation Of Sterlington

Charles G. Drennan, member of the Ouachita Parish School board and one of three Sterlington businessmen to suffer heavy losses to burglars Friday night or Saturday morning, yesterday issued an urgent appeal for organized efforts to protect the community.

Drennan headed the call for a special meeting of Sterlington citizens Tuesday night at 7:30. "I think it is time for the people of Sterlington to wake up and incorporate the community for the mutual protection of us all.

"I was accused about two years ago of trying to incorporate Sterlington for personal gain," Drennan said. "This was far from the truth.

"Since that time I have had next to my store a $25,000 fire which necessitated me moving my entire stock out into the streets for fear that the entire shopping center would be destroyed by fire.

"In the last month we have had robberies in my immediate area resulting in the loss of over $15,000," Drennan declared.

RECALLS GEN. TAYLOR

Special War Study Ordered By JFK

WASHINGTON (AP) — Retired Army Gen. Maxwell D. Taylor who in World War II made a dangerous excursion behind enemy lines as an important secret agent was assigned by President Kennedy Saturday to make a special survey of the military's guerrilla warfare organization.

Taylor retired as Army chief of staff in 1959, protesting that the Eisenhower administration was subordinating the Army's role in defense planning.

He was back in Washington Saturday, at work as an adviser and researcher and attending a meeting of the National Security Council in his new and temporary job.

Kennedy, at the outset of his administration, emphasized interest in improving and expanding the Army's special forces. These forces specialize in the art of waging war behind enemy lines in cooperation with local populations.

The catastrophic failure of the landing by Cuban counterrevolutionaries — an operation designed in guerrilla warfare pattern — apparently sharpened Kennedy's interest in the problem.

The President already had authorized the Army to double the comparatively small special forces organization, bringing it up to about 3,000 men. At present, there are three such units—in Germany, Okinawa and at Ft. Bragg, N.C.

Pierre Salinger, White House news secretary, said Kennedy decided during the last few days that such a survey was needed and only Friday asked Taylor to take on the job.

Taylor, will function as a one

U.S. Rejects Soviet Note Of Warning

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The State Department, speaking on behalf of President Kennedy, retorted swiftly Saturday to an angry message from Soviet Premier Nikita Khrushchev on Cuba.

The department announced that Kennedy has decided "not to be drawn into an extended public debate" with the Soviet ruler on details of the Cuban invasion controversy.

DEFINES POLICIES

But on Kennedy's behalf the department pledged an "endless struggle" for attainment of "fundamental rights" and the "popular will" in Cuba and elsewhere.

In broad strokes, a formal State Department statement laid down firm U. S. general policies on the Caribbean island.

"We reject," the statement said, "the right of any narrow political grouping or any country to arrogate to itself the power to determine 'the real will of the people.'" Khrushchev in his message had challenged Kennedy on U. S. assertions for freedom, saying, "what freedom do you mean."

The U. S. statement, read to reporters by department spokesman Lincoln White said: "Our answer is simple. This nation was committed at its birth to the proposition that the people of all countries should have the right freely to determine their own future by democratic processes and freely to cooperate with their neighbors.

"The people of the United States believe that the right of self determination is fundamental and should apply throughout the world."

In his message earlier Saturday, Khrushchev said the United States, in its policy toward Cuba, was following "a slippery and dangerous road which can lead to a new world war." The Soviet Premier said it had proven "incontrovertibly that the United States was responsible for the abortive invasion of Cuba."

The U. S. statement said that this government's struggle for human rights "goes forward day by

IN TENSE CRISIS

Ike Calls For All To Support JFK

CAMP DAVID, Md. (UPI) — President Kennedy won support from former President Dwight D. Eisenhower Saturday after briefing his White House predecessor on the tense Cuban situation.

Kennedy met with Eisenhower in this mountain retreat in an effort to line up bipartisan support for action in the bristling Cuban crisis.

After the meeting Eisenhower called for all Americans to support Kennedy in the tense international situation.

WIDE ACTIVITY

The one hour and 25 minute meeting took place amid crackling activity on widely scattered fronts relating to the Cuban crisis.

Kennedy said he had invited Eisenhower to the luncheon meeting "in order to bring him up to date on recent events and also to get the benefits of his thoughts and experience."

The briefing apparently included a report on a message in which Soviet Premier Nikita S. Khrushchev claimed he had proof the United States backed the invasion of Cuba.

Eisenhower told newsmen: "I say I am all in favor of the United States supporting the man who has to carry the responsibility for our foreign affairs."

Before he left Washington, Kennedy met with the National Security Council on the Cuban situation.

It was Kennedy's first trip as

Sen. Goldwater For Tough U.S. Cuban Action

PHOENIX, Ariz. (UPI)—Sen. Barry Goldwater, saying "the American people are getting sick and tired of being pushed around by Russia," Saturday called for U. S. military intervention in Cuba if all else fails.

"This country is in greater danger than it has ever been," said the Arizona senator Saturday on a speaking tour of his state. "We can overnight become a second rate world power.

"We can within a very few years come under a foreign philosophy," added Goldwater, who met with President Kennedy Friday for a briefing on the Cuban crisis.

The United States cannot permit a Communist country so close to its shores, said Goldwater, adding, "Our mistake is not being tough."

"This is not Jack Kennedy's fault," said Goldwater. "I'm opposite to him politically, but not as an American. When he's right I'm with him. I think he's right."

Goldwater said he had recommended an aerial and surface blockade of Cuba. If that failed, he said, the United States should turn to the Organization of American States for action.

"If the OAS failed," he added, "we should take action ourselves."

Asked if that meant active military intervention, Goldwater said:

"Yes, but I hope it wouldn't be necessary. However, if all else failed, I would support it."

First 7-Stage Rocket Fired

WASHINGTON (AP) — The National Aeronautics and Space Agency announced Saturday it had fired what it believes is the world's first seven-stage rocket to propel an artificial meteorite out and back through the earth's atmosphere at 25,000 m.p.h.

The firing took place Friday at Wallops Island, Va. Three of the stages fired in the upward thrust of the rocket to an altitude of 175 miles, and the next four successively after it turned downward to project the meteorite—a small steel pellet—back through the atmosphere at the tremendous speed.

A spokesman said the experiment was conducted as part of a study of the physical phenomena that occur during the re-entry of high speed objects into the earth's atmosphere.

Election Shows Heavy Sentiment For Segregation

GREENSBURG, La. (AP) — Voters in St. Helena Parish lined up solidly Saturday behind a move to abolish public schools rather than have them desegregrated.

Complete returns from all six wards in the rural parish of southeast Louisiana showed 1,147 votes to close the schools and only 56 against. Parish officials said only four of 111 registered Negroes voted in the election.

The parish school board called for the election in face of a federal court order that demanded desegregation in the public schools but set no date for such desegregation.

VOTE SOLIDLY

"This is the first time since I have been here (24 years) that the people have been almost solidly together on any election," said School Supt. J. L. Meadows.

"Cat" Stone, president of the six man school board, said, "The superintendent spoke for us."

Meadows, referring to the stand taken by the voters, said, "I think if the courts force integration there will be a complete boycott like at McDonogh No. 19 (in New Orleans) and it will result in destruction of public education for the white people."

Under a new state law, the proposal at issue would authorize, not require, the 6-man St. Helena school board to close the four white and nine Negro public schools.

The school board promised a 3-judge federal court in New Orleans not to take any action until after a May 5 hearing on the question whether Louisiana's school closure law is constitutional.

Navy Forces Building Up In Caribbean

United Press International

The Cuban government radio station Progreso said Saturday the United States was building up its naval forces in the Caribbean and warned that intercontinental rockets of the Soviet Union were even more powerful than the fleet.

The broadcast followed an earlier one which hinted the Fidel Castro government would show no mercy toward the 500 Cubans claimed captured in the ill-fated invasion of Monday. It paraded many of them before television cameras in an hours-long television broadcast.

WARNING MOVE

Cuban observers had reported increased U. S. Navy maneuvers in the Caribbean and said it undoubtedly was a warning to Castro not to let his enthusiasm induce him to attack the big U.S. naval base at Guantanamo on the eastern tip of Cuba.

Castro firing squads executed many Cubans during the week and Saturday's broadcast by Havana radio hinted that the same fate might befall those captured at Pig's Bay. It warned that the same fate would be dealt to any U.S. Marines if they invaded Cuba.

The big U. S. aircraft carrier Randolph arrived in Guantanamo Saturday with 3,000 Marines and 85 to 100 modern jet planes. Three other aircraft carriers, the Boxer, the Shangri-La and the Independence were reported in the area with scores of destroyers and other vessels.

Rusk Says Cease Fire Due Soon

WASHINGTON (AP) — Secretary of State Dean Rusk said Saturday night he expects a cease-fire to be announced for Laos within the next 24 to 48 hours. He pledged the United States will try to establish a neutral, independent Laos through negotiation.

Addressing the American Society of Newspaper Editors, Rusk gave American confirmation that the long-sought cease-fire for the troubled Southeast Asian country is now in sight just around the corner.

British officials in London reported early Saturday that Britain and the Soviet Union have settled all the political terms of an agreement for a truce in Laos this week.

Informants in London said a joint appeal by Britain and the Soviet Union will be made to Laotians to lay down their arms within 24 to 48 hours.

Rusk cautioned, however, that the international conference slated to follow on Laos' future will involve tough bargaining with the Reds.

Small Planes Brush In Air, Two Are Killed

AMARILLO, Tex. (UPI)—Two small airplanes brushed together in the air over Tradewinds Airport in this Texas panhandle city Saturday, killing two occupants of one plane when its tail section was ripped away and the aircraft crashed.

The second plane landed safely and its pilot, Chuck Kimball of Amarillo, a mechanic at the airport and a student pilot, escaped injury.

The dead were identified as Richard C. Wilson, 33, of Eureka Springs, Ark., and Larry M. Gulrick, 25, of Mendotta, Ill.

Bob Soler, vice president of Tradewinds Airport Corp., said Kimball was flying a Cessna 170 when the other plane, a Cessna 172, diving to get down to the traffic pattern, struck the 170 and rolled its wheels over the top of the plane.

The propeller on Kimball's plane tore the tail section off the plane carrying the two men and it crashed about one-half mile west of the airport.

BRITTLE-BONED BABY

Parents Are Given New Ray Of Hope

LITTLE ROCK, Ark. (AP) — Little Peter Lollar will never be a normal boy. But a deluge of human kindness has given his parents new hope for their brittle-boned baby.

"I've never seen so much love from so many people for a little baby they have never seen," said Mrs. Orin B. Lollar. "I'm just overwhelmed. A mail truck has had to bring the letters the last two days."

Peter suffers from a rare bone disease called osteogenesis imperfecta. His bones crack at the least pressure. He cannot cry. He cannot cough. He cannot be picked up.

An Associated Press story and picture of Peter and his mother last Sunday started the mail and telephone calls. With them came hope that an operation might permit Peter, now 15 months old, to sit up alone and feed himself. He will never walk, though.

Thomas McCluskey of Hopesdale, Ohio, called to tell of the successful operation on his 2-year-old son with the same disease. Shriners hospitals in San Francisco and Chicago perform the needed surgery.

One man sent $10 for the Lollars or for use in starting a foundation to study the crippling disease.

"I don't feel exactly right about the money coming into it," Mrs. Lollar said. "We never meant for it to be a fund drive — we just wanted to learn if there was anything that would help Peter."

The Lollars still don't know if the operation—in which steel pins are placed in bone marrow—would help Peter. But they're going to find out.

After the meeting, Eisenhower called for all Americans to support Kennedy in the tense international situation.

WIDE ACTIVITY

The one hour and 25 minute meeting took place amid crackling activity on widely scattered fronts relating to the Cuban crisis.

Kennedy said he had invited Eisenhower to the luncheon meeting "in order to bring him up to date on recent events and also to get the benefits of his thoughts and experience."

The briefing apparently included a report on a message in which Soviet Premier Nikita S. Khrushchev claimed he had proof the United States backed the invasion of Cuba.

Eisenhower told newsmen: "I say I am all in favor of the United States supporting the man who has to carry the responsibility for our foreign affairs."

Before he left Washington, Kennedy met with the National Security Council on the Cuban situation.

It was Kennedy's first trip as

Sen. Goldwater For Tough U.S. Cuban Action

PHOENIX, Ariz. (UPI)—Sen. Barry Goldwater, saying "the American people are getting sick and tired of being pushed around by Russia," Saturday called for U. S. military intervention in Cuba if all else fails.

"This country is in greater danger than it has ever been," said the Arizona senator Saturday on a speaking tour of his state. "We can overnight become a second rate world power.

"We can within a very few years come under a foreign philosophy," added Goldwater, who met with President Kennedy Friday for a briefing on the Cuban crisis.

The United States cannot permit a Communist country so close to its shores, said Goldwater, adding, "Our mistake is not being tough."

"This is not Jack Kennedy's fault," said Goldwater. "I'm opposite to him politically, but not as an American. When he's right I'm with him. I think he's right."

Goldwater said he had recommended an aerial and surface blockade of Cuba. If that failed, he said, the United States should turn to the Organization of American States for action.

"If the OAS failed," he added, "we should take action ourselves."

Asked if that meant active military intervention, Goldwater said: "Yes, but I hope it wouldn't be necessary. However, if all else failed, I would support it."

First 7-Stage Rocket Fired

WASHINGTON (AP) — The National Aeronautics and Space Agency announced Saturday it had fired what it believes is the world's first seven-stage rocket to propel an artificial meteorite out and back through the earth's atmosphere at 25,000 m.p.h.

The firing took place Friday at Wallops Island, Va. Three of the stages fired in the upward thrust of the rocket to an altitude of 175 miles, and the next four successively after it turned downward to project the meteorite—a small steel pellet—back through the atmosphere at the tremendous speed.

A spokesman said the experiment was conducted as part of a study of the physical phenomena that occur during the re-entry of high speed objects into the earth's atmosphere.

RECALLS GEN. TAYLOR

Special War Study Ordered By JFK

WASHINGTON (AP) — Retired Army Gen. Maxwell D. Taylor who in World War II made a dangerous excursion behind enemy lines as an important secret agent was assigned by President Kennedy Saturday to make a special survey of the military's guerrilla warfare organization.

Taylor retired as Army chief of staff in 1959, protesting that the Eisenhower administration was subordinating the Army's role in defense planning.

He was back in Washington Saturday, at work as an adviser and researcher and attending a meeting of the National Security Council in his new and temporary job.

Kennedy, at the outset of his administration, emphasized interest in improving and expanding the Army's special forces. These forces specialize in the art of waging war behind enemy lines in cooperation with local populations. The catastrophic failure of the landing by Cuban counterrevolutionaries — an operation designed in guerrilla warfare pattern — apparently sharpened Kennedy's interest in the problem.

The President already had authorized the Army to double the comparatively small special forces organization, bringing it up to about 3,000 men. At present, there are three such units—in Germany, Okinawa and at Ft. Bragg, N.C.

Pierre Salinger, White House news secretary, said Kennedy decided during the last few days that such a survey was needed and only Friday asked Taylor to take on the job.

Election Shows Heavy Sentiment For Segregation

GREENSBURG, La. (AP) — Voters in St. Helena Parish lined up solidly Saturday behind a move to abolish public schools rather than have them desegregrated.

Complete returns from all six wards in the rural parish of southeast Louisiana showed 1,147 votes to close the schools and only 56 against. Parish officials said only four of 111 registered Negroes voted in the election.

The parish school board called for the election in face of a federal court order that demanded desegregation in the public schools but set no date for such desegregation.

VOTE SOLIDLY

"This is the first time since I have been here (24 years) that the people have been almost solidly together, in any election," said school Supt. J. L. Meadows.

Carl Stone, president of the six-man school board, said, "The superintendent spoke for us."

Meadows, referring to the stand taken by the voters, said, "I think if the courts force integration there will be a complete boycott like at McDonogh No. 19 (in New Orleans), and it will result in destruction of public education for the white people."

Under a new state law, the proposal at issue would authorize, not require, the 6-man St. Helena school board to close the four white and nine Negro public schools.

The school board promised a 3-judge federal court in New Orleans not to take any action until after a May 5 hearing on the question whether Louisiana's school closure law is constitutional.

Rusk Says Cease Fire Due Soon

WASHINGTON (AP) — Secretary of State Dean Rusk said Saturday night he expects a cease-fire to be announced for Laos within the next 24 to 48 hours. He pledged the United States will try to establish a neutral, independent Laos through negotiation.

Addressing the American Society of Newspaper Editors, Rusk gave American confirmation that the long-sought cease-fire for the troubled Southeast Asian country is now in sight just around the corner.

British officials in London reported early Saturday that Britain and the Soviet Union have settled all the political terms of an agreement for a truce in Laos this week.

Informants in London said a joint appeal by Britain and the Soviet Union will be made to Laotians to lay down their arms within 24 to 48 hours.

Rusk cautioned, however, that the international conference slated to follow on Laos' future will involve tough bargaining with the Reds.

BRITTLE-BONED BABY

Parents Are Given New Ray Of Hope

LITTLE ROCK, Ark. (AP) — Little Peter Lollar will never be a normal boy. But a deluge of human kindness has given his parents new hope for their brittle-boned baby.

"I've never seen so much love from so many people for a little baby they have never seen, said Mrs. Oris B. Lollar. "I'm just overwhelmed. A mail truck has had to bring the letters the last two days."

Peter suffers from a rare bone disease called osteogenesis imperfecta. His bones crack at the least pressure. He cannot cry. He cannot cough. He cannot be picked up.

An Associated Press story and picture of Peter and his mother last Sunday started the mail and telephone calls. With them came hope that an operation might permit Peter, now 18 months old, to at least sit up alone and feed himself. He will never walk, though.

Thomas McCluskey of Hopesdale, Ohio, called to tell of the successful operation on his 2-year-old son with the same disease. Shriners hospitals in San Francisco and Chicago perform the needed surgery.

One man sent $10 for the Lollars or for use in starting a foundation to study the crippling disease.

"I don't feel exactly right about the money coming into it," Mrs. Lollar said. "We never meant for it to be a fund drive — we just wanted to learn if there was anything that would help Peter."

The Lollars still don't know if the operation—in which steel pins are placed in bone marrow — would help Peter. But they're going to find out.

Navy Forces Building Up In Caribbean

United Press International

The Cuban government radio station Progreso said Saturday the United States was building up its naval forces in the Caribbean and warned that intercontinental rockets of the Soviet Union were even more powerful than the fleet.

The broadcast followed an earlier one which hinted the Fidel Castro government would show no mercy toward the 500 Cubans claimed captured in the ill-fated invasion of Monday. It paraded many of them before television cameras in an hours-long television broadcast.

WARNING MOVE

Cuban observers had reported increased U. S. Navy maneuvers in the Caribbean and said it undoubtedly was a warning to Castro not to let his enthusiasm induce him to attack the big U.S. naval base at Guantanamo on the eastern tip of Cuba.

Castro firing squads executed many Cubans during the week and Saturday's broadcast by Havana radio hinted that the same fate might befall those captured at Pig's Bay. It warned that the same fate would be dealt to any U.S. Marines if they invaded Cuba.

The big U. S. aircraft carrier Randolph arrived in Guantanamo Saturday with 3,000 Marines and 85 to 100 modern jet planes. Three other aircraft carriers, the Boxer, the Shangri-La and the Independence were reported in the area with scores of destroyers and other vessels.

A Guantanamo dispatch said

Small Planes Brush In Air, Two Are Killed

AMARILLO, Tex. (UPI)—Two small airplanes brushed together in the air over Tradewinds Airport in this Texas panhandle city Saturday, killing two occupants of one plane when its tail section was ripped away and the aircraft crashed.

The second plane landed safely and its pilot, Chuck Kimball of Amarillo, a mechanic at the airport and a student pilot, escaped injury.

The dead were identified as Richard C. Wilson, 38, of Eureka Springs, Ark., and Larry M. Gulrick, 25, of Mendotta, Ill.

Bob Siler, vice president of Tradewinds Airport Corp., said Kimball was flying a Cessna 170 when the other plane, a Cessna 172, diving to get down to the traffic pattern, struck the 170 and rolled its wheels over the top of its wings.

The propeller on Kimball's plane tore the tail section off the plane carrying the two men and it crashed about one-half mile west of the airport.

An amendment to the regular federal aid bill which changed its meaning was also defeated.

The amendment asked that no federal aid be refused in the state in order to keep complete local control over schools.

A New Orleans resolution urging schools be kept open — even if integrated — failed to get to the floor for a vote. Groups opposed to the bill successfully blocked the resolution's coming up.

About three weeks earlier, a bill asking for open schools at all costs went before an executive committee of the PTA, but it was defeated.

The convention, however, passed a bill asking that driver education be required for anyone getting his license the first time.

same date, so there could be no closing this school term.

St. Helena is a rural parish of 9,162 population. It has 14 industries, mainly lumber and farming, 1,500 farms averaging 100 acres each, and a per capita income of $1,057 a year compared with the state's average of $1,451.

A white political observer told a newsman, "We're not going to integrate" — Regardless of the elections outcome or the federal order to integrate public schools with due speed.

Other white voters interviewed echoed this view. None wanted his name used.

One of the Negroes who voted, also requesting non-identity, said most people of his race believe the election will have little effect on their 9-year legal fight to end school segregation.

But, he said, he wanted to express himself at the polls because "I believe in democracy."

He indicated that by democracy he meant public education for all regardless of race. He said unequal education opportunities in the parish resulted in the legal fight.

Most Negroes didn't bother to get their names back on the rolls for the straw poll, he said, because of confusion or they felt it wouldn't matter anyway.

Sixteen re-registered after the rolls were cleared Dec. 31, as the law requires for some parishes, and 96 illiterates were kept on because of a state attorney general's ruling they were permanently registered.

Another thing that kept Negroes from registering, he said, was a pledge that must be signed under which the voter agreed to abide by state laws. He said he didn't mind signing the statement because, under his own interpretation, a state law did not stand if declared unconstitutional—such as many of Louisiana's segregation laws.

Quitman Crouch, parish registrar of voters, said, "A good many persons failed to qualify to vote, more whites than Negroes."

Most of the 1,243 Negroes who were on the rolls in December, he said, didn't attempt to re-register. Of the 3,721 voters in December, 2,478 were white, and only 1,478 got back on the books.

The parish has 55 per cent Negro population.

If schools are closed, it will leave 1,821 Negroes and 1,021 white pupils without schools.

The state has a plan to finance private segregated schools with grants to pupils.

The dispatch, received here Friday from the Portuguese West African territory, called Friar Pietro Juan, 33, of Trieste, Italy, a new martyr. It said he walked up to raiders at the village of Damba, crucifix in hand, and offered his life to stop further bloodshed.

French Military Junta In Algiers Extends Control

mander were seized and placed in house arrest.

France was shocked. The coup came just as hopes soared for peace in Algeria.

At least two bombs exploded in Paris. One killed 10 persons. Police rounded up right-wing officers and civilians known to oppose De Gaulle on Algeria. At least 14 officers were reported under arrest.

An estimated 100 persons were arrested throughout France.

De Gaulle summoned his Cabinet to emergency session and Algerian Affairs Minister Louis Joxe and Gen. Jean Olie to Algeria. Their exact whereabouts there were kept secret.

Premier Michel Debre appealed for "absolute obedience" during the state of emergency proclaimed by De Gaulle.

All army, navy and air force leaves were cancelled in the first step of a mobilization in metropolitan France, although most of France's army—500,000 men—is in Algeria.

Retired Gens. Raoul Salan, Maurice Challe, Edmond Jauhaud and Andre-Marie Zeller led the revolt. Paratroop Gen. Jacques Massu, an anti-Gaullist and hero to French paratroopers, was said to have vanished from his farm at Pau, France. Police were hunting him.

Algiers was reported calm. White settlers, known as "Colons," tooted car horns in rhythm to the anti-Gaullist symbol "Algerie Francaise." (Algeria is French.)

Many of the two million Colons—most of them of French, German, Spanish and Italian extraction—had taken part in two previous uprisings against any settlement with the Moslem rebels which might give Algeria independence and sever a 130 - year "association" as an integral province of France.

Moslem rebel leaders, in a statement issued in Cairo, urged their men to fight on.

In Tunis, Tunisia, Moslem rebel Premier Ferhat Abbas urged Moslems to "oppose the provocations of the French army."

The uprising came just as the Abbas regime and the De Gaulle government were approaching negotiations in Evian, France, on Algerian peace after almost seven years of warfare.

A seven-point "order of the day" proclaiming a state of siege throughout Algeria was issued by Challe, Zeller, Gen. Jauhaud and Gen. Salan.

Salan was believed in Madrid where he has been living in exile with Pierre La Gaillard and Joseph Oortiz, two civilian Colons who led the 1960 civilian uprising. Both have been sentenced to death by a French court.

The rebels promised the nine million Moslems in Algeria France would "never abandon them."

The coup started just before 6:30 a. m. when the first regiment of foreign legion paratroopers moved in and seized the summer palace.

Delegate General Jean Marin, ranking civilian Gaullist representative, was arrested. Supreme commander Gen. Fernand Gambiez was seized by paratroop officers who ignored his stern arguments.

French Public Works Minister Robert Buron, who arrived in Algiers Friday night, was taken prisoner.

Algiers Minister Joxe began sending urgent reports from Algeria.

Transportation, both air and sea, was cut between Algeria and Europe. Phone and telegraph lines were seized. The government postal and telegraph system demanded that employes in Algiers refuse to work for the rebels.

Oran communications lines remained open.

As many as 6,000 paratroopers were said to be involved in the uprising. The first regiment which seized the Algiers summer palace and the communications centers numbered 2,000 men, in green combat fatigue uniforms.

man task force, but will have the cooperation of all departments and agencies concerned, Salinger said.

The various missions of a special force include the incidental collections of military intelligence.

Having in mind charges that faulty intelligence figured in failure of the Cuban invasion, newsmen asked Salinger if Taylor's survey would amount to an investigation of the Central Intelligence Agency. Salinger said it would not, that Taylor's study would be government-wide.

Kennedy has ordered a broad review of the intelligence work on the Cuban affair to find out what caused the setback.

Taylor, 59, has a vast background as chief of staff, plus a long military career including World War II combat.

During his many assignments in peace and war Taylor served in various foreign countries and mastered several languages.

In September 1943, he was put ashore on the Italian coast. His assignment was to get through the German and Italian lines and confer with Italian authorities to learn whether violent German reaction might follow if an allied paratroop attempt was made to seize airfields near Rome.

Taylor returned safely and successfully from the mission. Dwight D. Eisenhower, then supreme allied commander, said later the risks that Taylor ran "were greater than I asked any other agent or emissary to undertake during the entire war."

day in every quarter of the globe."

It called Cuba a "tragic example" of a country where freedom was "mercilessly repressed."

It dismissed Khrushchev's charges as "the Communist distortion of the basic concepts of the rights of man."

Khrushchev warned in the note to Kennedy that an American attack on Cuba might be followed by a Russian attack on U. S. bases abroad which "menace the security of the Soviet Union."

The Soviet leader declared it had been proven "incontrovertibly that the United States was responsible for the abortive invasion of Cuba.

"You are adopting a very danerous path," Khrushchev told Kennedy in the note handed to U. S. Moscow Charge D'affaires E. L. Freers. "Ponder that!"

REPLY TO STERN NOTE

Khrushchev's note replied to a sternly worded message from President Kennedy last Tuesday in which the U. S. leader warned Russia the United States would tolerate no outside military intervention in Cuba.

The Soviet Premier, in the note carried by the official Tass news agency, demanded that the United Nations act to halt what he called American "gangsterism" in Cuba.

State P-TA Ends Annual 3-Day Meet

LAFAYETTE, La. (AP) — Delegates to the Louisiana Parent-Teachers Association convention Saturday defeated two resolutions involving federal aid to schools and dropped discussion of an open school bill.

The 38th annual convention closed out its three-day meeting with the installation of officers for three expired terms.

Mrs. C. M. Robards, New Orleans, was elected second vice president and Dr. William M. Smith, Lake Charles, fifth vice president. Both were unopposed.

Mrs. William T. Myrick, president, Baton Rouge, has another year before her term expires.

Mrs. Thomas Spain, New Orleans, won the race for secretary in the only election runoff.

Sixteen re-registered after the rolls were cleared Dec. 31, as the law requires for some parishes, and 96 illiterates were kept on because of a state attorney general's ruling they were permanently registered.

Another thing that kept Negroes from registering, he said, was a pledge that must be signed under which the voter agreed to abide by state laws. He said he didn't mind signing the statement because, under his own interpretation, a state law did not stand if declared unconstitutional—such as many of Louisiana's segregation laws.

Quitman Crouch, parish registrar of voters, said, "A good many persons failed to qualify to vote, more whites than Negroes."

Most of the 1,243 Negroes who were on the rolls in December, he said, didn't attempt to reregister. Of the 3,721 voters in December, 2,478 were white, and only 1,478 got back on the books.

The parish has 55 per cent Negro population.

If schools are closed, it will leave 1,821 Negroes and 1,021 white pupils without schools.

The state has a plan to finance private segregated schools with grants to pupils.

EICHMANN TRIAL

First Witnesses To Go On Stand

JERUSALEM (AP) — The hour nears for Adolf Eichmann to confront prosecution witnesses who knew him personally as Nazi Germany's No. 1 Jew hunter during the Hitler era.

Among the first witnesses due to take the stand after the trial resumes Monday will be Dr. Benno Cohn, who met Eichmann at a Berlin Zionist meeting in 1936 which ended in a near riot.

Cohn, 66, now a lawyer in Tel Aviv, will describe in detail that meeting, at which Eichmann is reported to have been kicked in the stomach during the disturbance.

Cohn identified Eichmann shortly after the former chief of the Gestapo's Jewish Affairs Section was brought to Israel from Argentina last year. Describing that brief meeting, Cohn says Eichmann was "submissive and well mannered compared to his attitude when we met during the Hitler era.

Another prosecution witness, Moshe Agami, will tell how he was ordered to appear before Eichmann in Vienna in 1938. Now a Tel Aviv insurance agent, Agami also identified Eichmann after he was captured.

"That was history turned full circle," Agami says. "When I called on Eichmann in Vienna I was shaking. This time it was Eichmann who shuddered."

Evidence from Cohn, Agami, Avrahan Krassik — a sole survivor of a concentration camp work crew forced to obliterate the mass graves of Jewish victims — and other witnesses is certain to convey a sharply different portrait of Eichmann than the one he paints of himself.

In recorded testimony read in the court where he is on trial for crimes against the Jewish people, Eichmann insists he only followed orders, had nothing to do with the killings of millions of Jews his deportation trains delivered to Nazi extermination camps and is "not anti-Semitic."

Three other major prosecution witnesses will be Yoel Brand, his wife Hansi, and Philip Freudiger. They tried to negotiate a deal, proposed by Eichmann, in which Hungarian Jews would be freed in exchange for trucks and other equipment for Hitler's armies to be supplied with the help of international Jewry.

Brand quotes Eichmann as proposing: "Blood for goods, goods for blood."

Still another witness to be summoned by prosecutor Gideon Hausner will be Leon Kapun, one of the few victims who managed to take and keep photographs of atrocities in extermination camps.

Sources Say Ike Favored Cuba Invasion

WASHINGTON (UPI)— Former President Dwight D. Eisenhower strongly recommended to President Kennedy before the inauguration that the United States allow plans for the ill-fated Cuban invasion to go ahead, authoritative sources said Saturday.

At the same time, officials trying to evaluate this country's intelligence miscalculation of Cuban military power believed that 13 or more Soviet ships were apparently in Havana Harbor unloading arms the week before the assault.

Adminstration officials, describing Eisenhower's endorsement of the assault, said they did not want to place any blame but merely to set the record straight.

Officials also said that former Vice President Richard Nixon also backed the plan and so did the joint chiefs of staff under Eisenhower.

At one point the assault was scheduled to take place last fall, but rebels could not get organized in time, they said.

Officials said U. S. intelligence badly misjudged both Castro's military power and his degree of police-state control over his people which prevented a local uprising.

They said the entire procedure of intelligence, decision making, military appraisal, and diplomatic machinery involved in the incident are under major review.

High sources made clear Kennedy has no plans to take any action against Central Intelligence Agency Director Allen Dulles and has confidence in him.

But possible reorganizations of government machinery were known to have been discussed at a National Security Council meeting here Saturday.

Officials said Eisenhower and Kennedy discussed the proposed Cuban invasion at one of their pre-inaugural meetings.

They would not discuss on what timetable Eisenhower recommended the plan—that is whether he thought the timing was right.

Church Appeals For Special Aid To Needy Area

An appeal for the 40,000 congregations of The Methodist Church in the United States to raise a minimum of $2,500,000 for emergency needs in Africa was issued recently by the Council of Bishops.

The appeal, signed on behalf of the council by its president, Bishop Gerald Kennedy of Los Angeles, calls for a special offering in every church on Sunday, April 30. The offering is to answer urgent needs for food, medicine, leadership and education in Africa.

"When things are at their worst," the message says, "the church be at its best. We are called upon to be a part of the healing in the midst of much sickness. Where there is rioting, bloodshed and bitterness, ours is the high task of being present to restore good will, minister to the suffering, and witness to God's love."

In a letter to every Methodist pastor in this state, Bishop Aubrey G. Walton, bishop of the Louisiana area, said "No emergency that we have brought to the attention of the church has been more serious or more worthy of sacrificial response."

Chances Dim For Success Of Rebellion

By PHIL NEWSOM
UPI Foreign News Analyst

The revolt of the French generals in Algiers is an act of desperation with only the remotest chance of sucess.

For it is a rebellion not only against Gen. Charels de Gaulle's plan for an independent Algeria, it also is a revolt against De Gaulle himself and to succeed it must topple De Gaulle.

But for De Gaulle, it also is a forceful reminder that the success of his plan for Algeria depends upon the Army.

The indications are today that the bulk of the French armed forces remain loyal to him.

This correspondent witnessed the Algerian referendum last January in which more than 60 per cent of the Algerian voters cast their ballot in favor of De Gaulle's plan for Algerian self-determination.

It was carried out under the protective guns of some of the same foreign legion paratroopers who today support the rebel generals.

Along the roadsides, the burned out hulks of automobiles bore silent witness to the violence which has torn Algeria for more than six years and which, in the vent of success for the rebel generals, would be renewed with even greater intensity.

Two elements, both extreme right wing, oppose De Gaulle's plans.

One element is composed of veteran senior officers who lived through the defeats of France in World War II, and later at Dien Bien Phu in Indochina.

To them, the surrender of Algeria only represents another defeat. Their leader is Gen. Raoul Salan, former high commander in Algeria, who also is reported heading the present uprising.

The other element is composed of hard-core right wing civilians whose chief spokesman in France is Jacques Soustelle, like Salan another former ardent supporter of De Gaulle.

Aligned with Salan and Soustelle are the Algerian "Colons," the European settlers in Algeria who are determined that "Algeria is French."

These were the elements who clashed with forces loyal to De Gaulle last December.

They were quickly crushed, as it may be expected the present uprising will be crushed.

U.S. Deplores French Military Coup In Algiers

WASHINGTON (AP) — The United States deplored the military coup in Algiers Saturday and voiced hope that it would not impede efforts toward a peaceful solution of the Algerian question.

Control of Algiers was wrested from France in a bloodless uprising by a junta of retired, embittered generals backed by an elite unit of the French Foreign Legion.

State Department press officer Lincoln White issued the U.S. statement saying: "We deplore this development and hope that it will not retard efforts toward a peaceful solution of the Algerian problem."

White said the State Department had received no information on whether the right-wing revolt had spread outside Algiers.

He said little news beyond what appears in press dispatches has reached the U.S. government here because contact between the U.S. consulate general in Algiers and the U.S. Embassy in Paris was cut off.

"The department is making every effort to establish contact with the American consulate general and assure the welfare of American citizens in Algeria," White said.

The "Algerian problem" referred to in the U.S. statement was the moves for peaceful settlement of the 6½ year Arab nationalist rebellion.

"Don't push any buttons or [illegible] anything or I'll hurt you," the bandit threatened. He then ordered Dupree to walk with him to the back door. Here he almost broke down and offered the manager his hand.

He then ordered Dupree into the men's restroom and told him to wait five minutes or "I'll hurt you."

Dupree said the bandit left by the back door and after waiting for several more minutes he came out and called Monroe police.

He said the robber had come from the western side of the office as though coming across the old traffic bridge. Dupree said he didn't know which way he went when he left.

Dupree makes a deposit each night at midnight and said he would have an official count when the office closed at midnight. He said that the night patrolman had come in only 20 minutes earlier.

This is the second time to Dupree's knowledge that the local office has been robbed. He said that many years ago it was robbed through an inside job.

Dupree has managed the night shift for the past six years. He said the general manager, W. C. Ray, was out of town.

Monroe police were immediately on the job searching for the culprit.

Ike Calls For All To Support JFK

President to this mountain retreat which served as the site for a meeting between Khrushchev and Eisenhower in 1959.

As a backdrop for the meeting there were these other developments relating to Cuba:

—The son of the leader of Cuban exiles told a Cuban radio and television audience that the invasion of the Bay of Pigs was a complete failure and none of the invaders could have escaped into the Escambray Mountains.

—Sen. John J. Sparkman, D-Ala., second-ranking Democrat on the Senate Foreign Relations Committee, said the United States will send troops to Cuba only if Russia "actually intervenes with manpower, and arms, and supplies."

Kennedy received Khrushchev's bitterly-worded message shortly before he boarded a helicopter on the south White House lawn to fly to Camp David. In the message, the Soviet leader said "Mr. President, you are adopting a very dangerous path. Ponder that."

The message arrived at the White House just at the end of the National Security Council meeting. Press Secretary Pierre Salinger said Kennedy took the message with him on the 35-minute helicopter flight to the Eisenhower meeting.

Salinger said it was likely that the President would meet personally next week with New York Gov. Nelson Rockefeller, a leader of the liberal wing of the Republican Party. He said the meeting would be held before Kennedy goes to New York late next week to speak to the American Newspaper Publishers Association.

Navy Forces Building Up In Caribbean

eight destroyers were on duty at the big base on the eastern end of Cuba including the Farragut which is equipped with guided missiles. Three destroyer escorts were reported with them — The Roberts, the R. O. Hale and the Peterson.

There was no confirmation or denial from U.S. Navy sources. one spokesman said the 3,000 Marines landing in Guantanamo Bay would relieve the same number already there. There was no comment on the Independence or Boxer. A spokesman said the Shangri-La was en route from the Mediterranean to the east coast of the United States.

A report from Key West that a destroyer force had left there for Guantanamo brought the response the ships were on a "routine" training exercise. The unconfirmed reports said they were joining the force of destroyers and other vessels still at sea off the big base.

Observers said the buildup appeared to be a plain warning to Castro to keep his hands off the Guantanamo base. Some exile sources said an attack was possible on grounds Guantanamo might be giving asylum to remnants of the invasion force or to other anti-Castro Cubans fleeing there from the mountains.

Castro has set up artillery and roadblocks a few miles from the base for the avowed purpose of cutting off retreat to Guantanamo of fleeing rebels.

Coded radio messages were heard throughout the day from a secret radio station in the caribbean hinting that a new invasion might be underway and asking the anti-Castro forces in Cuba to have courage—"Don't give up."

But Cuban exile sources said the invasion was over, that the flames of freedom sparked briefly but was extinguished when the invading force of about 1,000 men was crushed by superior weight of Communist tanks and planes supplied to the Castro forces.

They said any invasion would not be tipped off by such a warning and that the message undoubtedly was meant to cheer up the anti-Castro Cubans and let them know that help would be coming—sometime. The messages themselves were thought to be intercepted by Castro's forces.

Bandit Robs City Western Union Office

or five days. The bandit said, "But, I'm going to eat tonight."

"Don't push any buttons or touch anything or I'll hurt you," the bandit threatened. He then ordered Dupree to walk with him to the back door. Here he almost broke down and offered the manager his hand.

He then ordered Dupree into the men's restroom and told him to wait five minutes or "I'll hurt you."

Dupree said the bandit left by the back door and after waiting for two or three minutes he came out and called Monroe police.

He said the robber had come from the western side of the office as though coming across the old traffic bridge. Dupree said he didn't know which way he went when he left.

Dupree makes a deposit each night at midnight and said he would have an official count when the office closed at midnight. He said that the night patrolman had come by only 20 minutes earlier.

This is the second time to Dupree's knowledge that the local office has been robbed. He said that many years ago it was robbed through an inside job.

Dupree has managed the night shift for the past six years. He said the general manager, W. C. Blair, was out of town.

Monroe police were immediately on the job searching for the culprit.

100 Years Ago Today

Pelican Grays Went To War

By MARY ANNE CORPIN
World Staff Writer

One hundred years ago today, the Pelican Grays, 111 — men strong, left Ouachita Parish to fight for the Confederacy.

Few came back. "From the Yorktown Peninsula to Gettysburg and back to Appomatox," the Grays were cut down by bullets or died in hospitals.

Aylmer Leake Slack, a 20-year old private in the Grays, rose from the ranks to lieutenant, survived the battles — a pocket Bible stopped a bullet and saved his life — and returned to serve as parish judge.

He commanded the now famous "Widow Blakely" gun during the siege of Vicksburg.

Slack's son, Torbert Slack of Lake Charles, has made available extensive information from the Civil War soldier's letters, scrapbook, a newspaper article which he wrote 50 years ago, and a picture of proud veterans who lived to see the first years of the 20th Century.

April 23, 1861, Slack said farewell to his family in their home, "Riverside," at Trenton in the northern part of what is now West Monroe.

Mist was rising off the Ouachita River, early Monday morning when S. L. Slack rowed his son across the river on a skiff, to become part of the first military company from this parish to volunteer for service.

"I shall never forget the crowd which assembled to see the company marshalled in the Court House square, nor the scenes of parting and the choking sighs which ne'er might be repeated as the boys took leave of their loved ones," wrote Slack.

It was to be a holiday excursion, and they would return as victors in a few months. "Including the recruits who joined afterwards, I can count the survivors on the fingers of one hand," said Slack.

At New Orleans, the Grays became flag company of the Second Louisiana Volunteer Infantry. On June 6, 1861, they were mustered into service of the Confederate States.

They were ordered to the Virginia Peninsula.

Gen. George McClellan's federal forces advanced, the Confederates fell back to Richmond, state regiments were formed into brigades and Pvt. Slack saw continuous active service.

He was in the battles of Savage Station and Malvern Hill. The federals were driven back. Then came Cedar Run, Second Manassas, Chantilly, capture of Manassas Junction and the heavy Confederate losses at the battle of Sharpsburg.

During the second battle of Manassas, a minnie ball struck his pocket Bible in his left upper pocket on August 29, 1862. The Bible saved his life, although he was wounded.

Promoted to second lieutenant in April, 1863, he was assigned to Company H, First Louisiana Heavy Artillary, then stationed at Vicksburg.

He arrived for the Siege of Vicksburg.

He didn't know it, but his cousin Col. James R. Slack of the Second Indiana Regiment was part of the federal forces under Hovey's command besieging the River city.

Slack commanded the Blakely gun, called the Widow because it was the only one of its kind at Vicksburg.

When the city fell on July 4, 1863, the gun was captured and taken to the Trophy line at West Point, where it was displayed until this year when it was brought back to Vicksburg and dedicated in ceremonies at Louisiana Circle.

Slack was captured, then paroled and exchanged for Yankee prisoners at Enterprise, Miss.

He re-entered the Confederate Army, was ordered to Mobile, Ala.

By strange coincidence, Col. Slack was sent to Mobile on the Northern side.

The Southern Lieutenant learned this when he heard of the Northern Colonel's promotion to General.

Lt. Slack fought again, at Harrisburg in north Mississippi, then was captured for the final time at Meridian.

"He and another cousin went back to Mobile to see Gen. Slack," reveals Torbert Slack.

"The General got up before his staff and told them that there were two of his Rebel cousins and he wanted them treated with respect".

"My father and the cousin stayed for a week in Gen. Slack's headquarters. He asked my father why he didn't come to see him at Vicksburg. My father answered that he didn't know he was there until after the siege," Torbert Slack added.

Two letters written later to Lt. Slack from the Yankee still are in Torbert Slack's possession.

"I have a brother named James R. Slack after this northern general. That shows you that the Civil War was between brothers, uncles and cousins," he points out.

A. L. Slack returned to Riverside in 1865, studied law, and was elected District Clerk of Court at Monroe in 1867.

Reconstruction swept the state like a plague, and he was forced out of office by the reconstruction constitution of 1868.

The same year he was admitted to the bar, then was appointed district attorney pro tem —but was again forced out by the same vengeful constitution.

At the fall of reconstruction in 1876, Slack was elected parish judge.

Re-elected for two years in 1878, he resigned in 1879 and moved to Delta in Madison parish to practice law.

From his home, he was a stone's throw from Grant's Canal — the same canal he had fired shells into during the siege of Vicksburg.

From 1887 until his death in 1911, Slack practiced law in Tallulah. He was Madison Parish Police Jury secretary for almost 30 years.

"I have convinced myself," wrote Slack on the 50th anniversary of the Pelican Grays, April 23, 1911, "that the Civil War was a necessity which nothing but the hand of Omnipotence could have stayed."

"It takes blood — even fraternal blood — to heal national differences and to cement divided theories of government."

100 Years Ago Today

Pelican Grays Went To War

By MARY ANNE CORPIN
World Staff Writer

One hundred years ago today, the Pelican Grays, 111 — men strong, left Ouachita Parish to fight for the Confederacy.

Few came back. "From the Yorktown Peninsula to Gettysburg and back to Appomatox," the Grays were cut down by bullets or died in hospitals.

Aylmer Leake Slack, a 20 - year -old private in the Grays, rose from the ranks to lieutenant, survived the battles — a pocket Bible stopped a bullet and saved his life — and returned to serve as parish judge.

He commanded the now famous "Widow Blakely" gun during the siege of Vicksburg.

Slack's son, Torbert Slack of Lake Charles, has made available extensive information from the Civil War soldier's letters, scrapbook, a newspaper article which he wrote 50 years ago, and a picture of proud veterans who lived to see the first years of the 20th Century.

April 23, 1861, Slack said farewell to his family in their home, "Riverside," at Trenton in the northern part of what is now West Monroe.

Mist was rising off the Ouachita River, early Monday morning when S. L. Slack rowed his son across the river on a skiff, to become part of the first military company from this parish to volunteer for service.

"I shall never forget the crowd which assembled to see the company marshalled in the Court House square, nor the scenes of parting and the choking sighs which ne'er might be repeated as the boys took leave of their loved ones," wrote Slack.

It was to be a holiday excursion, and they would return as victors in a few months. "Including the recruits who joined afterwards, I can count the survivors on the fingers of one hand," said Slack.

At New Orleans, the Grays became flag company of the Second Louisiana Volunteer Infantry. On June 6, 1861, they were mustered into service of the Confederate States.

They were ordered to the Virginia Peninsula.

Gen. George McClellan's federal forces advanced, the Confederates fell back to Richmond, state regiments were formed into brigades and Pvt. Slack saw continuous active service.

He was in the battles of Savage Station and Malvern Hill. The federals were driven back. Then came Cedar Run, Second Manassas, Chantilly, capture of Manassas Junction and the heavy Confederate losses at the battle of Sharpsburg.

During the second battle of Manassas, a minnie ball struck his pocket Bible in his left upper pocket on August 29, 1862. The Bible saved his life, although he was wounded.

Promoted to second lieutenant in April, 1863, he was assigned to Company H, First Louisiana Heavy Artillary, then stationed at Vicksburg.

He arrived for the Siege of Vicksburg.

He didn't know it, but his cousin Col. James R. Slack of the Second Indiana Regiment was part of the federal forces under Hovey's command besieging the River city.

Slack commanded the Blakely gun, called the Widow because it was the only one of its kind at Vicksburg.

When the city fell on July 4, 1863, the gun was captured and taken to the Trophy line at West Point, where it was displayed until this year when it was brought back to Vicksburg and dedicated in ceremonies at Louisiana Circle.

Slack was captured, then parolled and exchanged for Yankee prisoners at Enterprise, Miss.

He re-entered the Confederate Army, was ordered to Mobile, Ala.

By strange coincidence, Col. Slack was sent to Mobile on the Northern side.

The Southern Lieutenant learned this when he heard of the Northern Colonel's promotion to General.

Lt. Slack fought again, at Harrisburg in north Mississippi, then was captured for the final time at Meridian.

"He and another cousin went back to Mobile to see Gen. Slack," reveals Torbert Slack.

"The General got up before his staff and told them that 'here were two of his Rebel cousins and he wanted them treated with respect'.

"My father and the cousin stayed for a week in Gen. Slack's headquarters. He asked my father why he didn't come to see him at Vicksburg. My father answered that he didn't know he was there until after the siege," Torbert Slack added.

Two letters written later to Lt. Slack from the Yankee still are in Torbert Slack's possession.

"I have a brother named James R. Slack after this northern general. That shows you that the Civil War was between brothers, uncles and cousins," he points out.

A. L. Slack returned to Riverside in 1865, studied law, and was elected District Clerk of Court at Monroe in 1867.

Reconstruction swept the state like a plague, and he was forced out of office by the reconstruction constitution of 1868.

The same year he was admitted to the bar, then was appointed district attorney pro tem —but was again forced out by the same vengeful constitution.

At the fall of reconstruction in 1876, Slack was elected parish judge.

Re-elected for two years in 1878, he resigned in 1879 and moved to Delta in Madison parish to practice law.

From his home, he was a stone's throw from Grant's Canal — the same canal he had fired shells into during the siege of Vicksburg.

From 1887 until his death in 1914, Slack practiced law in Tallulah. He was Madison Parish Police Jury secretary for almost 30 years.

"I have convinced myself," wrote Slack on the 50th anniversity of the Pelican Grays, April 23, 1911, "that the Civil War was a necessity which nothing but the hand of Omnipotence could have stayed."

"It takes blood — even fratricidal blood — to heal national differences and to cement divided theories of government."

Excitement, Gloom Sweep Over Miami

MIAMI, Fla. (AP) —A hurricane of a different kind swept Miami last week. It was a storm of excitement over the Cuban situation.

Rumors, reports, counter reports, conjecture and opinion drenched the city like a cloudburst.

There was almost no other topic of conversation after the first word that anti-Castro forces had gone into Cuba.

Cuba is close to Miamians both geographically and sentimentally. Their ties with the Cuban people have grown stronger and warmer with each passing year.

They had become far more than just "good neighbors." It was more like being members of the same family.

The visiting in each other's "homes" grew to great proportions. They hopped back and forth in large numbers daily.

Then there came mounting dis[illegible] as the Castro regime began [illegible] anti-American campaign while [illegible] measures on thousands of Cubans themselves.

[illegible] other Cubans fled to American shores, they were heartily welcomed and Florida has done its best to care for them.

There has been almost solid backing here for the exiles' plans to try to wrest their country back from the hands of Castro.

When the [illegible] move against Cuba was launched last week, the Miamians were just about as excited as the Cubans.

Then they were plunged into gloom just as great when it began to appear that all was not well with the invaders.

Deep disappointment enshrouded the city. Many people developed a desperate feeling that it now might take years — and a great amount of bloodshed — to rid Cuba of Castro.

Then came President Kennedy's statement on the situation. It lifted spirits here immensely. But it still didn't go far enough to please all.

Declared one outspoken cabbie, "Hell, we ought to take 50,000 U.S. Marines, give them breakfast here in Miami and let them get their lunch in Havana."

U.S. Space Program To Be Reviewed

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The National Space Council has been ordered to submit to rapid fire review of the nation's space program to President Kennedy next week, it was learned Saturday.

Sources close to the council told United Press International the review, ordered by the President to study steps for overtaking Russia in the space race, is to be completed "sometime next week."

CHANGE LIKELY

One source also said the council's staff was considering "some really big" policy changes in both the organization and budget of the National Aeronautics and Space Administration (NASA).

Meantime, NASA chief James E. Webb said work on the Saturn, America's biggest rocket, was proceeding on an "urgent" basis without limitations on overtime payments to scientists and technicians.

Webb said delivery of the high impulse engines to be used in upper stages of the Saturn, being built by Pratt & Whitney, was a key factor in the timetable. The company has had both its shop and test-stand employes on a three shift, round-the-clock basis, he added.

Workers at the Marshall Space Flight Center at Huntsville, Ala., assigned to the Saturn project have averaged between 44 and 48 hours each week, Webb said. In some critical areas, the work week has climbed to 60 hours, he added.

Friday, Kennedy indicated at his news conference that a nuclear rocket program might enable American astronauts to be first on Venus and Mars even though the Russians beat them to the moon.

Tears Of Youth Save Pet Steer From Slaughter

SENATOBIA, Miss. (AP) — Boo Boo the steer is back in clover, saved from the slaughterhouse by the tears of his [illegible]-year-old master.

It all started two weeks ago when the 900-pound steer won a grand prize at a junior livestock show in Memphis, Tenn., and was sold for $462 to National Food Stores.

But his master, Gary Hedrick of Senatobia, couldn't face the prospect of Boo Boo being slaughtered and let his feelings be known through tears as he held his pet Hereford's halter. A poignant picture of Gary and Boo Boo was transmitted nationally by the Associated Press.

Then a deluge of letters came, urging mercy for Boo Boo. National Food Stores returned the steer to Gary. The boy and his father, Roscoe Hedrick, manager of the Circle M Ranch, trucked Boo Boo home to pasture Friday.

Hearing Slated On Improvement Here Tuesday

BATON ROUGE (Special) — The Louisiana Department of Highways will conduct a public hearing to discuss the proposed construction of the Missouri Pacific Railroad grade separation and approaches in the Ouachita Parish courthouse at 10:30 a.m. Tuesday.

Highway Director Ray W. Burgess said that individuals and groups will be given an opportunity to express their views on the proposed highway improvement project.

Burgess said that the proposed improvement will begin on Second Street at the junction with Ouachita Avenue and extend southerly along Second Street under the Missouri Pacific Railroad track to the junction with Apple Street.

He said there will be a connection beginning at the junction with Third Street and Ouachita Avenue and extending southerly along new location joining Second Street at the junction with Texas Avenue. This connection will be one-way north.

According to the highway director the proposed improvement will consist of a four - lane divided highway between Texas Avenue and Orange Avenue. The section between Orange Avenue and Apple Avenue will converge to a two-lane highway. The connection between Ouachita Avenue and Second Street between these streets will be two lanes.

Burgess said that interested citizens from the affected areas will be given an opportunity to be heard particularly with reference to the economic effect of the location.

Burgess said that conducting the hearing for the department of highways will be W. T. Taylor Jr., assistant traffic and planning engineer and chief economist of the highway department.

Also scheduled to talk will be Highway Board Member from the Fifth District, Jimmy Howard of Ruston.

U.S. Modifies Fingerprinting Of Foreigners

WASHINGTON (AP)—The United States announced Saturday that most nonimmigrant foreigners who stay in the United States more than one year no longer will have to be fingerprinted.

Regular immigrants—foreigners who come to this country to live permanently—still will have to be fingerprinted, U.S. officials said.

And tourists will be able to continue to come in the United States without fingerprinting.

The nonimmigrants in the United States for more than one year are mainly foreign newsmen, traders and investors.

Aliens who come from countries where only criminals are fingerprinted tend to resent the fingerprinting that has been required in this country, although Americans are normally fingerprinted for many noncriminal reasons.

The new change will not apply to persons from 14 foreign countries where Americans are required to be fingerprinted. These countries are Bolivia, Brazil, Chile, Colombia, Ethiopia, Hong Kong, Malaya, Monaco, Nicaragua, Peru, Philippines, Portugal, Spain and Venezuela.

Infant Is Shot Accidentally

LAFAYETTE, La. (AP)—Four-month-old Carol Taylor was accidentally wounded in the head seriously Saturday by his 4-year-old brother Michael.

Doctors said the .22 caliber bullet went between his eyes, around the skull and lodged in his neck.

Police said Michael found the pistol in a drawer and accidentally fired it while Carol lay in his bed.

The parents are Mr. and Mrs. Aaron Taylor Jr.

Senator Says State Rights Are Essential

JACKSON, Miss. (UPI) — The South is "perfectly willing to co-exist with the North" but the North seeks to "remake others in its own image," Sen. Strom Thurmond, D-S. C. said Saturday.

The North "has been trying to do this to the South since around 1820 — without much success," Thurmond said, "but, despite this lack of success, it has caused much friction and misery and bloodshed."

Thurmond told a citizens' council banquet, in commemoration of the inaugural of Confederate President Jefferson Davis, that "I shall not presume to judge" which culture is better.

"I only make the point that the two cultures are different," he said, "that great differences do exist. America is a land of great differences of almost frightening diversity.

"In order for us to live together peacefully, we must respect these differences—which means that we must recognize not only the existence of these differences but also their right to exist.

"That is why it is so vitally important to the welfare of our country and our people that we return to the historic principle of states' rights on which our nation was founded. I regret to say that we in the United States have drifted very far from this principle in recent years.

"A new and dangerous trend seems to be in the ascendancy. Instead of preserving our tested constitutional system whereby the great body of decisions in the domestic field were made at the state level...the idea today seems to be to consolidate the entire decision-making process in Washington and to treat the entire country as though it were a single, monolithic, standardized, unvarying whole."

"States' rights is not simply an outworn political tradition," Thurmond said. "States' rights is an enduring and valid principle. It is the fundamental human right of local self-government."

Church Report Raps Council

SHREVEPORT, La. (AP) — A vestry committee of St. Mark's Episcopal Church Saturday termed the National Council of Churches (NCC) "an aid to the communist conspiracy" and urged that the Protestant Episcopal Church withdraw from the group.

The 12,000-word report of the six-man committee, which included the church's pastor, the Rev. Dr. Lawrence Plumley, cited the NCC as "a harmful and dangerous institution."

The report said it did not believe the NCC itself is communistic in nature, but indicated some of its top officials—including past presidents—have been involved in numerous communistic front or pro-communist efforts.

OAS Action Is Urged In Cuban Crisis

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Senate Democratic leader Mike Mansfield said Saturday that members of the Organization of American States should immediately use their authority to deal with the Cuban crisis. Neither they nor we can afford to take a holiday from history," he said.

The Montana Democrat, a member of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee, also said "It is the duty and the responsibility of the American people at this time to keep our shirts on in our reaction to the Cuban crisis."

Mansfield said in an interview that calmness is needed because "the mistakes in the Cuban situation extend far beyond the confines of that unhappy island and the result of the present difficulty may well influence the future of the entire hemisphere and most particularly the future of Latin America as a whole."

In urging early OAS action, Mansfield said "The countries comprising that organization cannot escape their responsibility because their future, far more than ours, is at stake" in the Cuban crisis.

Meanwhile, Sen. Alexander Wiley, R-Wis., top GOP member of the foreign relations committee, said failure of the Cuban revolt against Fidel Castro has enabled the Communists to score another propaganda victory which showed that "The Communist propaganda machine is still outselling the U. S. information-spreading program."

Wiley said in a statement that the United States and the free world "must awaken to the need for a greater non-military counter-offensive against the Communist world conspiracy."

He said that "unless we are willing to commit the manpower and the resources necessary to stopping the Communists now, we will ultimately find ourselves encircled by Red missiles zeroed in on the heart of America."

The comments reflected growing congressional concern over failure of the Cuban invasion. But congressional leaders in both parties were for the most part withholding critical comment.

IN U.S. CAPITAL

Sen. Byrd Vainly Looks For Trouble

WASHINGTON (UPI)—A senator and the chief of police prowled the nation's capital until the early hours Saturday, looking for trouble. They didn't find much, but found themselves under the bright lights of the police lineup anyway.

Sen. Robert C. Byrd, D-W. Va. and Washington Police Chief Robert Murray put part of the blame on the company they were keeping.

It started when Byrd decided he wanted a first hand look at the police force handling the usual weekend crime wave.

Murray is seeking congressional approval of 100 more men to help combat the District of Columbia's rising crime rate. Byrd is the new chairman of the House appropriations subcommittee which oversees the district's finances.

Byrd said he felt a responsibility to make sure that the nation's capital was a city where residents and visitors can "walk with safety, day and night." He told newsmen he wanted to "observe with my own eyes and ears" the capital's police in action.

He found little action.

Murray had the satisfaction of hearing the senator agree that Washington's 2,400 - man police force needs another 100 men.

Trailed by three police cars loaded with reporters and photographers, Byrd and the chief toured the parts of town tourist guides forget to mention.

Only a handful of purse snatchings and other minor crimes were reported during the four - hour cruise. The jail population was below average.

The police chief and the senator made the rounds of several precinct headquarters.

The senator was then taken to main police headquarters where reporters put Byrd and Murray under the bright lights of the lineup. After Byrd stepped forward and gave his name, one police officer jested: "O.K., hold him for the sex squad."

First Marine Brigade Home

HONOLULU (AP) — Members of the 6,000-man Hawaii-based 1st Marine Brigade began returning home Saturday, the Navy said, after nearly a month of military silence on their whereabouts in the western Pacific.

One group of 1,350 Marines will leave Monday for maneuvers in California.

The brigade's whereabouts had been secret since it left Hawaii March 22 for training in California, then was diverted to the western Pacific after the Laos situation worsened.

VOTE CONGO FUNDS

Session Of U.N. Assembly Ends

UNITED NATIONS, N.Y. (AP) — The general assembly finished its record, stop-and-go 15th annual session at 6:02 a.m. Saturday after a post-midnight plea for Cuban-American peace and last-minute action to save the U.N. Congo operation from bankruptcy.

The 99-nation assembly set aside $100 million to run the U.N. force and attendant civilian mission in the Congo for the first 10 months of 1961 — $27 million more than the regular U.N. budget for the whole year.

Latin-American countries first voted with the Soviet bloc to defeat a resolution for that purpose. But later, after the proposal had been changed to cut their share of the cost, they helped put it over on a 54-15 vote, with 23 abstentions. The United States has promised to pay $47.5 million of the total.

Earlier, the assembly adopted a U.S.-backed Latin-American resolution that exhorted all U.N. members "to take such peaceful action as is open to them to remove existing tension" between Cuba and the United States.

It gave a whopping 59-13 vote to the seven-nation proposal, with Cuba and the Soviet bloc almost alone in opposition and 24 countries abstaining.

But, before that, it reversed its Political Committee and knocked out a key provision that asked U.N. members which belong to the Organization of American States to help settle the trouble between Cuba and the United States.

Cuban Foreign Minister Raul Roa charged the OAS was a U.S. puppet and he fought against the resolution even though it said continuation of the American-Cuban situation could endanger world peace.

Roa backed a Mexican proposal that was defeated 41-35, with 20 abstentions.

That was away short of the necessary two-thirds majority. But it meant that more than two-fifths of the U.N.'s 99 members were voting for a resolution that implied some credence in Cuba's charges of U.S. involvement in last Monday's Cuban rebel landing, despite U.S. denials of such involvement.

The Mexican resolution appealed to all countries to ensure that their territories and resources are not used to promote a civil war in Cuba. It urged them to end any activity that might result in further bloodshed. Bolivia, Brazil, Chile, Ecuador, Ireland and Tunisia were among those that joined Cuba, Asian-African neutralists and the Soviet bloc in voting for it.

Frederick H. Boland of Ireland, president of the 15th session, pointed out before declaring it closed that it was the longest in U.N. history. It ran for 137 days — from last Sept. 20 to Dec. 21 and again, after a recess, from March 7 to April 22.

But it still could not finish its agenda, and it postponed the questions of aid to Africa, cooperation in outer space, unification of Korea, disarmament, and freedom for Hungary and Tibet to the next session starting Sept. 19.

JONESVILLE (Special) — Flooding of rivers, lakes and bayous in Catahoula appears to have passed the worst stage, with waters receding and some of the families who moved to higher ground reported returning to their homes.

British Say Cease-Fire Appeal Near

LONDON (AP) — Britain and the Soviet Union have settled all the political terms of an agreement for a truce in Laos by next week, British officials reported Saturday night.

London and Moscow, barring last-minute snags, will appeal jointly on Monday or Tuesday to warring Laotian factions to lay down their arms within 24 or 48 hours, informants said.

The cease-fire appeal, they reported, will be the first step toward a final peace settlement intended to unify, neutralize and guarantee independence of the strategic Southeast Asian kingdom.

During protracted negotiations, the informants said, the Soviet Union accepted a key demand submitted by the British with U.S. endorsement: That a 14-nation conference on Laos begin only after the cease-fire is verified by an international commission made up of India, Canada and Poland.

Final agreement has been delayed only because the Soviet Union has not yet accepted a slightly revised timetable for the peace-making program, officials said.

But British Ambassador Sir Frank Roberts expects to receive the go ahead from Soviet Foreign Minister Andrei A. Gromyko or one of his deputies in Moscow Monday. This would be the signal for issuance of a cease-fire call.

Informants said the Soviets, during the Moscow talks, have not once raised any complaint against the U.S. decision to create a full-fledged military assistance and advisory group in Laos, giving 300 Americans military status.

OPERATOR STARTLED

Phone Caller Finds Castro Unavailable

MIAMI, Fla. (AP)—Fidel Castro isn't taking any phone calls this weekend. Not from Americans, anyway.

I tried it on a person-to-person basis Saturday. I got Havana and a lot of chatter, but I didn't get Castro.

The woman operator there — and a mighty startled one when told the name of the party desired —did a lot of checking around and after about 15 minutes reported: "Fidel Castro is out of Havana. Call back on Monday."

Pressed to try to learn where he might be reached and call him there, she said that "there is no place that he can be reached."

A similar effort to get President Osvaldo Dorticos met with the same result, except that some male functionary angrily snapped: "Hagame el favor de cortar la comunicacion." ("Do me the favor of cutting the communication.")

Even the Miami operator was flabbergasted when I asked to put through a person-to-person call to Castro. "Are you serious," she gasped. I assured her I couldn't be more so.

The Havana operator appeared unable to believe her own ears.

There was a moment's pause and then came an explosive "Wha-a-a-at!"

But, with the unfailing courtesy and helpfulness of telephone operators most everywhere, she dutifully went to work on it.

Her first try was at the National Palace. There she reached a man who spent about five minutes asking her repeated questions as to who was calling and why and making her repeat my name three times, then spell it out letter by letter.

A long silence ensued. Then the operator said she was trying another number, not otherwise identified. After a bit she reported that Castro was out of town and unreachable.

On the call to Dorticos—and his hot-tempered aide, as it turned out—the operator first reported concerning Dorticos: "I am sorry, he is unable to talk."

Upon request to try to reach one of his associates, she got hold of some unidentified man and then informed the Miami operator that "There is no one here who can accept the call."

I inquired the name of the man in the president's office.

"He doesn't want to say who he is," said the Havana operator.

That was when he heatedly asked that the call be cut off.

Frog Prince Presentation Is Saturday

"The Frog Prince," a ballet for children, will be featured at next Saturday's final program of the 1960-61 Cultural Concert Series for Young People.

"Stories and Music" is the theme title for the concert, slated at 1:30 p.m. in Neville High School auditorium.

The Monroe Youth Orchestra will supply background music for the ballet, and for an oratorio, opera selections, musical comedy selections and an original composition by a local sixth grade student, Susan Martin.

"The Frog Prince" music was composed by Eloy Fominaya, the orchestra's conductor and assistant professor of music at Northeast State College, according to Miss Jonnie Bankhead, series chairman and coordinator.

Choreography is by Patricia Wattley, who will narrate the ballet as it is danced by her pupils.

The ballet story is of a young princess who drops her ball into a well while playing with friends. A frog returns it only after she promises to dance with him.

The frog, actually an enchanted prince, is restored to his normal appearance when the princess keeps her promise.

Amid rejoicing throughout the kingdom, they become engaged and the story ends.

Members of the cast are: Mimi Peat, princess; Jan Claridge, frog prince; Ann Alleman, page; Nellie Neal, king; Ginny Nichols, fairy queen; Martha Coker, lady-in-waiting.

Ballerina's are Karen Hayward, Vee Marshall, Savanna Stephens, Kathleen Witty, Brenda Bell, Michelle Chapman, Holly Heuer, Elizabeth Jacka.

George Brian will again be "Mr. Music" or master of ceremonies for the concert.

Brian, who is assistant professor of speech at Northeast State College, and who starred as Mr. Applegate in last week's Little Theater production of "Damn Yankees," will explain how a story may be set to music.

Examples of this, from early times to the present, will include:

Oratorio, selections from Handel's Messiah and Haydn's Creation, sung by the Mixed Choir from Lee Junior High under direction of Peggy Caskey.

Opera, selections from a Mozart opera by a soloist who will be announced later this week.

Musical comedy, selections from "The Sound of Music" sung by Peggy Caskey.

Original composition, music and narrative based on Aesop's Fable, "The Frog and the Ox" composed for the orchestra by sixth grade cello player, Susan Martin.

The Monroe Youth Orchestra, now in its third year, is an outgrowth of the Monroe City School String Program begun by Miss Bankhead during the 1950's.

Members of the 46 - musician orchestra are from grades six through 10 at Lee Junior High, Jefferson Junior High and Neville High school. The organization is sponsored by the Musical Coterie and the Junior Charity League.

Tickets, which are now on sale, will be $1.25 for a family ticket which admits an entire family, or $1 for individuals. They may be purchased at the door, or this week at three music stores: Joanne's House of Sound, Dew's and Hewitt's.

Area-Wide FFA Contest Winners Are Announced

Winnsboro and Weston chapters of Future Farmers of America took top place in area-wide contests at Northeast Louisiana State College, L. L. Price, head of the Division of Agriculture and Home Economics at Northeast, announced.

The Winnsboro chapter captured first place in public speaking competition, and Weston won highest rating in Friday night's parliamentary law demonstration.

Other winners in public speaking were Spearsville FFA, which placed second, and Tallulah, third. In parliamentary law, second place went to Tallulah and third place to Jena.

Winners will represent Northeast Louisiana FFA chapters this summer in the state contests, Price explained.

An added feature was the presentation of a cash award given by the Monroe Kiwanis Club for the greatest distance traveled by chapter members to the contest. The Jena FFA won first honors, and Weston took second place.

Northeast judges for manuscripts were Dr. George L. Sixbey, chairman of languages, J.W. Parkerson and Claude C. Fuller, both of the speech section in the Fine Arts Division.

Judges on delivery were Eugene Love, Winnfield High School principal, chairman, Dr. John Mitchell, professor of agricultural education at the University of Southwestern Louisiana, and John P. Budd, vocational agricultural teacher at Dodson. Budd, Estess Summers, adviser of the speech winning chapter, and Jeddie Hodges, adviser of the Jena chapter, are graduates of Northeast, Price said.

FOR U.S. AGED

Senator May Offer Health Care Plan

WASHINGTON (AP) — Sen. Clinton P. Anderson, D-N.M., said Saturday he may offer his health care for the aged plan as an amendment to the House-passed Social Security bill.

Anderson, a member of the Senate Finance Committee which will consider the Social Security bill, told a reporter this course is under active consideration but that no final decision has been reached.

Sen. Harry F. Byrd, D-Va., finance chairman, has said his group probably will take up the House Social Security bill in about 10 days. Byrd, however, strongly opposes any program of health benefits under the Social Security system.

President Kennedy made health care tied to Social Security a major issue in his campaign last fall, and has urged Congress to enact such a program this year. At his news conference Friday, Kennedy said he still is hopeful of a vote in the 1961 session.

Kennedy pointed out that it would be possible for any senator to bring it up by offering an amendment.

In the House, the Social Security bill was considered Thursday under a procedure barring amendments. As it passed the House, the bill contained a variety of benefits including one to allow men to retire at 62.

If Anderson does raise the health care issue in the Finance Committee or on the Senate floor, it is expected to bring on a bitter fight.

The American Medical Association and the several business groups strongly oppose the Social Security approach. It is supported by the AFL-CIO and some welfare organizations.

Last year Anderson and Kennedy, then a senator, sponsored such a proposal as an amendment to a House bill but lost 51-44. In that test, they got the vote of only one Republican, Sen. Clifford P. Case of New Jersey.

This time the Democrats say they hope to work with Republican liberals to develop a plan which can win enough bipartisan support for passage.

Anderson introduced in February the administration's health care measure. It now is in the hands of the Finance Committee but there has been no action in the face of Byrd's opposition.

The proposal would provide up to 90 days of hospital care and up to 180 days of nursing home care for each illness. It would pay for up to 240 home health care visits in a year, and furnish out-patient diagnostic services. It does not provide for doctors' fees.

Persons over 65 and retired under Social Security or the Railroad Retirement Act would be the beneficiaries.

The program would be financed by an increase in the Social Security tax of ¼ of 1 per cent each on the employer and employe, and ⅜ of 1 per cent on self-employed persons.

An aide to Sen. Jacob K. Javits, R-N.Y., said the New Yorker also is strongly considering offering a health care plan as an amendment to the House Social Security bill.

Javits and several of his GOP colleagues have reintroduced a bill they sponsored last year to set up a program of about $450 million in annual federal grants to help old persons pay for a variety of types of health plans.

After defeating the Social Security plan last year, Congress passed a bill providing for federal grants to states to assist in medical care for the indigent aged. Backers of the administration bill say this law is inadequate and object strongly also to the means test required for eligibility.

Paper In Cuba Says Castro's Shot Sinks Ship

HAVANA (AP) — The newspaper Revolucion says Cuban Prime Minister Fidel Castro mounted a tank turret and fired a shot that led to sinking of a transport ship used by last week's invaders.

Castro's shot touched off munitions aboard the vessel, the newspaper reported. It printed pictures of Castro on the tank turret and of a small transport with bow ablaze and stern sinking.

Revolucion is a morning newspaper, but did not reach the streets Saturday until 10:15 a.m. One of its principal stories related that Jose Miro Torres, son of the head of the revolutionary council that sponsored the invasion, acknowledged its complete failure.

Walker Appears Top Choice For Redmond's Post

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — The States-Item said Saturday O. Perry Walker, first assistant superintendent of Orleans Parish schools, appears to be the top candidate for the superintendent's post.

Superintendent of parish schools Dr. James F. Redmond, resigned earlier this year, effective June 30.

An announcement of the replacement is expected in the near future, following broad hints by the special selection committee that it is nearing a decision.

Sources close to the committee believe Walker may be the choice at this point. However, members contend that a final selection has not yet been made.

Walker is one of several local educators who would qualify for the job which pays about $25,000 —one of the seven highest paid superintendencies in the nation.

Paper In Cuba Says Castro's Shot Sinks Ship

HAVANA (AP) — The newspaper Revolucion says Cuban Prime Minister Fidel Castro mounted a tank turret and fired a shot that led to sinking of a transport ship used by last week's invaders.

Castro's shot touched off munitions aboard the vessel, the newspaper reported. It printed pictures of Castro on the tank turret and of a small transport with bow ablaze and stern sinking.

Revolucion is a morning newspaper, but did not reach the streets Saturday until 10:15 a.m. One of its principal stories related that Jose Miro Torres, son of the head of the revolutionary council that sponsored the invasion, acknowledged its complete failure.

Otto Graham Plans Visit To Monroe

Commander Otto Graham of the United States Coast Guard Academy, better known to millions of sports fans the world over as the former all - pro quarterback of the Cleveland Browns, will make a whirlwint visit to Monroe Wednesday.

Graham will be in the city to participate in a Sales - a - Rama honoring Lanis Pettit Jr. of Central Oil & Supply Corporation, winner of a recent national contest conducted by the B. F. Goodrich Company.

Highlight of the Sales-a-Rama will be a civic luncheon scheduled for noon Wednesday at the Paragon Club.

Walker Appears Top Choice For Redmond's Post

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — The States-Item said Saturday O. Perry Walker, first assistant superintendent of Orleans Parish schools, appears to be the top candidate for the superintendent's post.

Superintendent of parish schools Dr. James F. Redmond, resigned earlier this year, effective June 30.

An announcement of the replacement is expected in the near future, following broad hints by the special selection committee that it is nearing a decision.

Sources close to the committee believe Walker may be the choice at this point. However, members contend that a final selection has not yet been made.

Walker is one of several local educators who would qualify for the job which pays about $25,000 —one of the seven highest paid superintendencies in the nation.

YWCA Week Opens Here Tomorrow

The Young Women's Christian Association, a United Giver's Fund Agency, will keynote National YWCA Week starting today with a series of activities. It was announced by Mrs. J. Norman Coon, president of the YWCA Board, and Mrs. C. H. Bird, chairman of "Special Activities of the YWCA."

On Monday, from 10:30 a.m. until 1:30 p.m. anyone who wishes to join the YWCA is invited to come by anytime during these hours. This is "World Membership Day" for the YWCA, during which membership in the YWCA is being stressed and urged. Mrs. C. L. Taylor, chairman of the membership committee has urged each board member and each person already a member of the YWCA to bring at least one person who is interested in becoming a part of this world - wide fellowship of women and girls, the YWCA.

On Saturday, April 29th, at 12:30 p.m. all YWCA members, friends and the special guests will gather for the Annual YWCA luncheon at the Paragon Club. The theme of the week, "Look Ahead With The YWCA" will be featured in the table decorations and program.

Reservations for the luncheon should be made by Thursday at the YWCA FA 3-1505 or through Mrs. B. L. Mulhern, chairman of reservations, FA 2-4261.

National YWCA Week, said Mrs. Coon, provides in this community an opportunity to join with Associations throughout the United States in calling attention to girls and women that in the YWCA they can approach the future with new friends, new skills, and with the assurance that they are a part of a world - wide movement and fellowship.

The YWCA is at work in 70 countries of the world and in the community as one of the 1600 communities where there is work, providing program and services designed to help girls and women to realize their full potential as individuals and as citizens of the community, nation, and world."

This Scene Could Be Duplicated in Every Louisiana Town

Every town, hamlet and city has felt the impact of rural electrification in terms of more business, more jobs and industry. So much more than the farmer is involved in rural electrification; it is truly everybody's business.

Only non-profit electric cooperatives can serve ALL rural people at rates ALL can afford and continue a program of rural development from the remotest creek bank to the furthest ridges in the marsh.

Filling a great need, the electric co-ops are privately-owned enterprises. They are today beset by ever-increasing wholesale power rates and invasions of their service areas, all endangering rural service.

Your help and understanding in solving these problems is welcomed. Legislative action to assure territorial integrity may be ultimately required. Don't you agree that the co-ops should be allowed to keep and develop their rural service areas which nobody else wanted to serve when the going was rough?

This Scene Could Be Duplicated in Every Louisiana Town
Every town, hamlet and city has felt the impact of rural electrification in terms of more business, more jobs and industry. So much more than the farmer is involved in rural electrification; it is truly everybody's business.
Only non-profit electric cooperatives can serve ALL rural people at rates ALL can afford and continue a program of rural development from the remotest creek bank to the furthest ridges in the marsh.
Filling a great need, the electric co-ops are privately-owned enterprises. They are today beset by ever-increasing wholesale power rates and invasions of their service areas, all endangering rural service.
Your help and understanding in solving these problems is welcomed. Legislative action to assure territorial integrity may be ultimately required. Don't you agree that the co-ops should be allowed to keep and develop their rural service areas which nobody else wanted to serve when the going was rough?

Tax Squeeze On Truckers Is Charged

BILOXI, Miss. (UPI) — The president of the American Trucking Association charged here Saturday the nation's automobile, bus and truck owners are being caught in a tax squeeze between federal and state governments to pay for the same roads.

John J. Gill, of Providence, R. I., told the closing session of the annual convention of the Alabama Trucking Association, "Highway users are confronted with two taxing authorities, each demanding full discharge of user responsibilities for the amount expended—even though a substantial portion of that amount is counted twice."

Gill said of highway user taxes in Alabama, "In 1959 (the last year with available figures) Alabama collected $81.5 million. Of this amount, trucks contributed $31,385,000 or 38.5 per cent. At the same time, the federal government, seeking to make highway users pay for all federal contributions to highways, took from Alabama highway users the sum of $60,884,000 in federal automotive taxes. Of this, nearly $37 million was used for highways—or about the same sum returned to Alabama in federal aid.

"Not the slightest bit of attention has been paid by the federal government to the fact that most states were already charging highway users for the full cost of the highways including that portion of the contribution made by the federal government," he added.

Student Wins Scholarship From ROTC

Leo J. McStravick, Jr., 17-year-old senior at St. Matthew's High School, has been awarded a complete Navy ROTC scholarship to attend Notre Dame University starting next fall.

"Congratulations on your selection as principal candidate for entry into the Naval Reserve Officers Training Corps," reads his telegram from U. S. Senators Russell B. Long and Allen J. Ellender.

Twenty-two scholarships were awarded among almost 200 students who competed.

Both senators commend McStravick "for having attained this distinctive achievement in one of the Navy's most rigorous competitive systems."

The son of Mr. and Mrs. Leo J. McStravick of 610 Hilton St., he admits, "Ever since I started school, I've wanted to go to Notre Dame."

He plans to major in chemistry and go into chemical research.

Four years Navy duty are required after completing college and McStravick is considering being a career officer.

Besides classes at St. Matthew's, he has taken two years of advanced chemistry and physics at Neville High under the special program sponsored by Olin Mathieson.

He has two years varsity baseball and one year varsity football along with extensive extra-curricular activities.

A member of the Student Council and class treasurer this year, he was vice-president of the sophomore class, president of the Latin Club two years, charter member and current president of St. Matthew's Chapter of the National Honor Society, treasurer of the Spanish Club for two years.

He has been honorary member of Neville High Key Club and Neville Science club for two years.

At St. Matthew's, he has been member of the debating team for three years and was rated superior in several rallies.

Editor of the Matthuan Literary magazine in his senior year, McStravick also has been member of the National Latin Honor Society for two years and was official Louisiana delegate to the National Junior Classical League held in Albuquerque, New Mexico.

He has been subsidized by the NSF to attend the summer science institute, for high ability secondary school students, at Louisiana Tech.

Winner of the Optimist Club oratorical contest and a semi-finalist in regional competition for two years, McStravick has received several superior ratings in various types of public speaking.

He has been alternate to Boys' State at Baton Rouge, holds an honorable mention in the Future Scientists of America contest, and placed sixth in Louisiana in the State Science Fair in chemistry.

He is the grandson of Mr. Frank May of Monroe.

Federal Judges Study Request On State Laws

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — A 3-judge federal court Saturday studied a request for an injunction banning enforcement of the state's "informer laws."

The laws, now under a temporary restraining order, punish those who help parents or school employes of integrated schools.

The court Friday amended a restraining order issued against a legislative committee probing New Orleans school board finances.

The amended order said the committee still cannot act to interfere with the court's integration order. But the amended order permits the committee to conduct work not concerned with the integration order.

Slaying Brings Murder Charge At Vicksburg

VICKSBURG, Miss. (UPI) — Robert Scruggs, a 39-year-old laborer, was charged with murder Saturday for killing his wife with a butcher knife.

Authorities said Scruggs admitted killing his wife, Mrs. Eunice Scruggs, after an argument Friday.

Her body was found in her front yard with three knife wounds in her chest.

The victim's brother, William Fike, was found cut and beaten and he told authorities that Scruggs had "picked up a butcher knife and started swinging."

Sugar Quotas Touchy Job For Congress

By BERNARD BRENNER

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Early next month, Congress will turn back to the delicate job of carving up long-range shares for domestic and foreign producers in the lucrative U.S. sugar market.

This twice-postponed job will be touchier than usual. The lawmakers will be faced with the problem of distributing to eager suppliers the right to fill a portion of the U.S. market — about one-third — formerly supplied by Cuba. When this is done, the legislators will have to decide what provision, if any, to make for the possibility that a friendly government may rise again in Cuba. A friendly Cuba, out of the Communist-bloc orbit, would certainly want to regain her old place in the U.S. sugar market.

The federal sugar program operates by giving the Agriculture Department power to proclaim an annual quota covering all sugar sales in the United States. The law provides for dividing the total quota into area or country shares for domestic and foreign producers. About 55 per cent of total consumption is alloted to domestic beet and cane growers and to Hawaii, Puerto Rico, and the Virgin Islands. The remaining 45 per cent, under the basic law, comes from Cuba and 15 other foreign countries or colonial areas.

Foreign quotas in the U.S. market were and are highly prized. This is because the government control system keeps U.S. market prices substantially above the world market price.

Last summer, Congress cracked down on the Castro regime in Cuba by giving former President Eisenhower power to reduce the Cuban quota to zero. Eisenhower immediately banned Cuban shipments for the rest of 1960, and no sugar has been imported from Cuba since.

But with the future of U.S.-Cuban relations uncertain, the legislators last summer wrote a sugar bill extending only through March 15 of this year. The quotas stripped from Cuba were re-allocated to other countries on a temporary basis. A long-range solution was postponed.

Shortly before the bill expired, Congress approved another stopgap extension, this time through June 30 of 1962. Again, basic quotas were left unchanged and the long-range future of the Cuban quota was left for future settlement. The only change in the second temporary extension was a provision forbidding the Dominican Republic any share of the re-distribution of the Cuban quota.

Sun Has Many Surprises For Scientists

By BENNIE TAYLOR

Associated Press Science Writer

The sun, they once said, is a god to be worshipped . . .

The sun, they once said, circles the earth and the earth is flat . . .

Today astronomers are saying the earth wears great halos of energy and perhaps sports a giant tail, and that the sun actually envelopes the earth.

Some say "people" could be living on millions of other planets, and have even tried to make contact with them . . . that new stars are being born now and old ones dying now, and some stars may be 25 billion years old.

Astronomers are seeing glaring light where once they found only darkness; finding intense heat where they expected frigid cold, and boiling seas of atoms and dust in what once was thought to be the emptiness of space.

This new knowledge of earth, sun and universe has been coming in a rush, born of brilliant work by scientists, and born—much of it—from new explorations with rockets, satellites, balloons, radar and radio, computers, and even such devices as a hypodermic needle.

Now man has made his first personal venture into space, with more explorations to follow. Although a Soviet astronaut successfully orbited the earth this month, important questions still remain to be settled by longer voyages than his historic once-around the globe.

Will manned space vehicles on longer trips be able to pick their way safely through earthly belts of radiation? Avoid being cooked by awesome blasts of hot particles shot from the sun? Escape fatal puncture by swarms of meteors?

Some scientists estimate 8 to 10 billion meteors enter the earth's atmosphere every 24 hours, most no larger than a grain of sand, but an extraordinary, occasional one is capable of digging a huge hole in the earth.

Coming, also, are automatic observatories circling the earth or standing on the moon, freed at last from the earth's shimmering, obscuring ocean of air, able to look with astonishing clarity into secrets of the universe.

EARTH'S NEW LOOK

Already our earth and planets have a new look—from findings too new yet to be included in most reference and textbooks.

The earth is found to be slightly pear-shaped, the north polar area a tiny bit pointed, the south polar region somewhat flattened. This was detected from gravity pull on six-inch Vanguard I, the tiniest of all man's earth satellites.

Surrounding our globe are five billion tons of air—and some new-found vestments.

One is the geocorona, a thin aura of hydrogen gas. This, says Dr. Herbert Friedman of the Office of Naval Research, may be elongated to give the earth a faintly-glowing comet-like tail reaching out 20 million miles, always on the side away from the sun. Rocket-borne telescopes, looking backward, one day may see it.

The earliest U. S. satellites discovered the two doughnut-shaped Van Allen radiation belts girdling the earth.

Later, voluntary cooperation of Russian and American observers confirmed the long-suspected existence of a third electrical halo, the ring current beginning 60,000 miles out from the earth.

The earth may be enveloped by two shells of very fine dust particles, says Dr. S. Fred Singer, University of Maryland physicist. One hollow sphere may exist 600 to 1,000 miles out, the other with smaller particles 3,000 to 4,000 miles from earth.

And Dr. Fred Whipple, Harvard astronomer, theorizes that a hazy cloak of moon dust may surround our planet — powder-fine stuff splashed off the moon by the impact of meteors.

Several astronomers now think the sun's corona or outer atmosphere — seen as an incandescent fringe during eclipses — actually reaches to the earth and beyond in tenuous form. Thus the earth and sun really touch one another, for their atmospheres meet.

MOON PROBES AWAITED

Britain's Dr. Sydney Chapman says the solar corona 300,000 miles from the sun (the earth is 93 million miles way) is thinner than the best man-made vacuum, but still contains thousands of particles per cubic inch and they are very hot—maybe 50,000 to 100,000 degrees centigrade.

Scientists have bounced radio and radar signals off the moon, and are eager to land instrumented probes there to determine if the moon's outer surface is solid, or covered with a deep layer of debris like ground glass, created by bombardment of meteorites and awful swings of temperatures betwixt day and night.

On the chance it is deep dust the first U. S. satellite making a gentle landing in 1963 or later —may well touch down in stilts 11 feet high, so it wouldn't sink out of sight.

The question could be settled earlier by "rough" impact landings or by other observations.

Perhaps the moon contains rock and other material unchanged since its creation. A solid piece of the airless moon could provide a sample of matter as it was in the beginning.

Optical or light-gathering telescopes cannot make out surface details of the earth's sister planets, except for Mars, and they cannot tell whether the elusive so-called "canals" are real. Clouds or other problems obscure other planets, and provide an exciting reason for sending probes or even men to visit them.

But radar offers one way of exploring their surfaces. Radar echoes returning to earth are distorted versions of the original impulses. Whatever they hit may change their wavelengths or other characteristics.

Some impulses to a planet such as Mars may hit a mountain peak, others an adjacent valley. The echo from the valley will return a bit later because it has farther to travel. From this, an observer can make a topographic map.

Radar echoes can also show whether a "target" area is water, ice or rock. Such radar explorations are under way.

Bright Venus has water in its thick cloud atmosphere. This was determined from a balloon, 15 miles above earth, by Navy Cmdr. Malcolm Ross and Dr. Charles Moore, Cambridge, Mass., looking at Venus through a telescope and taking spectrographic readings.

VENUS AN OVEN

But radio signals from Venus indicate the temperature just under the cloud is some 600 degrees Fahrenheit, too hot for life, reports Dr. Charles Townes of Columbia University.

Other research indicates Venus has a poison gas, nitrogen tetroxide, in its atmosphere.

Jupiter is broadcasting radio waves, and possesses an unidentified source of energy equal to the explosive power of 100 million tons of TNT per second, says Dr. Roger Gallett of the National Bureau of Standards.

Five spots on Jupiter do this broadcasting, and these areas perhaps are something like volcanic or geyser regions, he adds. They don't erupt simultaneously, but on the average produce a burst of energy equal to 10 big hydrogen bombs each second.

What's really there? One day, the puzzle will be resolved.

In 3½ years of the space age, the life-giving sun has produced more surprises for astronomers than anything else in the sky.

Like the solar wind . . .

In 1959, something gave Sputnik III a cosmic nudge that moved it slightly out of its orbit.

The same curious nudge was experienced last fall by Echo I, the lightweight balloon communications satellite.

Scientists, including Dr. Robert Jastrow of the National Aeronautics and Space Administration, traced the invisible forces to bursts of highly-charged particles from great flare-ups on the surface of the sun.

This is the solar wind.

First, observers see a tongue of flame shoot upward from the region of a sunspot.

Almost simultaneously, radio sets tuned to the sun's broadcasting wavelengths for this kind of energy begin to hiss and growl.

A day or so later, the earth's magnetic field goes into a dance. Radios black out. Auroral lights flicker over polar regions.

The gust of particles, or wind, heats the lower part of the earth's high upper atmosphere. The air at that level rides and intensifies the air above it, at the level the orbiting satellites were.

For the satellites, suddenly there was a head wind. Slowed down a bit by the increased drag of the atmosphere, the satellites dropped a little, and shortened their orbits.

CHANGING LEVELS

Earlier, German, English, and American scientists had discovered that the earth's upper atmosphere rises and falls with the general level of solar activity.

It had taken cooperative observations, and reasoning, to develop the meaning of this—somebody watching the sun, others simultaneously manning radio telescopes, magnetic recorders, spectrographs, cosmic ray counters, and cameras watching auroras.

Particles from the sun unleashed by these bursts also feed the belts of radiation named for Dr. James Van Allen of the State University of Iowa. When the belts fill up, they leak particles into the polar regions, and the auroral lights come on.

The solar winds can also bring another kind of radiation — cosmic rays. During solar storms in 1959, a 1,000-fold increase in cosmic ray activity was detected by balloons lofted 90,000 feet high by Drs. Edward P. Ney and John R. Winckler of the University of Minnesota.

These rays, fortunately, were stopped by the earth's thicker atmosphere below that point, so humans didn't get an undesirable dose of radiation. Such bursts could, however, be a serious hazard for astronauts riding in space. Experts say the sun shoots out about 30 great bursts a year, and there is no way yet of predicting them.

Rockets equipped with special eyes discovered an invisible kind of sunlight so bright it blinds the chance of seeing other cosmic bodies far out in space.

This type of ultraviolet light — more technically called Lyman alpha radiation — is stronger than all the visible starlight combined, says Dr. Herbert Friedman of the Office of Naval Research.

RADIATES FROM SUN

It originates in the excitement or activity of hydrogen atoms in the sun's chromosphere, the layer between the relatively cool 6,000-degree surface and the million-degree corona higher up.

It spreads in every direction from the sun, causing other hydrogen atoms in the dark sky to glow sympathetically with a pale violet cast.

If you had something like X-ray vision and could get above the earth's atmosphere — which absorbs this light — the whole sky would glow.

Such a glare blinded the rocket instruments aimed at looking for other sources than the sun for concentrated radiation of this kind.

Researchers solved this problem by using hypodermic needles as blinders on their special detectors. Looking through the almost microscopic bores of the needles, the detectors could look at just a tiny part of the sky at any one time. In this way, they located stars and sky areas where this Lyman alpha radiation is most intense.

Such studies offer a way of calculating the amount of hydrogen out in space, thus helping to estimate the size and nature of the universe, Dr. Friedman explains.

A rocket lofted 123 miles high took a photograph of the Lyman alpha radiation from the sun. It provided the first highly detailed picture of the entire sun, and showed it is strikingly stormy when viewed this way, said J. DeWitt Purcell and Richard Tousey of the Naval Research Laboratory.

SUN AFFECTS WEATHER

Solar activity is suspected by some astronomers and meteorologists to have a definite, if as yet unclear, mechanism vitally affecting weather on earth. Future solar weather reports might vastly improve earthly weather forecasts.

The clearest pictures of the sun taken in ordinary light were obtained through a 12-inch telescope lifted above most of the earth's atmosphere by a balloon in September, 1959.

They show mysterious white spots in the dark depths of sunspots almost the diameter of the earth. These play some mysterious role in solar activity.

A two-ton, 36-inch telescope to be carried some 80,000 feet high is being prepared by the same scientific team headed by Dr. Martin Schwarzchild of Princeton University.

Its pictures might analyze the rings of Saturn, interstellar dust clouds, and perhaps peer through the atmospheres of Jupiter and Venus.

Orbiting astronomical observatories equipped with telescopes and other instruments are being planned and prepared now to explore these and other problems ever more deeply.

Man's idea of the age of the universe began with a figure of 6,000 years, calculated from Biblical history.

Astronomers generally have raised it now to 10 billion years.

And there are peculiar hints it might be 25 billions, or even a fantastic one million billions.

With their new and future methods of getting evidence, and checking theories, astronomers hope to pin down the age, and clarify the origin and perhaps even the ultimate fate of the universe.

They hope to resolve their intramural argument whether the universe began with a Big Bang — an explosion of one huge primeval atom — and has been expanding ever since, or whether it is in a "steady" estate with matter constantly being formed and congregating into stars and galaxies to fill the space required by the expansion theory.

Most agree the Milky Way — the great galaxy or family of stars to which our sun and earth belong — consists of up to 1,000 billion stars. And that there are untold billions of other galaxies of the same or greater size.

They're pretty confident some distant galaxies are colliding — passing through one another. But individual stars are so far apart that rarely if ever do any stars actually hit. Collisions do occur between atoms of hydrogen and gases scattered among the stars.

Recently, astronomers using the world's biggest telescope, the 200-incher at Mt. Palomar, and radio telescopes detected a blob of light which may be a colliding galaxy.

CRUCIAL DISCOVERY

Various bits of evidence indicate that it is 6 billion light years away — 35,000,000,000,000,000,000,- miles away — since light travels at 186,000 miles per second.

For special reasons, this blob of light is considered one of the best finds so far toward reaching a decision whether the universe is expanding, or is very old and in a steady state.

In another discovery using the Palomar giant, Dr. Allan Sandage found a cluster of stars which he thinks may be 25 billion years old — more than double the generally assumed age of the universe.

He calculated this age from the rate at which certain stars in the cluster are known to be burning up their hydrogen. Some stars have burned so much of their hydrogen that it would have taken them about 25 billion years to do so, Dr. Sandage estimates.

Such an age is not impossible if matter is constantly being created, and the universe is indefinitely old, rather than having an age dating back to a specific time of the Big Bang.

But one astrophysicist, Prof. Fritz Zwicky, who also observes through Palomar's Big Eye, says he finds reasons to calculate the age of the universe at not less than one million billion years.

Since time began, has intelligent life developed somewhere out there on planets of other distant suns? Might such life be superior to man's evolution so far on earth?

More and more astronomers are coming to believe life must exist elsewhere, and a few think intelligent beings may even be trying to communicate with us, or other planets.

LISTEN FOR SIGNALS

On the chance they might hear some cosmic baby talk, some radio astronomers have tuned their agic ears to several distant parts of the Milky Way for a time.

Hopefully, they listened for a few faint "da da da" sequences of signals or some rhythmic sound like the ruffle of a drum repeated many times.

They haven't heard anything yet.

Dr. Su-shu Huang, physicist of the National Aeronautics and Space Administration, says some scientists think it worthwhile to set up regular radio surveillance for signals originating outside the solar system.

Dr. Huang calculates there are probably six million worlds similar to the earth in the Milky Way alone. The nearest possibility, he thinks, is some planet of the star Tau Ceti which is 11.8 light years or 69 trillion miles away.

They could have started signals on the way to us 10 years or more ago.

Radio Astronomer Ronald Bracewell at Stanford University says it is possible other worlds ages ago started satellites toward distant suns, and that one or more of them by now could have reached the solar system, and be circling the sun.

They might be transmitting signals to contact us, and so it could be sensible to start interrogating the region of the sun with radio impulses of varying frequencies and then listen systematically for responses, Dr. Bracewell says.

Death is no stranger to the universe.

Somewhere out there, stars are dying.

Many of them probably were like our sun is now — possessing planets harboring intelligent life.

Their fate is death from heat, say Drs. Sandage and Jesse L. Greenstein, who have studied many aging stars from Palomar and Mt. Wilson.

STARS BURN HYDROGEN

Although a star's lifespan is billions of years, observers can get an idea of its doings from birth to death by looking at clusters containing stars of all ages. It is like viewing a family photograph of several generations. Simultaneously you see young ones, and those about to die.

A typical star such as the sun starts life with a make-up which is about 93 per cent hydrogen. Hydrogen is the universal star fuel. Some stars burn it rapidly, some slowly.

When a star has used up about [illegible] per cent of its hydrogen, its death throes begin, Dr. Sandage asserts. It fades from yellow to red and expands to 30 times its youthful radius. Its temperature rises relentlessly.

Slowly its planets heat up. Life vanishes. Their oceans boil away.

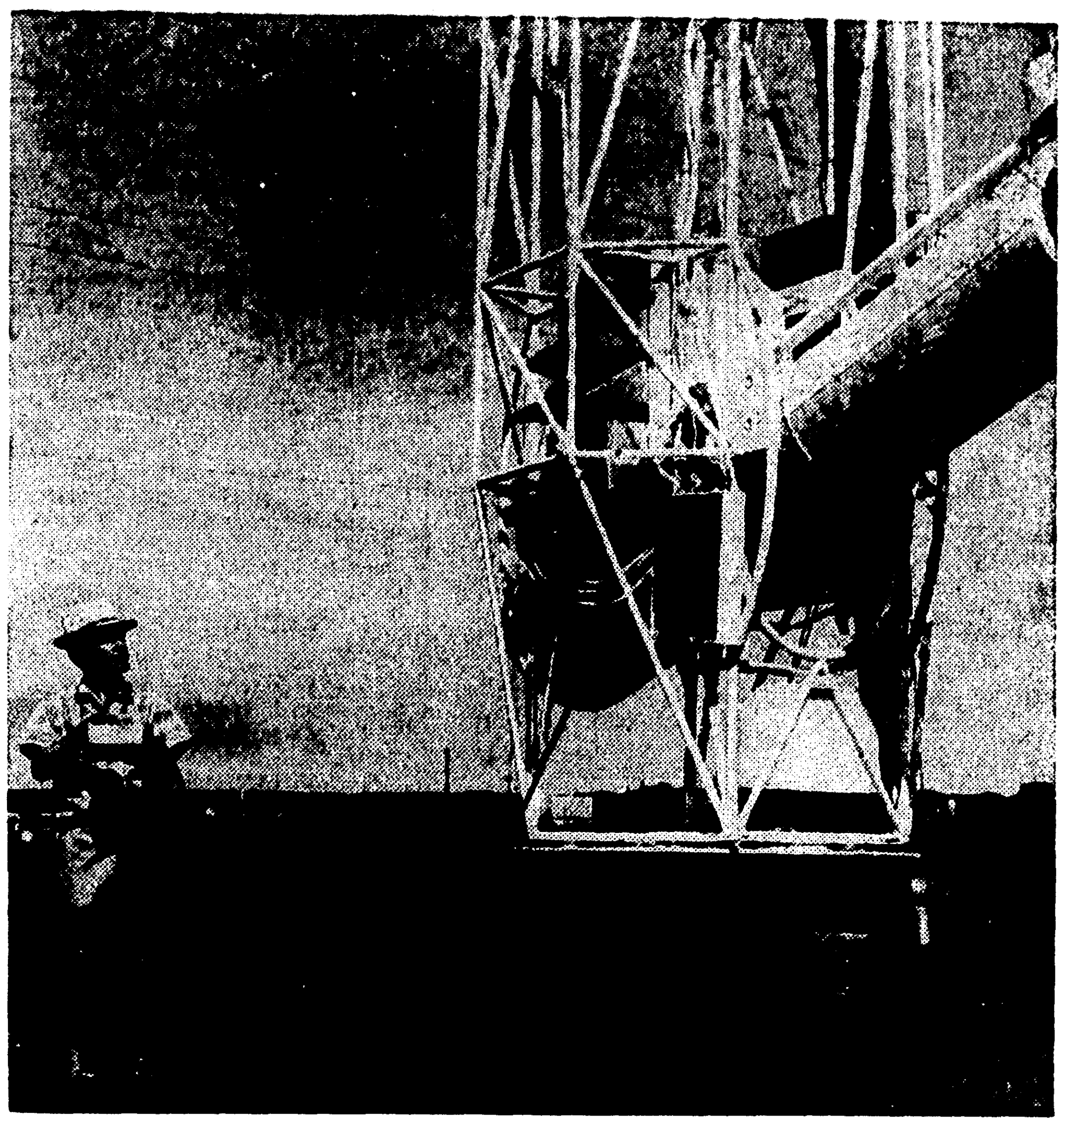
But the planet's temperature keeps rising to 1,100 degrees, three times as hot as a kitchen oven.

Then the star cools and shrinks, becoming a blue-white dwarf, too cold and too small to look anything like a normal star. Its charred planets freeze to 300 degrees below zero.

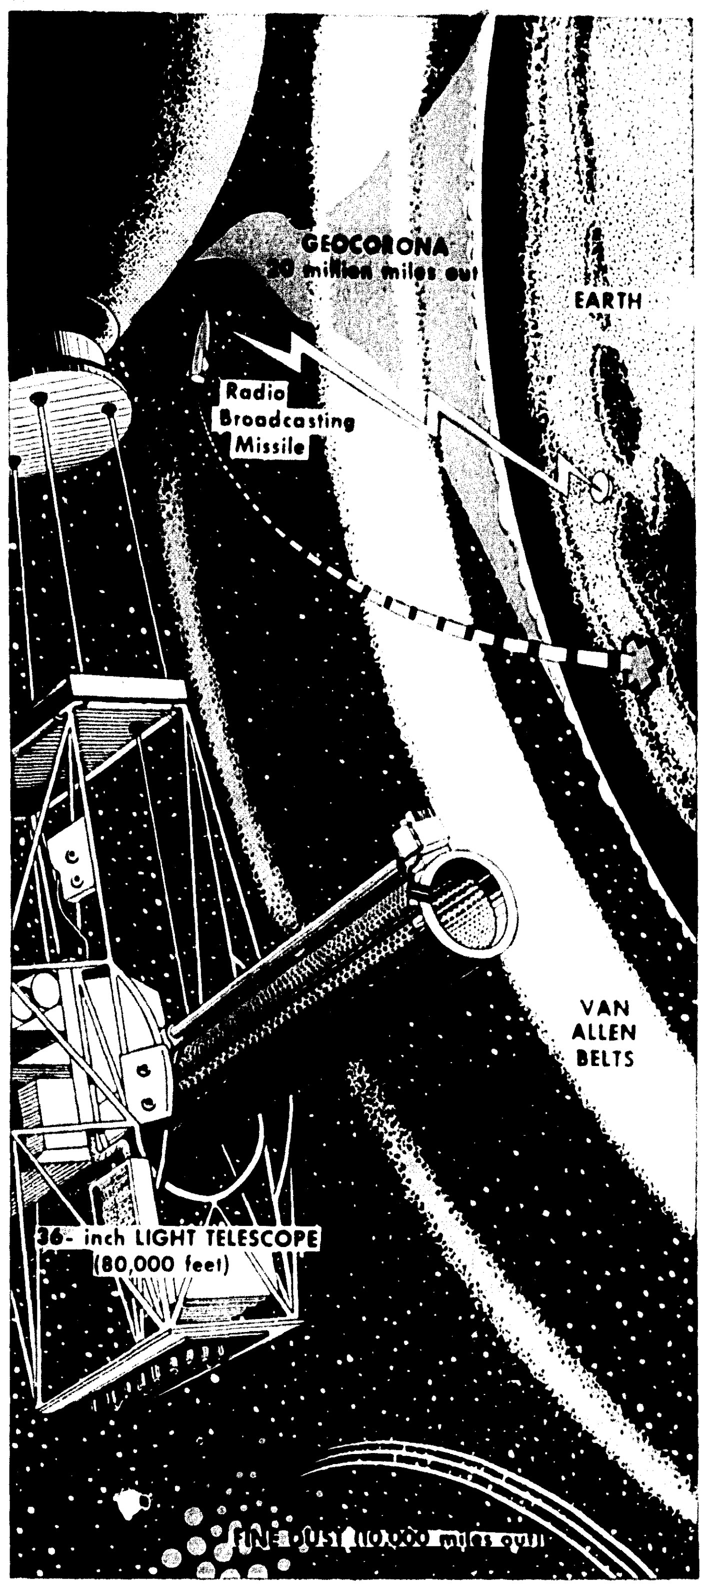
Right now there very well may be people on planets who are being cooked so slowly they don't notice it, says Dr. Sandage.

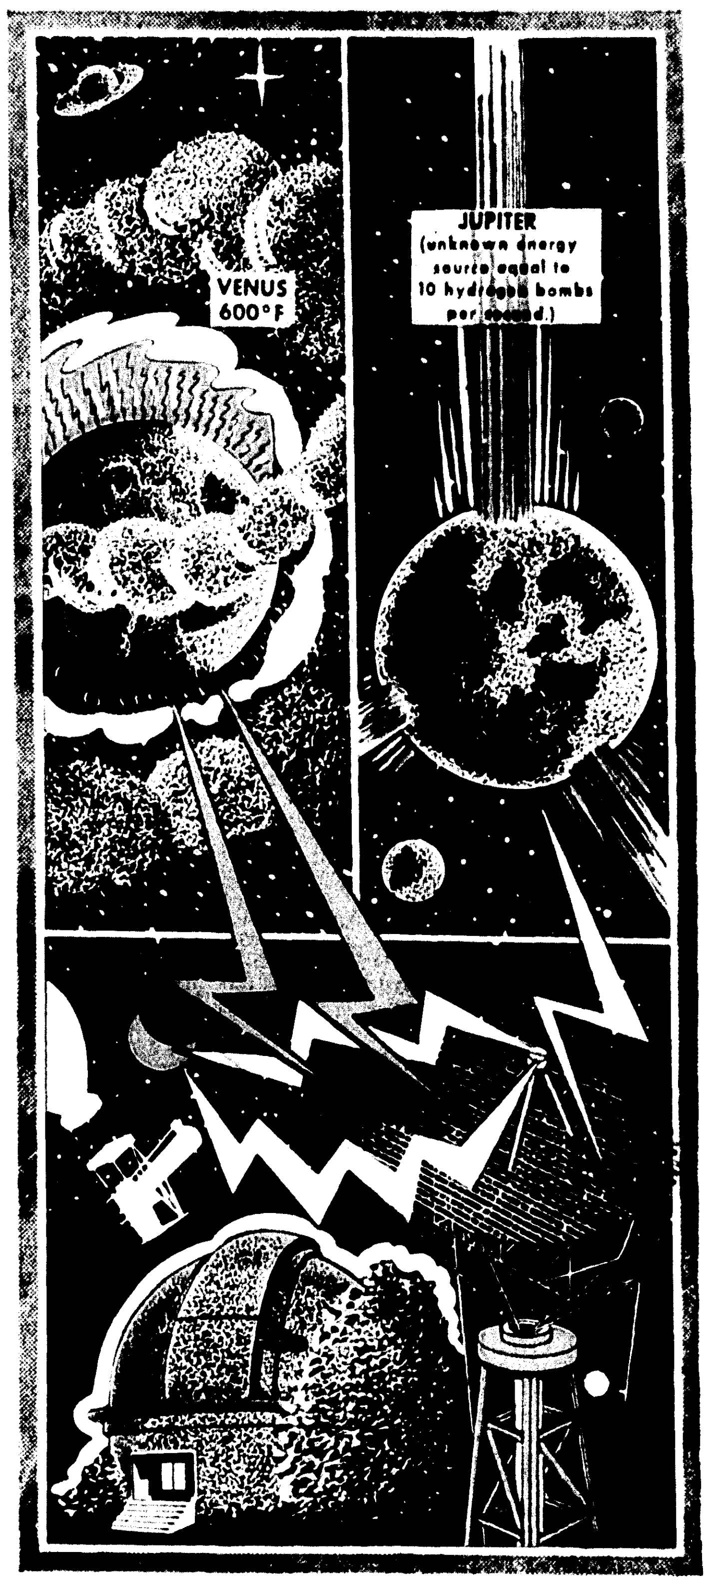
We on earth are lucky, he adds, because our sun is the size that burns slowly. If it were 10 per cent larger, it would be a fast burner, and we also would be facing heat death.

As it is, we have another six or seven billion years to go.

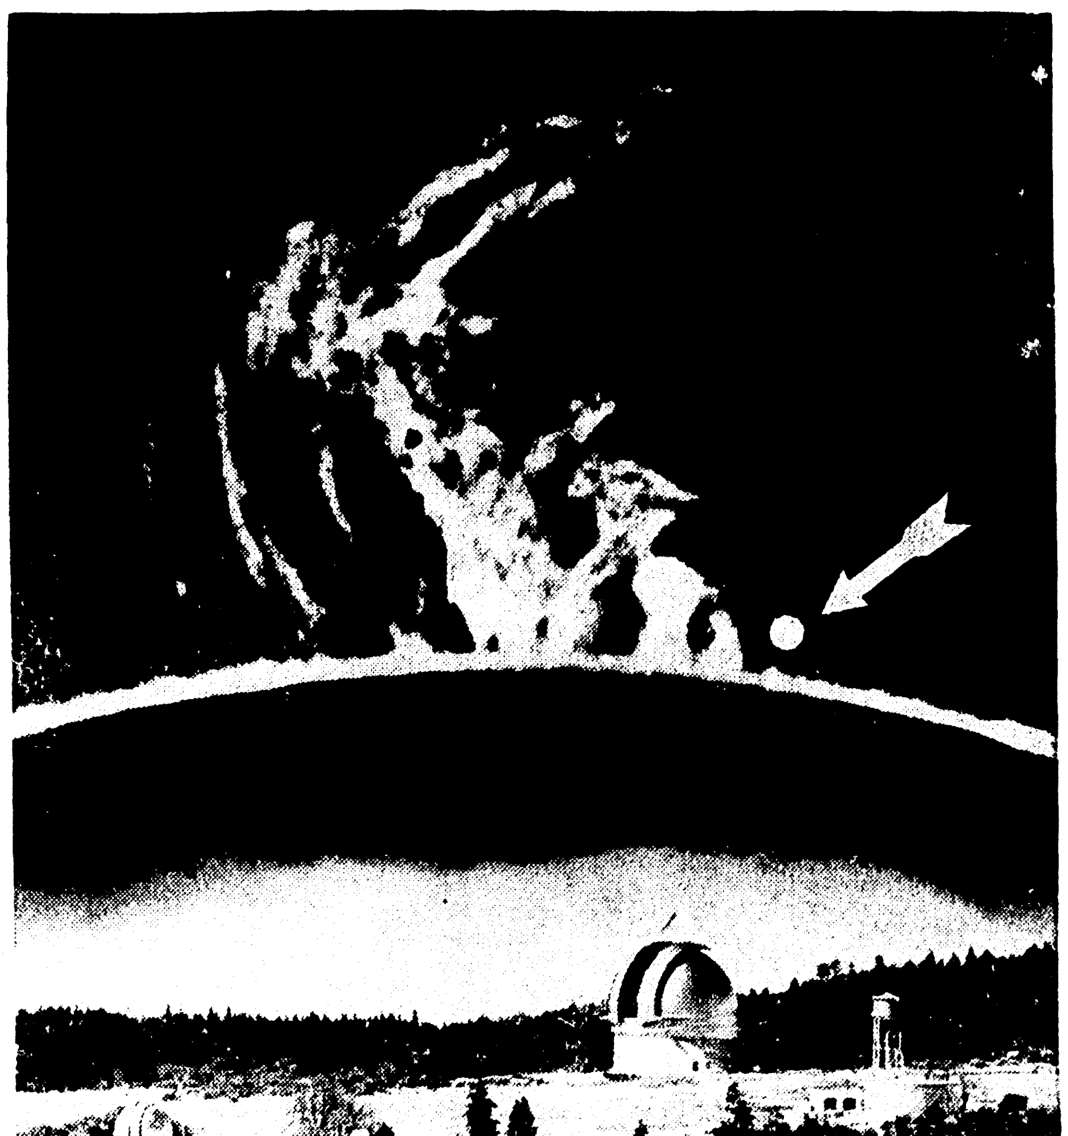


AERIAL TELESCOPE: Dr. Martin Schwarzchild of Princeton University is shown with the two-ton, 36-inch telescope that will be carried 80,000 feet above the earth to examine the universe unhindered by most of the earth's atmosphere.





PROBING THE MYSTERIES: With the aid of radio, radar and powerful lenses, man is slowly learning the secrets of the universe that surrounds him. Soon a 'flying telescope" will be helping him in his quest for the ultimate scientific knowledge.



DEATH OF A STAR: A photo of a section of the solar corona (top), taken during an eclipse from Mt. Palomar Observatory (bottom), helps illustrate the death of a star. The small white circle (arrow) represents the comparable size of the sun when it dies several billion years from now.

PROBING THE MYSTERIES: With the aid of radio, radar and powerful lenses, man is slowly learning the secrets of the universe that surrounds him. Soon a 'flying telescope' will be helping him in his quest for the ultimate scientific knowledge.

CRUCIAL DISCOVERY

Various bits of evidence indicate that it is 6 billion light years away — 36,000,000,000,000,000,000,-miles away — since light travels at 186,000 miles per second.

For special reasons, this blob of light is considered one of the best finds so far toward reaching a decision whether the universe is expanding, or is very old and in a steady state.

In another discovery using the Palomar giant, Dr. Allan Sandage found a cluster of stars which he thinks may be 25 billion years old — more than double the generally assumed age of the universe.

He calculated this age from the rate at which certain stars in the cluster are known to be burning up their hydrogen. Some stars have burned so much of their hydrogen that it would have taken them about 25 billlion years to do so, Dr. Sandage estimates.

Such an age is not impossible if matter is constantly being created, and the universe is indefinitely old, rather than having an age dating back to a specific time of the Big Bang.

But one astrophysicist, Prof. Fritz Zwicky, who also observes through Palomar's Big Eye, says he finds reasons to calculate the age of the universe at not less than one million billion years.

Since time began, has intelligent life developed somewhere out there on planets of other distant suns? Might such life be superior to man's evolution so far on earth?

More and more astronomers are coming to believe life must exist elsewhere, and a few think intelligent beings may even be trying to communicate with us, or other planets.

LISTEN FOR SIGNALS

On the chance they might hear some cosmic baby talk, some radio astronomers have tuned their agic ears to several distant parts of the Milky Way for a time.

Hopefully, they listened for a few faint "da da da" sequences of signals or some rhythmic sound like the ruffle of a drum repeated many times.

They haven't heard anything yet.

Dr. Su-shu Huang, physicist of the National Aeronautics and Space Administration, says some scientists think it worthwhile to set up regular radio surveillance for signals originating outside the solar system.

Dr. Huang calculates there are probably six million worlds similar to the earth in the Milky Way alone. The nearest possibility, he thinks, is some planet of the star Tau Ceti which is 1.8 light years or 65 trillion miles away.

They could have started signals on the way to us 10 years or more ago.

Radio Astronomer Ronald Bracewell at Stanford University says it is possible other worlds ages ago started satellites toward distant suns, and that one or more of them by now could have reached the solar system, and be circling the sun.

They might be transmitting signals to contact us, and so it could be sensible to start interrogating the region of the sun with radio impulses of varying frequencies and then listen systematically for responses, Dr. Bracewell says.

Death is no stranger to the universe.

Somewhere out there, stars are dying.

Many of them probably were like our sun is now — possessing planets harboring intelligent life.

Their fate is death from heat, say Drs. Sandage and Jesse L. Greenstein, who have studied many aging stars from Palomar and Mt. Wilson.

STARS BURN HYDROGEN

Although a star's lifespan is billions of years, observers can get an idea of its doings from birth to death by looking at clusters containing stars of all ages. It is like viewing a family photograph of several generations. Simultaneously you see young ones, and those about to die.

A typical star such as the sun starts life with a make-up which is about 93 per cent hydrogen. Hydrogen is the universal star fuel. Some stars burn it rapidly, some slowly.

When a star has used up about 12 per cent of its hydrogen, its death throes begin, Dr. Sandage reports. It fades from yellow to red, and expands to 30 times its youthful radius. Its temperature rises relentlessly.

Slowly its planets heat up. Life vanishes. Their oceans boil away. But the planet's temperature keeps rising, to 1,500 degrees, three times as hot as a kitchen oven.

Then the star cools and shrinks, becoming a blue-white dwarf, too cold and too small to look anything like a normal star. Its charred planets freeze to 300 degrees below zero.

Right now there very well may be people on planets who are being cooked so slowly they don't notice it, says Dr. Sandage.

We on earth are lucky, he adds, because our sun is the size that burns slowly. If it were 10 per cent larger, it would be a fast burner, and we also would be facing heat death.

As it is, we have another six or seven billion years to go.

Jail Extension Bonds

Absentee voting has already begun on the bond issue election for the urgently needed Ouachita Parish jail extension. The actual election has been slated for May 9.

The Morning World has made a thorough examination of the facts in question, and it is our belief that the construction of a jail extension farm is the best possible solution to the badly overcrowded conditions which now exist in the parish jail in the courthouse building.

The bond issue has been set at $300,000. This will raise sufficient funds for the acquiring of land, construction of buildings and the purchasing of equipment for the jail extension.

Several years ago, the Morning World sent a number of inquiries to parishes in Louisiana which now make use of such prison farm facilities as are proposed under the Ouachita Parish jail extension.

All reports were favorable. Some parishes, as East Baton Rouge, were just getting started with the system. Others as Caddo and Webster had made use of jail extension farms for a number of years.

The parishes were in general agreements as to the economy of such an arrangement when compared to conventional jails. Side benefits included fresh vegetables for prisoners' meals.

Possibly the most important feature of jail extension programs is the opportunity of separating first offenders from habitual criminals. In this respect, those parishes which had operated prison extension farms for a number of years reported a higher percentage of rehabilitations.

Parish officials have carefully weighed all aspects of the proposed extension program. Even with the date of the election set, committees are still at work on the selection of the best location for the farm.

Last week, committee members met with Sheriff Bailey Grant. A final decision was delayed at that time pending receipt of soil analysis tests of several locations. W. A. Calloway, committee chairman and member of the Ouachita Parish Agricultural Stabilization and Conservation committee reported that he hopes to have soil tests complete prior to the Tuesday meeting of the Police Jury.

M. W. Montgomery, jury president and committee member, said that bids on seven proposed locations were reviewed.

Every phase of the proposed jail extension project has been investigated in a similar manner. Comparative studies show the jail extension plans are far less expensive to construct and maintain than additional buildings with conventional jail cells.

Following reasoning of this type, the Morning World is calling upon the property owners of Ouachita Parish to follow its example in supporting the bond issue and maintenance tax for the proposed jail extension.

Student Jury Trial

A unique educational program instituted by the Austin and Texas Junior Bar Associations, re-enacted an actual jury trial for 600 Austin high school students to acquaint them with the principles of American jurisprudence.

The associations selected a circumstantial evidence case involving the death penalty from the records of the Texas court of criminal appeals and condensed it to fit into a school day.

Two practicing attorneys represented the accused and two prosecuted for the state. Witnesses included a pathologist and two police officers from the Austin police department.

Throughout the trial, the legal significance of each event was explained by a narrator. While the student jury deliberated, a question and answer period was held for the audience.

The program, which has the endorsement of Governor Price Daniel and the Texas Education Association, will be presented in other cities in the state with local attorneys participating.

Probably no better way than this could be devised to place before the young people of this nation the importance and sanctity of the jury trial. Other states could well afford to follow Texas' lead.

Incidentally, Texas is one of the states which believes that the United States constitution and bill of rights meant what they said when they declared that every accused person has a right to be tried by a jury. Anyone in that state accused of an offense, even though it may be only a traffic charge, can be tried by a jury if he wishes.

The federal government, Louisiana and some other states provide that minor cases may be tried by a judge and that the defendant cannot demand a jury. Many explanations are offered on why this is allowable but it is still hard to get around the declaration that every man is entitled to a jury trial if he wants it.

Texas is emphasizing the importance of jury trials in the trials before students.

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Kennedy's tough warning to Soviet Premier Khrushchev to keep hands off Cuba was the second time in 10 months an American president has done that. President Eisenhower did it last July.

But from the standpoint of opinion in some parts of the world, the United States is in the position of saying, don't do what I do but do as I say.

In 1958, when the government of her next-door neighbor, Iraq, was overthrown, Lebanon's President Chamoun asked this country for help to protect it against possible assault.

Eisenhower sent in Marines, even though Lebanon is just a hop-skip-and-jump from Russia. Now when Fidel Castro, in the American front yard, wants Russian help, the United States tells the Soviets to keep out.

While Lebanon wasn't invaded, Cuba has been—although Kennedy says Americans are taking no part in it.

Last July, long before Castro's government was invaded, Khrushchev not only pledged him full support against attack but threatened this country with rockets.

Eisenhower, in a warning just as tough as Kennedy's, told Khrushchev this country would "not be deterred" by Soviet threats from its pledges on allowing no foreign interference in the Western Hemisphere.

This country has a treaty with 20 other American republics to prevent any outside interference with any of them or outside action that endangers them.

Again this week, with Castro besieged, Khrushchev said, "We shall render the Cuban people and their government all necessary assistance in beating back the armed attack on Cuba."

He said the armed bands invading Cuba had been trained in this country.

Election Coming In Arizona

Story There May Be Similar To That In Texas; Another Frank Apostle Of Goldwater May Win

PHOENIX, ARIZONA — Reeling from a setback in Texas, where the right wingers John Tower (R) and William Blakely (D) ran away from the field, the New Frontier gets another chance in the Arizona special congressional election — and many of the same elements are present.

In the Lone Star race for Lyndon Johnson's Senate seat, the Republican front - runner was fresh from a defeat last November. Tower was beaten by Johnson on the same day a 44 - year - old Mormon Bishop businessman and former Air Force gunnery instructor named Mac C. Matheson was beaten by Stewart Udall in the Second Congressional District.

Tower came back in Texas to beat 60 - some candidates this month by calling himself a Goldwater Republican. And now Matheson, another frank Goldwater apostle, is running on May 2nd against another Udall —Morris, the 38 - year - old younger brother and senior law partner of Stewart, who is Mr. Kennedy's Secretary of Interior.

Arizona's Second District, although nearly 4 to 1 Democratic in registration, went for Nixon last year, mainly because Senator Goldwater was campaigning for him and for Governor Paul Fannin. Stewart Udall won on his own energy and popularity, and is now lending moral and machine support to his brother. The race could be called a contest of coattails. It is also the kind of a race which could be decided by somebody losing rather than by somebody winning.

As a heavy registration favorite, Morris Udall would have to pull quite an upset to get himself beaten — but he may do so by some of the things he's said. To talk himself out of the race, Udall would be accomplishing another feat since Matheson's chief fault (easily corrected if he should become a freshman Congressman) is said to be loquacity. But Udall has made some real bloopers which Republicans aren't letting the voters forget.

In the late 1950's when Morris Udall was Pima County (Tucson) prosecutor, he asked the death sentence for an accused murderer in words that shook a lot of humanitarian hearts, and caused the case to be retired at the public expense of close to $100,000. Udall said:

"If it takes $5,000 a year to guard him and feed him and take care of him, he has got a life expectancy of 40 or 50 years, the taxpayers of Arizona are going to have to pay a quarter of a million dollars for the luxury of keeping him alive when he has done what he did and we can never trust him outside the prison walls."

This sounds like the arrogance of the rather young, and the word is that Morris Udall was matured by a subsequent election defeat for a judgeship. Still, at the Phoenix Press Club recently, he eulogized the leadership principle and declared, with documentation from his school years, that he had been a leader all his life. Udall opened his billboard campaign with the slogan: "Big Name. Big Man. Big Job." Somewhere along the way, he had second thoughts. The first third of the campaign sloan, "Big Name," has been deleted. But the Democratic candidate still calls himself a Big Man on the billboards.

In earlier days, it would be easier to predict that a man could talk his way out of an election by showing too little regard for humanitarian feelings and too much regard for his own importance. But the business of political puffing, and greatness - by - self - assertion has become a mark of success in our times. Should Morris Udall win, he would join an Administration party which did not succeed by being modest or waiting to be "drafted." He would add another rubber stamp vote to the Democratic House majority, and would support a Federal Welfare program which is very much opposed in Arizona.

It looks like the strange case of a candidate who is running with the betting odds — and yet at odds with the sentiment of his State.

SYLVIA PORTER

Beware Rackets

Hundreds Of Thousands To Be Swindled By Fake Promoters

In the next few months, hundreds of thousands of U. S. families will be swindled by the unscrupulous promoters now working at a peak pace in the home improvement field — and unless you are thoroughly aware how these racketeers operate, recognize the threat to your pocketbook in an apparently tantalizing repair-improvement bargain, you easily may become one of 1961's victims.

Although, of course, the vast majority of firms in the home improvement industry are responsible, reputable businessmen, swindles — with inquiries and complaints on these alone running at 266,000 in 1960, up 46,500 from 1959, more than double the total of inquiries and complaints as recently as 1953. An informed estimate is that our losses from this fraud top a half-billion dollars a year, and with spending on home improvements now skyrocketing, the ABBB has little doubt that the number of victims and the volume of our losses will break all records this spring and summer.

How does the racket work? The operation has characteristics which, with variations, appear over and over and which give it the over-all name "The Model House" or "Pilot House" promotion. For instance:

A couple of men will ring your doorbell and present credentials implying they not only are reputable contractors but also represent well-known manufacturers in the housing supply industries. As an illustration, let's say your house obviously needs a re-siding job; your callers will represent themselves as experts in residing who have just come into your neighborhood and are looking for work.

Their first pitch to you will be that they can do a top-notch re-siding job for you at a bargain price because the supply firm they represent wants to advertise its product and is offering a special low price. Their second pitch will be that for every sale they make in your area, you'll get a commission of $50 or $100 and you'll also get a bonus for every bona fide customer you recommend.

This sounds great — you are to get a needed job done at a special bargain rate and the commissions you may earn on your "model home" can slash even that price to next to nothing. With high pressure selling thrown in, even ordinarily prudent homeowners are convinced and they sign contracts (called "mere formalities") obligating themselves to pay up to several thousand dollars for a repair job.

Once the contract is signed, the innocent homeowner is stuck. Not only will he discover that the price quoted was no bargain at all, but he'll also find the work done is sub-standard, the talk about fixing shingles, chimneys, etc., on the side was strictly talk and the commissions and bonuses are myths. The one part of the deal that is no myth, though, is the homeowner's pledge to pay. His contract is ironclad, is in the possession of a legitimate finance company — and while he pays, the original promoters are far away, victimizing other innocents.

The variations of this swindle will depend on what improvements your house obviously needs, but the key idea is that your home is to be a "model" and you're to collect juicy commissions on additional sales. In an interview on this, Victor H. Nyborg, president of the ABBB, went to the length of warning, "You should be on guard against any salesman suggesting your home will be used as a 'model,' and any implication that your commissions on resulting sales will cut your job's cost should make you suspect a racket."

As a basic protection, then, beware of any sales pitch about a "model home" and commissions. Before you agree to any improvement work, obtain specific estimates from several reliable local firms.

If you deal with an out-of-town contractor, check on your own how satisfactory his work has been and don't rely on written testimonials. Under no circumstances, sign a completion certificate until the work is in fact completed.

Tomorrow: The "Referral Selling" trap for gullible you.

POSTAL PLUM TREE? — It is not clear yet whether Postmaster General Day's success in having the Civil Service Commission cancel all existing examinations for postmaster positions and existing registers is a first step toward opening up all postmaster appointments to the party in power, but it does give Democrats a better shot at existing vacancies. Should it later be decided to shake the postoffice plum tree some ripe fruit would fall. There are 3,983 first class postoffices, 6,665 second class and 13,082 third class. The 11,503 fourth class postoffices have long been under strict civil service.

USIA BUDGET REQUESTS — Nomination of Edward Murrow to be chief of the U.S. Information Service, which went to the Senate this week, will get the routine treatment with no unnecessary delay in confirmation. One Senator who wants more information on what USIA intends to do with the money is Senator John L. McClellan, Arkansas.

GEORGE SOKOLSKY

Too Many Cooks

Number Of Leftists Attempting To Be Secretary Of State

President Kennedy is having a tough time formulating his foreign policy. Perhaps too many cooks are at this broth. Rusk, Bowles, Stevenson, Harriman, to say nothing of Walter Lippmann. It has been suggested that each of these persons could be Secretary of State. Perhaps the difficulty is that each one would like to be or presumes that he is Secretary of State.

As one goes back to read President Kennedy's campaign speeches and his first Inaugural Address and then looks at the record, they do not jibe. Something happened between the Inaugural Address, barely three months ago, and today to change the attitude of this Administration toward its foreign policy.

Professor Hans J. Morgenthau, one of the more competent students of American policy, makes an interesting point concerning men and policies. He said:

". . . The new men must work within old circumstances, domestic and international, and the circumstances will put their excellence to the test. Regardless of their convictions and intentions, they are the prisoners of the past — of established institutions, policies, and habits of mind . . ."

Thus, as regards the Cuban situation, the United States is bound by the error of negating the Platt Amendments and making itself a part of the Organization of American States, which means that such neutralist countries as Ecuador and Brazil, to say nothing of Venezuela and Mexico have to be consulted before we defend Miami. Actually, the United States does not have to do anything this country does not choose to do, but it is difficult to get out of entangling arrangements. The policy of disengagement, which is a new concept of isolationism, is very difficult to pursue. How does the United States disengage itself from obligations solemnly undertaken?

Thus, "the emancipation of the colonial and semi-colonial peoples of the world has entered its last stage in Africa," complicates our affairs to a point where we have driven Belgium out of the Congo and are now interfering with Portugal in Angola.

Will we have any Allies left? De Gaulle is answering that in his antipathies in NATO and the United Nations. We prefer Algeria to France, then why should France encourage American leadership?

We might speak of gratitude but as one studies history, he will not find the word, gratitude, anywhere. Politics is a realistic device for survival and one nation may survive at the expense of another, even at the expense of a friend.

The genius of Talleyrand, for instance, was that he concentrated on the survival of France. He lived through Louis XVI, the Revolution, Napoleon and the Congress of Vienna, always to serve and to strengthen France. He outwitted greater and mightier men because his purpose was always clear and his target always before him, namely, the survival of France. Talleyrand left a tradition in France which de Gaulle has pursued throughout his career. He has refused to walk to the right or the left of his line and France was never weaker than when de Gaulle asserted France's strength.

This we need to remember at all times: Soviet Russia's progress in 1960 was enormous and the prognosis is that it will continue to make gains in 1961. The African League of Positive Neutralists, call it what you will, surely means that Soviet Russian imperialism is replacing French imperialism in Africa and Asia, and whereas the United States objected to French imperialism, it shows no courage in opposing Soviet imperialism. Even in Laos, we have thus far talked more courageously than we have acted, despite the undeniable fact that if Laos goes to the Soviet, South Vietnam and Cambodia must go and that this imperils Thailand and Burma. If anyone in the State Department knows any geography at all, he must know that if the Bay of Bengal is Sovietland, India is a dead pigeon.

The Kennedy Administration must move swiftly. Soviet imperialism is moving too fast and obviously seeks a containment policy against the United States. Kennedy could head a country that is isolated not only from world trade but from world leadership. Soviet Russia is now courageously moving into the American hemisphere and thus far, the United States has taken no steps to protect its interests. There may be a strategy to support such a policy of Fabianism, but what it is no one can estimate.

BASCOM TIMMONS

Power-Grabbing

Kennedy Proposals Would Give President Too Much Control

It is not exactly surprising that charges of attempted Presidential "power - grabbing" have followed President Kennedy's special message to Congress proposing an overhauling of the Regulatory Agencies.

The Kennedy proposals if granted in totality by Congress would give the President unprecedented power over the independent regulatory agencies, which monitor the affairs of just about every corporation or business in the United States.

Congress itself thought a similar proposal made by President Franklin D. Roosevelt in 1937 was "power - grabbing." The legislative branch at that time refused to give Roosevelt the domination he sought over these agencies, although he was at the height of his popularity and had just won a re - election in which he carried every State in the Union with the exception of Maine and Vermont.

It is fair to say, however, that the Kennedy proposals are not wholly good nor wholly bad. His message to Congress was a complex one on a complex subject. To counsel Congress to go slow on it would seem to be superfluous. Congress is always jealous of new executive pretensions.

The message raises some question though of just how much legislation the President feels he needs from Congress and what he thinks he can effectuate by executive order and under re-organization power he already has.

There are 63 of these independent agencies which are not in any of the ten executive Cabinet Departments. Combined their powers are vastly greater than those of the Cabinet agencies, which are under the President. The independent regulatory agencies are arms of Congress.

The "big seven" of the regulatory agencies are the Interstate Commerce Commission, Federal Communications Commission, Federal Trade Commission, Securities and Exchange Commission, Civil Aeronautics Board and National Labor Relations Board.

Given dominion over that "big seven" the President would have effective control of American business. That business is likely to be all - out against most of the proposals was evident from the mail which has begun to descend upon Congress immediately after the Kennedy recommendations were sent to the Capitol.

That business is convinced it means more Government paper work and less freedom was also obvious from the tone of the mail, and it was patent that business considers the Kennedy Administration no blood brother.

It is easier to agree upon what is presently wrong with the regulatory agencies than upon what is needed to put them right. They have executive functions, quasi-executive functions and quasi-judicial functions. They undoubtedly have many and serious shortcomings in their operations.

President Kennedy emphasized a higher type of personnel as one of the needs of these agencies. Any one who has been around these agencies quickly sees they are for the most part composed of less than great men. Some of the Commissioners have no special qualifications, knowledge or background in the special fields in which they operate. Some of them are political lameducks and party hacks.

The Kennedy Administration itself has appointed its quota of lameducks — Democrats shot down by the voters in last years elections. The choice of better men already is a wholly executive function, abundantly provided for in the present laws committing to the President the selection of the commissioners.

Republicans have a nasty suspicion that the Kennedy Administration really wants to sweep out all the Eisenhower appointees and replace them with Kennedy selections. That could be. There has been intense pressure on some of them to get out — notably Jerome K. Kuykendall, chairman of FPC.

Although Congress has traditionally been very wary of giving the President more control of the agencies, this jealousy has been melted considerably by mounting criticism of the agencies' slowness in handing down decisions, their heavy backlogs and, in proven cases, downright inefficiency.

The agencies at least have been bi - partisan, the law providing a close division between parties in their makeup. But that law could be made a dead letter by giving the Chairmen of the regulatory agencies managerial reponsibilities under driect Presidential supervision, and making them removable at the will of the President if they do not follow White House policy.

And now Matheson, another frank Goldwager apostle, is running on May 2nd against another Udall —Morris, the 38-year-old younger brother and senior law partner of Stewart, who is Mr. Kennedy's Secretary of Interior.

Arizona's Second District, although nearly 4 to 1 Democratic in registration, went for Nixon last year, mainly because Senator Goldwater was campaigning for him and for Governor Paul Fannin. Stewart Udall won on his own energy and popularity, and is now lending moral and machine support to his brother. The race could be called a contest of coattails. It is also the kind of a race which could be decided by somebody losing rather than by somebody winning.

As a heavy registration favorite, Morris Udall would have to pull quite an upset to get himself beaten — but he may do so by some of the things he's said. To talk himself out of the race, Udall would be accomplishing another feat since Matheson's chief fault (easily corrected if he should become a freshman Congressman) is said to be loquacity. But Udall has made some real bloopers which Republicans aren't letting the voters forget.

In the late 1950's when Morris Udall was Pima County (Tucson) prosecutor, he asked the death sentence for an accused murderer in words that shook a lot of humanitarian hearts, and caused the case to be retired at the public expense of close to $100,000. Udall said:

"If it takes $5,000 a year to guard him and feed him and take care of him, he has got a life expectancy of 40 or 50 years, the taxpayers of Arizona are going to have to pay a quarter of a million dollars for the luxury of keeping him alive when he has done what he did and we can never trust him outside the prison walls."

This sounds like the arrogance of the rather young, and the word is that Morris Udall was matured by a subsequent election defeat for a judgeship. Still, at the Phoenix Press Club recently, he eulogized the leadership principle and declared, with documentation from his school years, that he had been a leader all his life. Udall opened his billboard campaign with the slogan: "Big Name. Big Man. Big Job." Somewhere along the way, he had second thoughts. The first third of the campaign sloan, "Big Name," has been deleted. But the Democratic candidate still calls himself a Big Man on the billboards.

In earlier days, it would be safer to predict that a man could talk his way out of an election by showing too little regard for another life and too much regard for his own importance. But the business of policical puffing, and greatness-by-self-assertion has become a mark of success in our times. Should Morris Udall win, he would join an Administration party which did not succeed by being modest or waiting to be "drafted." He would add another rubber stamp vote to the Democratic House majority, and would support a Federal Welfare program which is very much opposed in Arizona.

It looks like the strange case of a candidate who is running with the betting odds — and yet at odds with the sentiment of his State.

SYLVIA PORTER

Beware Rackets

Hundreds Of Thousands To Be Swindled By Fake Promoters

In the next few months, hundreds of thousands of U. S. families will be swindled by the unscrupulous promoters now working at a peak pace in the home improvement field — and unless you are thoroughly aware how these racketeers operate, recognize the threat to your pocketbook in an apparently tantalizing repair-improvement bargain, you easily may become one of 1961's victims.

Although, of course, the vast majority of firms in the home improvement industry are responsible, reputable businessmen, swindles — with inquiries and complaints on these alone running at 266,000 in 1960, up 46,500 from 1959, more than double the total of inquiries and complaints as recently as 1953. An informed estimate is that our losses from this fraud top a half-billion dollars a year, and with spending on home improvements now skyrocketing, the ABBB has little doubt that the number of victims and the volume of our losses will break all records this spring and summer.

How does the racket work? The operation has characteristics which, with variations, appear over and over and which give it the over-all name "The Model House" or "Pilot House" promotion. For instance:

A couple of men will ring your doorbell and present credentials implying they not only are reputable contractors but also represent well-known manufacturers in the housing supply industries. As an illustration, let's say your house obviously needs a re-siding job; your callers will represent themselves as experts in residing who have just come into your neighborhood and are looking for work.

Their first pitch to you will be that they can do a top-notch residing job for you at a bargain price because the supply firm they represent wants to advertise its product and is offering a special low price. Their second pitch will be that for every sale they make in your area, you'll get a commission of $50 or $100 and you'll also get a bonus for every bona fide customer you recommend.

This sounds great — you are to get a needed job done at a special bargain rate and the commissions you may earn on your "model home" can slash even that price to next to nothing. With high pressure selling thrown in, even ordinarily prudent homeowners are convinced and they sign contracts (called "mere formalities") obligating themselves to pay up to several thousand dollars for a repair job.

Once the contract is signed, the innocent homeowner is stuck. Not only will he discover that the price quoted was no bargain at all, but he'll also find the work done is sub-standard, the talk about fixing shingles, chimneys, etc., on the side was strictly talk and the commissions and bonuses are myths. The one part of the deal that is no myth, though, is the homeowner's pledge to pay. His contract is ironclad, is in the possession of a legitimate finance company — and while he pays, the original promoters are far away, victimizing other innocents.

The variations of this swindle will depend on what improvements your house obviously needs, but the key idea is that your home is to be a "model" and you're to collect juicy commissions on additional sales. In an interview on this, Victor H. Nyborg, president of the ABBB, went to the length of warning, "You should be on guard against any salesman suggesting your home will be used as a 'model,' and any implication that your commissions on resulting sales will cut your job's cost should make you suspect a racket."

As a basic protection, then, beware of any sales pitch about a "model home" and commissions. Before you agree to any improvement work, obtain specific estimates from several reliable local firms.

If you deal with an out-of-town contractor, check on your own how satisfactory his work has been and don't rely on written testimonials. Under no circumstances, sign a completion certificate until the work is in fact completed.

Tomorrow: The "Referral Selling" trap for gullible you.

POSTAL PLUM TREE? — It is not clear yet whether Postmaster General Day's success in having the Civil Service Commission cancel all existing examinations for postmaster positions and existing registers is a first step toward opening up all postmaster appointments to the party in power, but it does give Democrats a better shot at existing vacancies. Should it later be decided to shake the postoffice plum tree some ripe fruit would fall. There are 3,988 first class postoffices, 6,665 second class and 13,082 third class. The 11,503 fourth class postoffices have long been under strict civil service.

USIA BUDGET REQUESTS — Nomination of Edward Murrow to be chief of the U.S. Information Service, which went to the Senate this week, will get the routine treatment with no unnecessary delay in confirmation. Murrow, however, later will have to justify to both Senate and House of Representatives Appropriations Committee's USIA request that it needs $110.6 million for its operations in the next fiscal year. One Senator who wants more information on what USIA intends to do with the money is Senator John L. McClellan, Arkansas.

GEORGE SOKOLSKY

Too Many Cooks

Number Of Leftists Attempting To Be Secretary Of State

President Kennedy is having a tough time formulating his foreign policy. Perhaps too many cooks are at this broth, Rusk, Bowles, Stevenson, Harriman, to say nothing of Walter Lippmann. It has been suggested that each of these persons could be Secretary of State. Perhaps the difficulty is that each one would like to be or presumes that he is Secretary of State.

As one goes back to read President Kennedy's campaign speeches and his first Inaugural Address and then looks at the record, they do not jibe. Something happened between the Inaugural Address, barely three months ago, and today to change the attitude of this Administration toward its foreign policy.

Professor Hans J. Morgenthau, one of the more competent students of American policy, makes an interesting point concerning men and policies. He said:

" . . . The new men must work within old circumstances, domestic and international, and the circumstances will put their excellence to the test. Regardless of their convictions and intentions, they are the prisoners of the past — of established institutions, policies, and habits of mind . . ."

Thus, as regards the Cuban situation, the United States is bound by the error of negating the Platt Amendments and making itself a part of the Organization of American States, which means that such neutralist countries as Ecuador and Brazil, to say nothing of Venezuela and Mexico have to be consulted before we defend Miami. Actually, the United States does not have to do anything this country does not choose to do, but it is difficult to get out of entangling arrangements. The policy of disengagement, which is a new concept of isolationism, is very difficult to pursue. How does the United States disengage itself from obligations solemnly undertaken?

Thus, "the emancipation of the colonial and semi-colonial peoples of the world has entered its last stage in Africa," complicates our affairs to a point where we have driven Belgium out of the Congo and are now interfering with Portugal in Angola.

Will we have any Allies left? De Gaulle is answering that in his antipathies in NATO and the United Nations. We prefer Algeria to France, then why should France encourage American leadership?

We might speak of gratitude but as one studies history, he will not find the word, gratitude, anywhere. Politics is a realistic device for survival and one nation may survive at the expense of another, even at the expense of a friend.

The genius of Talleyrand, for instance, was that he concentrated on the survival of France. He lived through Louis XVI, the Revolution, Napoleon and the Congress of Vienna, always to serve and to strengthen France. He outwitted greater and mightier men because his purpose was always clear and his target always before him, namely, the survival of France. Talleyrand left a tradition in France which de Gaulle has pursued throughout his career. He has refused to walk to the right or the left of his line and France was never weaker than when de Gaulle asserted France's strength.

This we need to remember at all times: Soviet Russia's progress in 1960 was enormous and the prognosis is that it will continue to make gains in 1961. The African League of Positive Neutralists, call it what you will, surely means that Soviet Russian imperialism is replacing French imperialism in Africa and Asia, and whereas the United States objected to French imperialism, it shows no courage in opposing Soviet imperialism. Even in Laos, we have thus far talked more courageously than we have acted, despite the undeniable fact that if Laos goes to the Soviet, South Vietnam and Cambodia must go and that this imperils Thailand and Burma. If anyone in the State Department knows any geography at all, he must know that if the Bay of Bengal is Sovietland, India is a dead pigeon.

The Kennedy Administration must move swiftly. Soviet imperialism is moving too fast and obviously seeks a containment policy against the United States. Kennedy could head a country that is isolated not only from world trade but from world leadership. Soviet Russia is now courageously moving into the American hemisphere and thus far, the United States has taken no steps to protect its interests. There may be a strategy to support such a policy of Fabianism, but what it is no one can estimate.

BASCOM TIMMONS

Power-Grabbing

Kennedy Proposals Would Give President Too Much Control

It is not exactly surprising that charges of attempted Presidential "power-grabbing" have followed President Kennedy's special message to Congress proposing an overhauling of the Regulatory Agencies.

The Kennedy proposals if granted in totality by Congress would give the President unprecedented power over the independent regulatory agencies, which monitor the affairs of just about every corporation or business in the United States.

Congress itself thought a similar proposal made by President Franklin D. Roosevelt in 1937 was "power-grabbing." The legislative branch at that time refused to give Roosevelt the domination he sought over these agencies, although he was at the height of his popularity and had just won a re-election in which he carried every State in the Union with the exception of Maine and Vermont.

It is fair to say, however, that the Kennedy proposals are not wholly good nor wholly bad. His message to Congress was a complex one on a complex subject. To counsel Congress to go slow on it would seem to be superfluous. Congress is always jealous of new executive pretensions.

The message raises some question though of just how much legislation the President feels he needs from Congress and what he thinks he can effectuate by executive order and under re-organization power he already has.

There are 63 of these independent agencies which are not in any of the ten executive Cabinet Departments. Combined their powers are vastly greater than those of the Cabinet agencies, which are under the President. The independent regulatory agencies are arms of Congress.

The "big seven" of the regulatory agencies are the Interstate Commerce Commission, Federal Communications Commission, Federal Trade Commission, Securities and Exchange Commission, Civil Aeronautics Board and National Labor Relations Board.

Given dominion over that "big seven" the President would have effective control of American business. That business is likely to be all-out against most of the proposals was evident from the mail which began to descend upon Congress immediately after the Kennedy recommendations were sent to the Capitol.

That business is convinced it means more Government paper work and less freedom was also obvious from the tone of the mail, and it was patent that business considers the Kennedy Administration no blood brother.

It is easier to agree upon what is presently wrong with the regulatory agencies than upon what is needed to put them right. They have executive functions, quasi-executive functions and quasi-judicial functions. They undoubtedly have many and serious shortcomings in their operations.

President Kennedy emphasized a higher type of personnel as one of the needs of these agencies. Any one who has been around these agencies quickly sees they are for the most part composed of less than great men. Some of the Commissioners have no special qualifications, knowledge or background in the special fields in which they operate. Some of them are political lameducks and party hacks.

The Kennedy Administration itself has appointed its quota of lameducks — Democrats shot down by the voters in last years elections. The' choice of better men already is a wholly executive function, abundantly provided for in the present laws committing to the President the selection of the commissioners.

Republicans have a nasty suspicion that the Kennedy Administration really wants to sweep out all the Eisenhower appointees and replace them with Kennedy selections. That could be. There has been intense pressure on some of them to get out — notably Jerome K. Kuykendall, chairman of FPC.

Although Congress has traditionally been very wary of giving the President more control of the agencies, this jealousy has been melted considerably by mounting criticism of the agencies' slowness in handing down decisions, their heavy backlogs and, in proven cases, downright inefficiency.

The agencies at least have been bi-partisan, the law providing a close division between parties in their makeup. But that law could be made a dead letter by giving the Chairmen of the regulatory agencies managerial reponsibilities under driect Presidential supervision, and making them removable at the will of the President if they do not follow White House policy.

He May Be Sent Up In Test Run This Month

EDITOR'S NOTE — After millions of dollars and thousands of tests — and after the Soviets — the United States is about to launch an astronaut. Picking him will be more than a matter of eenie meenie minie mo but there's one thing guaranteed to leave a potential spaceman earth-bound—sniffles.

By HOWARD BENEDICT

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. (AP) —This nation's first spaceman waits tensely in the cramped capsule as the countdown crackles in his earphones.

He is on his back, resting on a foam couch fitted to every contour of his body. His knees are drawn up, so that he is like a man in a chair which had fallen over backwards.

Only the couch and a few inches of metal separate him from the 60 foot Redstone rocket—a powerful vehicle becoming more vibrant by the minute as fuel funnels into its thirsty tanks.

"Thirty minutes and counting," snaps the voice in the earphones.

DESIGNING

It is 7:30 a.m. In only half an hour, if everything goes right, the Redstone will tear loose from its earthly bonds and fling the astronaut 115 miles into space, depositing his capsule in the Atlantic Ocean 300 miles down range in 15 minutes.

Years of designing, engineering, testing and training are in the homestretch. The United States is ready to commit a man into space.

This epochal moment is not far off. If all goes according to plan, the flight could take place late this month or early in May. Sadly, the Americans know the Soviets got there first, sending a man into orbit and back earlier this month. But this only means disappointment, not a slow down, for Project Mercury.

The American space pilot probably won't be selected until three or four days before the scheduled launch. He will be one of these three men now in final training:

Marine Lt. Col. John H. Glenn Jr., 39, of New Concord, Ohio.

Air Force Capt. Virgil I. Grissom, 34, of Mitchell, Ind.

Navy Cmdr. Alan B. Shepard Jr., 37, of East Derry, N.H.

All are skilled test pilots, seasoned to pioneer space. They are men in superb physical condition. Each is married and the father of two children.

ASTRONAUT

The final choice will be made by Robert Gilruth, the scientist who directs the Project Mercury man in space program. It was he who whittled the original field of seven astronauts to a pool of three to train for the initial sub-orbital flight.

The chosen astronaut will have been toughened by hours in low pressure chambers, wind tunnels, whirling centrifuges, hot and cold chambers, supersonic jets and isolation in dark, soundproof rooms.

When the pilot steps into the Mercury capsule, the interior will be as familiar to him as his own living room. He has run through countless flights in a ground based simulated capsule and knows by memory and instinct the position and purpose of hundreds of lights, dials and switches.

"We feel that we're thoroughly trained for the mission," says astronaut Shepard. "All we need is the go ahead."

Gilruth will name one prime astronaut and one backup for the initial flight. The backup will substitute if the No. 1 choice becomes physically or psychologically ill in the final hours.

"A slight head cold would eliminate the prime astronaut," explained Gilruth.

For the three days before the flight, a medical team will keep them under almost constant observation.

Several hours before scheduled lift-off time, the prime astronaut is to enter a trailer-like van at Cape Canaveral. Here he receives a final examination and dons his silver-coated space suit — a complex pressurized uniform which is surprisingly mobile despite built-in wiring, piping, air conditioning and communications facilities.

When the countdown reaches three hours, a truck tows the van 3½ miles to Launch Complex 26A where the Redstone rocket is poised for firing.

The astronaut slowly climbs the criss-crossing stairs of the red and white service tower.

"One hundred and twenty minutes and counting," barks a loud speaker below.

It's time to enter the capsule—a 1½ ton bell-shaped vehicle covered with corrugated metal shingles which hardly fits the description of sleek space ships envisioned by most people. The "can," as the astronauts call it, is 9 feet tall, 6 feet across its rounded heat shield base.

The shape and weight were to a great extent determined by the size and power capability of the Redstone and the Atlas, which will boost the capsule on later manned orbit flights.

The space chamber is laced with seven miles of wiring, connecting various elements of the environmental, instrument, control and communications systems.

The environmental system is designed to maintain cabin temperature of about 70 degrees throughout the flight, to remove carbon dioxide and water, and to provide comfortable humidity. If it should fail, the space suit will serve the same purpose.

If any part of the control system should malfunction, the pilot could operate it either manually or semi automatically.

If the Redstone develops trouble on liftoff or during the 141 seconds of powered flight, a 15½ foot escape tower, which resembles a miniature oil derrick, will jerk the capsule away from the rocket. Then a parachute lowers the capsule.

"One hundred minutes and counting."

THROUGH

The astronaut crawls through the narrow opening and settles in his couch. A few last minute words, then a metal plate covers the opening. Skilled hands at the hatch with more than 140 nuts, bolts and screws.

"Now comes one of the most trying parts of the mission," says astronaut Grissom. "Just sitting and waiting while the final hour of the countdown ticks away. The pilot will be kept busy talking by radio with the Mercury control center. But it will be a rough 60 minutes. A lot of things can pass through a man's mind."

The pilot hears the steel service tower roll away on railroad tracks.

The countdown quickens.

"Sixtey second... 50... 30... 15... 10 . . . 9 . . . 8 . . . 3 . . . 2. . . 1. . . zero!"

The Redstone flashes to life, showering the pad with flaming liquid fuel.

Thousands of persons on the beaches south of the cape, millions watching the launch on live television — all hold their breath as the big rocket slowly lumbers away from the earth, gradually picking up speed as the tons of fuel are rapidly consumed.

The shriek of the mighty engine pierces the astronaut's ears and he feels the violent vibration of the rocket beneath him.

As the missile accelerates, a great hand called "G" forces pushes the pilot to his couch. This pressure of 6 Gs six times the pull of gravity makes breathing difficult. The pilot's respiratory muscles strain to overcome the pressing force. His heart doubles its normal beat. The instrument panel appears fuzzy. His feet and arms are difficult to move because they now weigh six times heavier than normal.

In rapid sequence, 141 seconds after launch at an altitude of 35 miles, the Redstone burns out and separates from the capsule, the escape tower jettisons, and small rockets at the base of the capsule fire to push the craft ahead and away from the booster.

Five seconds later an automatic stabilization and control system flips the space chariot around 180 degrees so the blunt heat shield base is in a forward position. The pilot now is sitting upright, his back toward the direction he is traveling.

Just as suddenly as they came, the G forces leave and the astronaut's body becomes light. The capsule is racing through space at more than 5,000 miles an hour and the passenger has dropped, as if over a cliff, into a weird and weightless world.

It is all over in five minutes. The capsule plunges back into the thick atmosphere of the earth and G forces again grip the man, with nearly twice the tenacity as before.

TEMPERATURES

Temperatures up to 600 degrees fahrenheit build up in front of the capsule as it dives earthward—but the beryllium shield that covers the base pushes the heat away.

The atmospheric density slows the capsule. At 42,000 feet a small parachute pops out and reduces the speed to 600 miles an hour. At 10,000 feet, a 63 foot main chute blossoms to ease the space craft into the ocean, landing it with no more force than if it had fallen off a 14 foot wall.

If all went right, 16 minutes after launch the capsule impacts northeast of Grand Bahama Island, in an area saturated with recovery ships and planes. In case the vehicle is off course, dye markers, radio beacons, flashing lights and other recovery aids are activated.

A helicopter swoops down, plucks the capsule from the sea and delivers it to a ship.

The astronaut is ferried by helicopter to a medical facility on Grand Bahama Island for thorough examination. Actually weeks will be required to assess the results of the flight.

A space agency aero medical officer commented: "No matter how many times a man has responded well to laboratory simulation of flight conditions—loneliness, a few seconds of weightlessness, spinning, tumbling, G forces, noise, vibration—the test comes when he faces the real thing."

If the first up and down Redstone boosted flight is successful, other astronauts including some of the four not chosen for the initial flight pool — will be strapped in capsules, perhaps at six week intervals, for similar suborbital trips.

Ultimate goal of Project Mercury is to place an astronaut in orbit and return him safely to earth, hopefully late this year. That flight will take the pilot three times around the globe in 4½ hours at a speed of 17,400 miles an hour. The Soviet astronaut, Yuri Gagarin, orbited once.

Beyond Mercury lie Apollo and other projects aimed at sending man to the moon and other planets.

Many things must be learned before these programs can proceed. The first big step may be taken soon from Launch Complex 26A at Cape Canaveral.

Best Show On Earth Is President,s News Meet

WASHINGTON (AP)—The best show on earth today is a news conference by Pierre Salinger, President Kennedy's press secretary.

Salinger meets with reporters twice daily.

In theory, this is the way to learn what's going on in the White House.

In practice, it turns into a journalistic hodgepodge in which world problems, gamboling hamsters, eminent foreign visitors, Mrs. Kennedy, Cabinet members and the dog Charlie all frisk through the questioning gaily and democratically.

Pressing officer, or head imp, is the chubby Salinger, 35. Puffing a cigar, his eyes half closed, Salinger often looks like a contented boy who had intended to light only one firecracker but is glad now the whole pack blew up.

"It's really wonderful," Salinger observed one day, "how these briefings disintegrate into the insignificant."

The room was crowded, but not a voice was raised in dissent.

It's hard to capture in cold print the atmosphere that goes with the babble, but it will help if you remember that the several voices reported separately here were often speaking simultaneously.

The questions were skittering through a variety of presidential hopes when a reporter cut in with: "Pierre, on a more important subject, I have been asked to inquire about the hamsters." (These White House pets had escaped over the weekend). "What's the situation now?"

Salinger: "You will be happy to hear the hamsters have been found."

Q. "How many of them?"

A. "Two of them. They were found this morning in the solarium."

First reporter: "Oh."

Second reporter: "Gamboling?"

Salinger: "They have been returned to their cages, and strict security measures have been taken to make sure they don't escape again."

"Q. "How long were they missing?"

A. "Well, they were missing from Friday night. Debbie hamster was last seen Friday at midnight, in the President's bathroom."

Voice from the rear: "Tish, tish!"

Salinger (continuing undisturbed): "And she was returned to her cage, and again made a get-away in the night and was missing next morning."

Q. "would you ascribe all this to spring?"

Q. "What's the name of the other one?"

Salinger: "Billie."

Now a chorus of voices:

"He was missing all Friday night?"

"What's the matter with the cages? How did they get out?"

Salinger: "They are extremely intelligent hamsters."

Another day Salinger is absent. His assistant, Andrew Hatcher, takes over, with Mrs. Kennedy's press secretary, Pamela Turnure, helping out.

Q. "Can you confirm for me whether the dog Charlie is now at Glen Ora?"

Miss T.: "Charlie is at Glen Ora."

Q. "How about the pony?"

Miss T.: "I don't know about the pony."

Q. "Is Charlie in good health?"

Hatcher: "He's romping."

Q. "He's romping?"

Hatcher: "All over the place, I guess."

Q. "Is Charlie the only pet now at Glen Ora?"

Miss T.: "Unless he made some friends."

Hatcher: "Unless you consider the ponies pets."

Even a casual reader would know that such gems would never be found at a news conference held by James C. Hagerty, Salinger's predecessor.

Hagerty never encouraged questions on Eisenhower's private life, and queries involving Mrs. Eisenhower were shunted of to her social secretary, Mary Jane McCaffree.

Nor did Hagerty have to deal with a volatile president who possessed a bouncing family.

On every count, it is inconceivable that Hagerty would ever be involved in an exchange like this:

Q. "May I ask if Caroline calls her nurse Nanny, and why isn't she calling her by an American name, since this is a British term?" (laughter)

Salinger: "I have no idea."

Another reporter: "Maybe her name is Nanny." (much laughter).

Salinger's news conferences are mostly serious, of course. The samples quoted here are the merry exceptions.

For whether a presidential news secretary is playful or stern or somewhere in between, he has an important and challenging job.

A few examples will show how varied and complex is his task.

1. He must often clarify for reporters the president's position on controversial issues, and he must occasionally report on a presidential meeting with an important visitor. A misstep by a news secretary here can be almost as embarrassing as a stumble by the President.

2. He should be a leader among those who keep the president alert to public reaction.

If the tide starts to run against the administration, he should advise the president on how he can best reverse it. Should he use a news conference to drive his point home, or should he make a radio and television appeal which, coupled with newspaper accounts, might help him regain the initiative?

3. The news secretary must brief the president before his news conferences so he won't get caught empty-handed and empty-headed—and blurt out an answer that would make him seem foolish and irresponsible.

4. He and his helpers have scores of routine chores: answering newsmen's unending flow of queries from all over America, deciding when photographers are to be let in for shots of the president and his visitors, helping newsmen, more or less, with their problems when a president goes out of town, producing copies of speeches and a little background on presidential appointments.

Under Salinger this often looks like an informal, nocturnal hamster hunt.

There is considerable scurrying about, and the excitement is increased by the thought that in this threshing and milling bigger and more important game may be flushed.

Under these helter-skelter conditions, a few things naturally go awry.

Names sometimes are misspelled in White House handouts. Sometimes the background on presidential appointments leaves gaping holes.

Photographers complain their instructions are often confusing and maybe contradictory.

And over all is a gentle fog of uncertainty about what will happen next.

One day recently Salinger told reporters to be ready to handle an important message to Congress that night. A few hours later, the signals mysteriously changed. The message wouldn't be ready that night after all; indeed, it wouldn't be ready for another week.

Obviously Salinger's difficulties stem partly, maybe chiefly, from the Kennedys themselves.

They may keep their collective eye on the main chance, but on minor details they are not a plan-ahead family. A news secretary can hardly be blamed if his battle plans are untidy.

Yet even granting this, as the text of the news conferences show, Salinger and his merry group seem capable of fomenting a little confusion of their own.

Reporters once left the White House in a comradely body during the noon hour after Hagerty "put the lid on" further announcements. Now they prudently arrange to eat in relays, with a sentinel standing by at all times.

And now, lest the wrong impression be drawn:

Whatever his minor errors, Salinger still hasn't pulled a blooper of consequence. He apparently has the full confidence and support of the man who counts, the President. And even his severest critics admit the press section of the White House has become a livelier, merrier place.

THE STORY OF FATHER DOMINIQUE PIRE. As Told to Hugues Vehenne. Dutton. $4.50.

In 1958 Father Pire, a priest of the Dominican Order, was awarded the Nobel Peace Prize. He was the moving force behind the Aid For Displaced Persons Organization.

Father Pire was interested not so much in Displaced Persons as a group, but in their residue. There were official refugee programs, but they salvaged only the able bodied DP's who could be transported to new lands and new jobs. The residue came to be called the "hard core," and mostly they were the aged, the ill, and those whose occupations were not needed. The "hard core" were the helpless and the hopeless.

At first it was a matter of finding godmothers and godfathers who would send a little money or a little food and clothing. Finally Father Pire began founding European Villages where these people could feel they had a home. The book is partly autobiography, partly biography, sometimes told in interview form. Vehenne has made skillful use of a typographical device, with the priest's own words in Roman type and the biographical background in Italics.

There is enough material on the subject's childhood and education to give you a good picture of his life and personality, but of course a great deal of the book is devoted to the work that won the prize. And Father Pire's troubles with laggard or jealous opposition, his trials, errors and tribulations are discussed frankly.

Guide To Good Reading

By FRANCES FLANDERS
Ouachita Parish Librarian

National Library Week closed yesterday and we can truly say that the celebration this year is one of the best we have ever had. Hundreds of people in Ouachita Parish cooperated to make it a success. Under the capable leadership of the Parish chairman, Mrs. A. E. Montgomery, everything worked with the greatest ease. The cooperation from the Newspapers, radio and T.V. Stations and motion picture theatres was wonderful. The exhibits in the different stores were interesting and timely. Again we say thank you to the people of Ouachita Parish, the finest people in the world.

New books continue to offer a variety of reading material. "The Golden Greek" by Warren Tute is the story of one man's breath - taking rise to a huge shipping fortune. Cario, London, Athens, Paris and New York are all part of the novel's glittering cosmeplitan background. Gerald Green, who made his reputation several years ago with "The Last Angry Man" has a new book called "The Heartless Light". This is a story of the publicity that surrounded the kidnapping of a child in Los Angeles and of the effect that it had on the family. Gerald Green brings the case to life with bold strokes. It is an exciting, poignant and disturbing book. Robert Nathan has written another beautiful book "The Wilderness Stone". It is the story of Miranda and it is a magical tale which illuminates his belief that love is immortal and hence transcends the bounds of man's mortal time on earth. In building up the library collection, we also work to replace copies of older books which have worn out. This week three copies of Thomas Hardy's "Tess of the 'Durbervilles" were added to the library collection. This will be good news to students of the English novel. Emil Brunner is the author of "I Believe in the Living God", a series of sermons on the Apostle's Creed. It is beautifully written and makes inspiring reading. The schools of Louisiana are making a study of the insidious teachings of the Communist party and the Library is attempting to supply much of the needed material for this study. Several books of this time were received during the past week. "An Introduction to Democratic Theory" is a very splendid book by Henry B. Mayo and should prove most useful. Louis O. Kelso has written the "Capitalist Manifesto" which gives very strong arguments for the American way of life. Samuel Hendel is the author of "The Soviet Crucible" which is a most illuminating book and should be read by everyone who has any questions about how the Russians live.

An interesting gift to the Library is a 14 volume set of the United States Code, 1958 edition. This is a codification of the laws of our country and should be most useful. Margaret Mead is one of the outstanding anthropologists of our day. She has written a very fine book called "The Golden Age of Anthropology. This book will be of interest to all who like to read about ancient man. "Principles of Plant Breeding" by R. W. Allard is a very useful book for gardners of all types. It is a very scholarly and accurate book and we are happy to have two copies. A beautiful and unusual book is "Oriental Rugs" by Herman Haack. Anyone who is considering putting money into such an expensive purchase, should read this book first. The library is often asked for books on ventriloquism and we have a new title on this subject called "Practical Ventriloquism. Bridge players will want to read "How to Win at Duplicate Bridge" by Robert Miles. This is a very good study of the subject.

A very lovely book selected from the "Notable Book List" of 1961 is "Goodbye to a River" by John Graves. This is the story of the exploration of the Brazos River in Texas and will particularly interest people in this part of the country. "Common Sense About Russia" by Robert Conquest is a book to make one sit up and think. A very fine book, which has already reached the best seller list is "The White Nile" by Alan Moorehead. This is a history and travel book of the interior of Africa and is for all those who like adventure.

Biographies are always popular and there are several outstanding ones this week. "Robert Frost; the Trial by Existence" is a very fine biography by Elizabeth S. Sergeant and it is also on the notable book list for 1960. One of the most controversial women of history was Mary, Queen of Scots. A new biography of her has just been written by N. Bryson Morrison. The story has been told before, but Mr. Morrison retells it well. Everyone who enjoyed Robert Ruark's "The Old Man and the Boy", which appeared in 1957, will want to read the sequal "The Old Man's Boy Grows Older". The first book was based on the author's memories of his grandfather. In this book the old man is no more but the echos of his patient instruction, his gentle championship and warm humor are here again, guiding the boy as he meets his adult problems and adventures. "When F.D.R. Died" by Bernard Ashbell reconstructs the last day of the life of President Roosevelt and tells how those most closely affected received the news and reacted to it. It is a book to make us remember and look back.

Are you using the resources of the Ouachita Parish Public Library. They are here for you and you should take advantage of them.

RUNNING THE SCALES

Theatre, Pianist Put Area On Map

By JOHN CALE
Staff Writer

Little Theatre's "Damn Yankees" which closed Wednesday in the new Strauss Playhouse has put Monroe on the theatrical map.

Pericles Alexander of the Shreveport Times attended a performance and was favorably impressed with what he termed a "gem of a theatre." He forecast that by 1963 or '64, Monroe would be vying for top honors in live theatre productions for the entire southwest.

The Crossett, Arkansas, Community Concerts association will close its 1960-'61 season with a program tomorrow evening by the Swedish ballad singer, William Clauson. The balladeer will feature a variety of folk songs and ballads from many countries and will accompany himself on the guitar.

A special concert by the Twin City Symphony orchestra has been slated for 3 p.m. Sunday, May 7, at Sherrouse School auditorium. The program will feature piano concertos performed by four students from northeast Louisiana. The Monroe Youth Orchestra has also slated a program for 1:30 p.m. Saturday at Neville.

Pianist Van Cliburn visited his home territory of Shreveport and points in Texas last week. It is always good to see a person from the South — long falsely accused of being a cultural desert — rise to the top of the fine arts ladder.

But Cliburn in a speech to a Shreveport civic club decided to go out on a political limb and come to the support of the proposed "Peace Corps." Perhaps Cliburn sees in such activities an area where many personal friendships can be made. No doubt, the Russian audiences he has played to were sincere in their appreciation. The young American pianist can be sure, however, that such a reception was "permitted" rather than spontaneous. And it is doubtful that the "Peace Corps" could do much more than gain permission to function in other countries.

Closer to home, a West Monroe pianist, Floyd Cramer, has worked his way to top levels in popular recording circles. Cramer's parents, Mr. and Mrs. De Witt Cramer who live on Wellerman Road, furnished information about Floyd's accomplishments.

Young Cramer performs on the same 88 keys as Van Cliburn. But instead of Beethoven, Cramer worked with background chords. He had some formal training in piano in his early youth in Shreveport and Huttig, Arkansas.

His first real workouts came on the Louisiana Hayride broadcasts in Shreveport. There he played piano in the small combos which backed Web Pierce and Elvis Presley among others.

Following the route sketched in a previous "scales" column, Cramer went to Nashville, Tennessee, where he continued to work as a supporting performer. Around 1955, he tried one recording with a West Coast company, but found those background chords for big names provided more substantial earnings.

Last fall, Cramer moved out front again with an album, "Hello Blues," and a single recording entitled, "Last Date." Making the rounds now is an exceptionally clean piece of "pop" work on an original composition, "On the Rebound." All of these have appeared under a nationally circulated label as manipulated through Chet Atkins' office in Nashville.

At present, Cramer is in Hawaii working on a new Elvis Presley movie. Even with "Rebound" in the good selling category, the young entertainer apparently has no notion of going completely solo.

If this is the case, Cramer has chosen — wisely, we believe — a route of endurance rather than the "flash in the pan." At any rate his smooth, tinkling piano with a mild case of civilized blues is a vast improvement over much that has passed for "music" in the popular field over the past five years.

If Floyd Cramer has established a new trend in his field, let's give due recognition to a prophet right in his home territory.

About Records

CONCERT

There is some effort to kid you that the beauties in a record called "Music for a Golden Flute" have something to do with the instrument being 14 karat gold. Don't go for it. Those beauties are due to the man who was mouthing the business end of the instrument.

He is Maurice Sharp, flutist of the Cleveland Orchestra, an Indiana boy who made himself a flute - master without a peer. It is exciting to hear an instrument so delicate and subtle exploited to just about its fullest possibilities.

His pieces were by Gaffes, Foote, Honegger and Hanson. None can be described as great music, but they were composed specifically for the flute and with feeling for the flute. Sharp was accompanied by the reduced version of the Cleveland Orchestra called the Cleveland Sinfonietta (Epic 1116).

For organ devotees there are two records. One was made by the esteemed and blind French organist, Andre Marchal, playing the rich-toned organ at Syracuse (N.Y.) University through a repertory of pieces from the great French school of organ composers (Westminster 14130).

Virgil Fox's repertory is from the same source, and the record is called "Organ Music from France." His instrument was the great organ in New York's Riverside Church. All this music was composed by organists, one must keep in mind, and was more bent to fit an instrument than for free flight in musical expression. But for what it was composed, to glorify the organ, it is superb (Capitol 8:11).

Unbelievable as it will sound, RCA Victor has produced still another recording of a Toscanini-NBC Symphony radio broadcast of the early 1940's. This one is of the broadcast of Feb. 22, 1941, when the pieces were act 1, scene 3 of "Die Walkure" and excerpts from "Die Gotterdammerung."

The singers were Helen Traubel and Lauritz Melchior. In 1941 they were the best Wagnerian singers around, just as Toscanini was the most adored of conductors. You're carried back to a great day. Once more you admire the superb Toscanini art. Yet the recorded is dated by more than time; it is dated by obsolescent recording techniques (2452).

On the other hand, a Wagner recording by Paul Paray conducting the Detroit Symphony is made gorgeous by advanced recording techniques, but the Wagner is not exceptional, being a potpourri of overtures and excerpts from operas (Mercury-5022).

POPULAR

If Vito Pisa were not one of New York's most successful restaurateurs, he could easily become a prosperous figure in the phonograph record business.

The affable proprietor of Chez Vito has been charming his customers for years with intimate, romantic music. Wandering fiddlers serenade each table with silky strains from the classics and semi-classics.

For those who can't come back because of geographical distance, Mr. Vito has offered two LP's in [illegible]. He enjoyed [illegible] with them that he has now [illegible] a third "Romance at Chez Vito" (Vito V-1?), which is [illegible]. The [illegible] confine themselves to such popular tunes as "Long Ago and Far Away" and "Secret Love," as well as Italian favorites, among them "Serenata Sincera."

More than a decade ago Eddy Howard became an overnight favorite with "To Each His Own." This is one of 12 songs in a reprise of Howard's successes called "Golden Hits" (Mercury MG-20562).

Only a few weeks ago, "Gone With the Wind" was shown again in the city of its inspiration, Atlanta. The only official full - range recording of the sound track of this movie classic now may be heard on "Gone With the Wind" (Warner Bros. W1322).

Like Eddy Howard, tiny Teresa Brewer has been a favorite since she popularized "When I Waltz Again With You." Many of the western-flavored songs she sings so well are wrapped up in "Songs Everybody Knows" by Tessie (Coral CRL 757361). "Jealous Heart," "Mexicali Rose" and "Walking the Floor Over You" are especially handled with enthusiasm by Miss Brewer.

"Sam Cooke" (RCA Victor LPM-2293) spotlights the teen-agers' favorite in spirituals and folk songs in modern arrangements. It is a needed excursion into some of America's best music.

Selected Singles — "Chapel by the Sea" by Louis Prima (Dot 16193), "The Charanga" by Merv Griffin (Carlton 545), "Havah Nagilah" by Arthur Lyman Group (HiFiRecord H-5024), "The Kisses" by Buddy Knox (Liberty F-55305).

LP's of the Week — (Mono) "Jazzland: The Stars of Jazz 1961" (Jazzland 1001). Woody Herman, Nat Adderley, Zoot Sims, Winter, Bishop and other bright lights of modern jazz share the tracks in an impressive session. (Stereo) "Line Renaud at the Casino de Paris" (Capitol ST-10257). New songs sung in French by Loulou Gaste and Miss Renaud in a fine recording of the revue "Plaisirs."

Peak Into A Weird Life

I LOVE YOU HONEY, BUT THE SEASON'S OVER. By Connie Clausen. Holt, Rinehart and Winston. $3.95.

Who can resist a circus?

But give the author credit, this is more than just a book of laughs about circus life. Miss Clausen is a good reporter with a perceptive mind. She brings to her pages a fascinating crowd of remarkable human beings, brave and pathetic, earthy and frank, but always loyal to the circus motto, "Be with it, and for it."

He May Be Sent Up In Test Run This Month

EDITOR'S NOTE — After millions of dollars and thousands of tests — and after the Soviets — the United States is about to launch an astronaut. Picking him will be more than a matter of eenie meenie minie mo but there's one thing guaranteed to leave a potential spaceman earthbound—sniffles.

By HOWARD BENEDICT

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. (AP)—This nation's first spaceman waits tensely in the cramped capsule as the countdown crackles in his earphones.

He is on his back, resting on a foam couch fitted to every contour of his body. His knees are drawn up, so that he is like a man in a chair which had fallen over backwards.

Only the couch and a few inches of metal separate him from the 60 foot Redstone rocket—a powerful vehicle becoming more vibrant by the minute as fuel funnels into its thirsty tanks.

"Thirty minutes and counting," snaps the voice in the earphones.

DESIGNING

It is 7:30 a.m. In only half an hour, if everything goes right, the Redstone will tear loose from its earthly bonds and fling the astronaut 115 miles into space, depositing his capsule in the Atlantic Ocean 300 miles down range in 16 minutes.

Years of designing, engineering, testing and training are in the homestretch. The United States is ready to commit a man into space.

This epochal moment is not far off. If all goes according to plan, the flight could take place late this month or early in May. Sadly, the Americans know the Soviets got there first, sending a man into orbit and back earlier this month. But this only means disappointment, not a slow down, for Project Mercury.

The American space pilot probably won't be selected until three or four days before the scheduled launch. He will be one of these three men now in final training:

Marine Lt. Col. John H. Glenn Jr., 39, of New Concord, Ohio.

Air Force Capt. Virgil I. Grissom, 34, of Mitchell, Ind.

Navy Cmdr. Alan B. Shepard Jr., 37, of East Derry, N.H.

All are skilled test pilots, seasoned to pioneer space. They are men in superb physical condition. Each is married and the father of two children.

ASTRONAUT

The final choice will be made by Robert Gilruth, the scientist who directs the Project Mercury man in space program. It was he who whittled the original field of seven astronauts to a pool of three to train for the initial suborbital flight.

The chosen astronaut will have been toughened by hours in low pressure chambers, wind tunnels, whirling centrifuges, hot and cold chambers, supersonic jets and isolation in dark, soundproof rooms.

When the pilot steps into the Mercury capsule, the interior will be as familiar to him as his own living room. He has run through countless flights in a ground based simulated capsule and knows by memory and instinct the position and purpose of hurdreds of lights, dials and switches.

"We feel that we're thoroughly trained for the mission," says astronaut Shepard. "All we need is the go ahead."

Gilruth will name one prime astronaut and one backup for the initial flight. The backup will substitute if the No. 1 choice becomes physically or psychologically ill in the final hours.

"A slight head cold would eliminate the prime astronaut," explained Gilruth.

For the three days before the flight, a medical team will keep them under almost constant observation.

Several hours before scheduled lift-off time, the prime astronaut is to enter a trailer-like van at Cape Canaveral. Here he receives a final examination and dons his silver-coated space suit — a complex pressurized uniform which is surprisingly mobile despite built-in wiring, piping, air conditioning and communications facilities.

When the countdown reaches three hours, a truck tows the van 3½ miles to Launch Complex 26A where the Redstone rocket is poised for firing.

The astronaut slowly climbs the criss-crossing stairs of the red and white service tower.

"One hundred and twenty minutes and counting," barks a loud speaker below.

It's time to enter the capsule—a 1½ ton bell-shaped vehicle covered with corrugated metal shingles which hardly fits the description of sleek space ships envisioned by most people. The "can," as the astronauts call it, is 9 feet tall, 6 feet across its rounded heat shield base.

The shape and weight were to a great extent determined by the size and power capability of the Redstone and the Atlas, which will boost the capsule on later manned orbit flights.

The space chamber is laced with seven miles of wiring, connecting various elements of the environmental, instrument, control and communications systems.

The environmental system is designed to maintain cabin temperature of about 70 degrees throughout the flight, to remove carbon dioxide and water, and to provide comfortable humidity. If it should fail, the space suit will serve the same purpose.

If any part of the control system should malfunction, the pilot could operate it either manually or semi automatically.

If the Redstone develops trouble on liftoff or during the 141 seconds of powered flight, a 15½ foot escape tower, which resembles a miniature oil derrick, will jerk the capsule away from the rocket. Then a parachute lowers the capsule.

"One hundred minutes and counting."

THROUGH

The astronaut crawls through the narrow opening and settles in his couch. A few last minute words, then a metal plate covers the opening. Skilled hands at the hatch with more than 140 nuts, bolts and screws.

"Now comes one of the most trying parts of the mission," says astronaut Grissom. "Just sitting and waiting while the final hour of the countdown ticks away. The pilot will be kept busy talking by radio with the Mercury control center. But it will be a rough 60 minutes. A lot of things can pass through a man's mind."

The pilot hears the steel service tower roll away on railroad tracks.

The countdown quickens.

"Sixtey second... 50... 30... 15... 10 . . . 9 . . . 8 . . . 3 . . 2. . . 1. . . zero!"

The Redstone flashes to life, showering the pad with flaming liquid fuel.

Thousands of persons on the beaches south of the cape, millions watching the launch on live television — all hold their breath as the big rocket slowly lumbers away from the earth, gradually picking up speed as the tons of fuel are rapidly consumed.

The shriek of the mighty engine pierces the astronaut's ears and he feels the violent vibration of the rocket beneath him.

As the missile accelerates, a great hand called "G" forces pushes the pilot to his couch. This pressure of 6 Gs six times the pull of gravity makes breathing difficult. The pilot's respiratory muscles strain to overcome the pressing force. His heart doubles its mormal beat. The instrument panel appears fuzzy. His feet and arms are difficult to move because they now weigh six times heavier than normal.

In rapid sequence, 141 seconds after launch at an altitude of 35 miles, the Redstone burns out and separates from the capsule, the escape tower jettisons, and small rockets at the base of the capsule fire to push the craft ahead and away from the booster.

Five seconds later an automatic stabilization and control system flips the space chariot around 180 degrees so the blunt heat shield base is in a forward position. The pilot now is sitting upright, his back toward the direction he is traveling.

Just as suddenly as they came, the G forces leave and the astronaut's body becomes light. The capsule is racing through space at more than 5,000 miles an hour and the passenger has dropped, as if over a cliff, into a weird and weightless world.

It is all over in five minutes. The capsule plunges back into the thick atmosphere of the earth and G forces again grip the man, with nearly twice the tenacity as before.

TEMPERATURES

Temperatures up to 600 degrees fahrenheit build up in front of the capsule as it dives earthward—but the beryllium shield that covers the base pushes the heat away.

The atmospheric density slows the capsule. At 42,000 feet a small parachute pops out and reduces the speed to 600 miles an hour. At 10,000 feet, a 63 foot main chute blossoms to ease the space craft into the ocean, landing it with no more force than if it had fallen off a 14 foot wall.

If all went right, 16 minutes after launch the capsule impacts northeast of Grand Bahama Island, in an area saturated with recovery ships and planes. In case the vehicle is off course, dye markers, radio beacons, flashing lights and other recovery aids are activated.

A helicopter swoops down, plucks the capsule from the sea and delivers it to a ship.

The astronaut is ferried by helicopter to a medical facility on Grand Bahama Island for thorough examination. Actually weeks will be required to assess the results of the flight.

A space agency aero medical officer commented: "No matter how many times a man has responded well to laboratory simulation of flight conditions—loneliness, a few seconds of weightlessness, spinning, tumbling, G forces, noise, vibration—the test comes when he faces the real thing."

If the first up and down Redstone boosted flight is successful, other astronauts—including some of the four not chosen for the initial flight pool — will be strapped in capsules, perhaps at six week intervals, for similar suborbital trips.

Ultimate goal of Project Mercury is to place an astronaut in orbit and return him safely to earth, hopefully late this year. That flight will take the pilot three times around the globe in 4½ hours at a speed of 17,400 miles an hour. The Soviet astronaut, Yuri Gagarin, orbited once.

Beyond Mercury lie Apollo and other projects aimed at sending man to the moon and other planets.

Many things must be learned before these programs can proceed. The first big step may be taken soon from Launch Complex 26A at Cape Canaveral.

Portrait Of Deep Devotion

THE STORY OF FATHER DOMINIQUE PIRE. As Told to Hugues Vehenne. Dutton. $4.50.

In 1958 Father Pire, a priest of the Dominican Order, was awarded the Nobel Peace Prize. He was the moving force behind the Aid For Displaced Persons' Organization.

Father Pire was interested not so much in Displaced Persons as a group, but in their residue. There were official refugee programs, but they salvaged only the able bodied DP's who could be transported to new lands and new jobs. The residue came to be called the "hard core," and mostly they were the aged, the ill, and those whose occupations were not needed. The "hard core" were the helpless and the hopeless.

At first it was a matter of finding godmothers and godfathers who would send a little money or a little food and clothing. Finally Father Pire began founding European Villages where these people could feel they had a home. The book is partly autobiography, partly biography, sometimes told in interview form. Vehenne has made skillful use of a typographical device, with the priest's own words in Roman type and the biographical background in Italics.

There is enough material on the subject's childhood and education to give you a good picture of his life and personality, but of course a great deal of the book is devoted to the work that won the prize. And Father Pire's troubles with laggard or jealous opposition, his trials, errors and tribulations are discussed frankly.

Best Show On Earth Is President,s News Meet

WASHINGTON (AP)—The best show on earth today is a news conference by Pierre Salinger, President Kennedy's press secretary.

Salinger meets with reporters twice daily.

In theory, this is the way to learn what's going on in the White House.

In practice, it turns into a journalistic hodgepodge in which world problems, gamboling hamsters, eminent foreign visitors, Mrs. Kennedy, Cabinet members and the dog Charlie all frisk through the questioning gaily and democratically.

Pressing officer, or head imp, is the chubby Salinger, 35. Puffing a cigar, his eyes half closed, Salinger often looks like a contented boy who had intended to light only one firecracker but is glad now the whole pack blew up.

"It's really wonderful," Salinger observed one day, "how these briefings disintegrate into the insignificant."

The room was crowded, but not a voice was raised in dissent.

It's hard to capture in cold print the atmosphere that goes with the babble, but it will help if you remember that the several voices reported separately here were often speaking simultaneously.

The questions were skittering through a variety of presidential hopes when a reporter cut in with: "Pierre, on a more important subject, I have been asked to inquire about the hamsters." (These White House pets had escaped over the weekend). "What's the situation now?"

Salinger: "You will be happy to hear the hamsters have been found."

Q. "How many of them?"

A. "Two of them. They were found this morning in the solarium."

First reporter: "Oh."

Second reporter: "Gamboling?"

Salinger: "They have been returned to their cages, and strict security measures have been taken to make sure they don't escape again."

"Q. "How long were they missing?"

A. "Well, they were missing from Friday night. Debbie hamster was last seen Friday at midnight, in the President's bathroom."

Voice from the rear: "Tish, tish!"

Salinger (continuing undisturbed): "And she was returned to her cage, and again made a get-away in the night and was missing next morning."

'Q. "would you ascribe all this to spring?"

Q. "What's the name of the other one?"

Salinger: "Billie."

Now a chorus of voices:

"He was missing all Friday night?"

"What's the matter with the cages? How did they get out?"

Salinger: "They are extremely intelligent hamsters."

Another day Salinger is absent. His assistant, Andrew Hatcher, takes over, with Mrs. Kennedy's press secretary, Pamela Turnure, helping out.

Q. "Can you confirm for me whether the dog Charlie is now at Glen Ora?"

Miss T.: "Charlie is at Glen Ora."

Q. "How about the pony?"

Miss T.: "I don't know about the pony."

Q. "Is Charlie in good health?"

Hatcher: "He's romping."

Q. "He's romping?"

Hatcher: "All over the place, I guess."

Q. "Is Charlie the only pet now at Glen Ora?"

Miss T.: "Unless he made some friends."

Hatcher: "Unless you consider the ponies pets."

Even a casual reader would know that such gems would never be found at a news conference held by James C. Hagerty, Salinger's predecessor.

Hagerty never encouraged questions on Eisenhower's private life, and queries involving Mrs. Eisenhower were shunted of to her social secretary, Mary Jane McCaffree.

Nor did Hagerty have to deal with a volatile president who possessed a bouncing family.

On every count, it is inconceivable that Hagerty would ever be involved in an exchange like this:

Q. "May I ask if Caroline calls her nurse Nanny, and why isn't she calling her by an American name, since this is a British term?" (laughter).

Salinger: "I have no idea."

Another reporter: "Maybe her name is Nanny." (much laughter).

Salinger's news conferences are mostly serious, of course. The samples quoted here are the merry exceptions.

For whether a presidential news secretary is playful or stern or somewhere in between, he has an important and challenging job.

A few examples will show how varied and complex is his task.

1. He must often clarify for reporters the president's position on controversial issues, and he must occasionally report on a presidential meeting with an important visitor. A misstep by a news secretary here can be almost as embarrassing as a stumble by the President.

2. He should be a leader among those who keep the president alert to public reaction.

If the tide starts to run against the administration, he should advise the president on how he can best reverse it. Should he use a news conference to drive his point home, or should he make a radio and television appeal which, coupled with newspaper accounts, might help him regain the initiative?

3. The news secretary must brief the president before his news conferences so he won't get caught empty-handed and empty-headed—and blurt out an answer that would make him seem foolish and irresponsible.

4. He and his helpers have scores of routine chores: answering newsmen's unending flow of queries from all over America, deciding when photographers are to be let in for shots of the president and his visitors, helping newsmen, more or less, with their problems when a president goes out of town, producing copies of speeches and a little background on presidential appointments.

Under Salinger this often looks like an informal, nocturnal hamster hunt.

There is considerable scurrying about, and the excitement is increased by the thought that in this threshing and milling bigger and more important game may be flushed.

Under these helter-skelter conditions, a few things naturally go awry.

Names sometimes are misspelled in White House handouts. Sometimes the background on presidential appointments leaves gaping holes.

Photographers complain their instructions are often confusing and maybe contradictory.

And over all is a gentle fog of uncertainty about what will happen next.

One day recently Salinger told reporters to be ready to handle an important message to Congress that night. A few hours later, the signals mysteriously changed. The message wouldn't be ready that night after all; indeed, it wouldn't be ready for another week.

Obviously Salinger's difficulties stem partly, maybe chiefly, from the Kennedys themselves.

They may keep their collective eye on the main chance, but on minor details they are not a plan-ahead family. A news secretary can hardly be blamed if his battle plans are untidy.

Yet even granting this, as the text of the news conferences show, Salinger and his merry group seem capable of fomenting a little confusion of their own.

Reporters once left the White House in a comradely body during the noon hour after Hagerty "put the lid on" further announcements. Now they prudently arrange to eat in relays, with a sentinel standing by at all times.

And now, lest the wrong impression be drawn:

Whatever his minor errors, Salinger still hasn't pulled a blooper of consequence. He apparently has the full confidence and support of the man who counts, the President. And even his severest critics admit the press section of the White House has become a livelier, merrier place.

RUNNING THE SCALES

Theatre, Pianist Put Area On Map

By JOHN CALE
Staff Writer

Little Theatre's "Damn Yankees" which closed Wednesday in the new Strauss Playhouse has put Monroe on the theatrical map.

Pericles Alexander of the Shreveport Times attended a performance and was favorably impressed with what he termed a "gem of a theatre." He forecast that by 1963 or '64, Monroe would be vying for top honors in live theatre productions for the entire southwest.

The Crossett, Arkansas, Community Concerts association will close its 1960-'61 season with a program tomorrow evening by the Swedish ballad singer, William Clauson. The balladeer will feature a variety of folk songs and ballads from many countries and will accompany himself on the guitar.

A special concert by the Twin City Symphony orchestra has been slated for 3 p.m. Sunday, May 7, at Sherrouse School auditorium. The program will feature piano concertos performed by four students from northeast Louisiana. The Monroe Youth Orchestra has also slated a program for 1:30 p.m. Saturday at Neville.

Pianist Van Cliburn visited his home territory of Shreveport and points in Texas last week. It is always good to see a person from the South — long falsely accused of being a cultural desert — rise to the top of the fine arts ladder.

But Cliburn in a speech to a Shreveport civic club decided to go out on a political limb and come to the support of the proposed "Peace Corps." Perhaps, Cliburn sees in such activities an area where many personal friendships can be made. No doubt, the Russian audiences he has played to were sincere in their appreciation. The young American pianist can be sure, however, that such a reception was "permitted" rather than spontaneous. And it is doubtfu' that the "Peace Corps" could do much more than gain permission to function in other countries.

Closer to home, a West Monroe pianist, Floyd Cramer, has worked his way to top levels in popular recording circles. Cramer's parents, Mr. and Mrs. De Witt Cramer who live on Wellerman Road, furnished information about Floyd's accomplishments.

Young Cramer performs on the same 88 keys as Van Cliburn. But instead of Beethoven, Cramer worked with background chords. He had some formal training in piano in his early youth in Shreveport and Huttig, Arkansas.

His first real workouts came on the Louisiana Hayride broadcasts in Shreveport. There he played piano in the small combos which backed Web Pierce and Elvis Presley among others.

Following the route sketched in a previous "scales" column, Cramer went to Nashville, Tennesee, where he continued to work as a supporting performer. Around 1955, he tried one recording with a West Coast company, but found those background chords for big names provided more substantial earnings.

Last fall, Cramer moved out front again with an album, "Hello Blues," and a single recording entitled, "Last Date." Making the rounds nowis an exceptionally clean piece of "pop" work on an original composition, "On the Rebound." All of these have appeared under a nationally circulated label as manipulated through Chet Atkins' office in Nashville.

At present, Cramer is in Hawaii working on a new Elvis Presley movie. Even with "Rebound" in the good selling category, the young entertainer apparently has no notion of going completely solo.

If this is the case, Cramer has chosen — wisely, we believe — a route of endurance rather than the "flash in the pan." At any rate his smooth, tinkling piano with a mild case of civilized blues is a vast improvement over much that has passed for "music" in the popular field over the past five years.

If Floyd Cramer has established a new trend in his field, let's give due recognition to a prophet right in his home territory.

About Records

CONCERT

There is some effort to kid you that the beauties in a record called "Music for a Golden Flute" have something to do with the instrument being 14 karat gold. Don't go for it. Those beauties are due to the man who was mouthing the business end of the instrument.

He is Maurice Sharp, flutist of the Cleveland Orchestra, an Indiana boy who made himself a flute - master without a peer. It is exciting to hear an instrument so delicate and subtle exploited to just about its fullest possibilities.

His pieces were by Griffes, Foote, Honegger and Hanson. None can be described as great music, but they were composed specifically for the flute and with feleing for the flute. Sharp was accompanied by the reduced version of the Cleveland Orchestra called the Cleveland Sinfonietta (Epic-1116).

For organ devotees there are two records. One was made by the esteemed and blind French organist, Andre Marchal, playing the ridhtoned organ at Syracuse (N.Y.) University through a repertory of pieces from the great French school of organ composers (Westminster - 14130).

Virgil Fox's repertory is from the same source, and the record is called "Organ Music from France." His instrument was the great organ in New York's Riverside Church. All this music was composed by organists, one must keep in mind, and was more bent to fit an instrument than for free flight as musical expression. But for what it was composed, to glorify the organ, it is superb (Capitol-8544).

Unbelievable as it will sound, RCA Victor has produced still another recording of a Toscanini-NBC Symphony radio broadcast of the early 1940's. This one is of the broadcast of Feb. 22, 1941, when the pieces were act 1, scene 3 of "Die Walkure" and excerpts from "Die Gotterdammerung."

The singers were Helen Traubel and Lauritz Melchoir. In 1941 they were the best Wagnerian singers around, just as Toscanini was the most adored of conductors. You're carried back to a great day. Once more you admire the superb Toscanini art. Yet the recorded is dated by more than time; it is dated by obsolescent recording techniques (2452).

On the other hand, a Wagner recording by Paul Paray conducting the Detroit Symphony is made gorgeous by advanced recording techniques, but the Wagner is not exceptional, being a potpourri of overtures and excerpts from operas (Mercury-50232).

POPULAR

If Vito Pisa were not one of New York's most successful restauranteurs, he could easily become a prosperous figure in the phonograph record business.

The affable proprietor of Chez Vito has been charming his customers for years with intimate, romantic music. Wandering fiddlers serenade each table with silky strains from the classics and semi-classics.

For those who can't come back because of geographical distances, Vito has offered two LP's of his music. He enjoyed such success with them that he has now presented a third, "Romance at Chez Vito' (Vito V-125), which is lighter fare than its predecessors. The violinists confine themselves to such popular tunes as "Long Ago and Far Away" and "Secret Love," as well as Italian favorites, among them "Serenata Sincera."

More than a decade ago Eddy Howard became an overnight favorite with "To Each His Own." This is one of 12 songs in a reprise of Howard's successes called "Golden Hits" (Mercury MG-20562).

Only a few weeks ago, "Gone With the Wind' was shown again in the city of its inspiration, Atlanta. The only official full - range recording of the sound track of this movie classic now may be heard on "Gone With the Wind" (Warner Bros. W1322).

Like Eddy Howard, tiny Teresa Brewer has been a favorite since she popularized "When I Waltz Again With You." Many of the western - flavored songs she sings so well are wrapped up in "Songs Everybody Knows" by Tessie (Coral CRL 757361). "Jealous Heart," "Mexicali Rose" and "Walking the Floor Over You" are especially handled with enthusiasm by Miss Brewer.

"Sam Cooke" (RCA Victor LPM-2293) spotlights the teen-agers' favorite in spirituals and folk songs in modern arrangements. It is a needed excursion into some of America's best music.

Selected Singles — "Chapel by the Sea" by Louis Prima (Dot 16193), "The Charanga" by Merv Griffin (Carlton 545), "Havah Nagilah" by Arthur Lyman Group (HiFiRecord H-5024), "The Kisses" by Buddy Knox (Liberty F-55305).

LP's of the Week — (Mono) "Jazzland: The Stars of Jazz 1961" (Jazzland 1001). Woody Herman, Nat Adderley, Zoot Sims, Walter, Bishop and other bright lights of modern jazz share the tracks in an impressive session . . . (Stereo("Line Renaud at the Casino de Paris" (Capitol ST-10257). New songs sung in French by Loulou Gaste and Miss Renaud in a fine recording of the revue "Plaisirs."

GWTW Is Now Showing At Jim Theatre

David O. Selznick's production of "Gone With the Wind," now presented by Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer in tribute to the year of the Civil War Centennial, has broken every box-office record in motion picture history. Its gross film rentals alone total a staggering $50,000,000, with approximately $25,000,000 from the United States and Canada and the other $24,000,000 from overseas.

It has played in practically every city in the world, including those behind the Iron Curtain, where seized prints are exhibited. Its record-breaking aggregate audience totals more than 120,000,000 people and it has been shown somewhere every day since it first opened 21 years ago. It won a then unprecedented 10 Academy Awards, including the Thalberg Award given to Producer Selznick for "most consistent high quality of production."

TURNING POINT

Clark Gable became Hollywood's "King" as a result of his portrayal as Rhett Butler. The picture also proved a turning point in the careers of Vivien Leigh, who won an "Oscar" as best actress of the year for her role as Scarlett, Olivia de Havilland and Leslie Howard.

Although the Academy Awards are recognized as the final accolade, there were many other honors and tributes. At opposite end of the pole, for example, Winston Churchill sent a personal message of congratulations and Adolph Hitler seized a print and ran it over and over for his personal pleasure.

It was released in England during the Battle of Britain and moviegoers queued up at the box-office, ignoring the Nazi bombs. It missed playing four years in two theatres in London by only seven weeks. Its longest continuous run was in Paris, where it played for three years and 11 months.

'Hippodrome' Starts Today At Paramount

Spectacle and suspense, daring and pathos are the elements that make up the new motion picture "Hippodrome" which opens today at the Paramount theatre.

Filmed in Eastman-color and featuring a group of international circus headliners, the film catches the sweep and pageantry of life under the big top, and in particular focuses on the startling performance of a group of magnificently disciplined tigers.

STORY UNFOLDS

As the story unfolds, Beatrice, an attractive young dancer gains stardom in deVries' International Circus by performing a daring ballet in a cage full of tigers. The conflict between her love for Rudy, the tiger tamer, and her fear of Cameron, her partner in a spine - chilling sharpshooting act, results in her almost losing her life in a suspense - filled moment during their performance.

Both humor and pathos are provided by Dody, the clown, and his little son who goads him into forgetting his personal grief and despair by creating a new comeback act. Their charming father and son performance, which captivates the audience in the film will surely have the same effect on the live theatre goers.

CLARK GABLE in his memorial role of Rhett Butler and Vivien Leigh as Scarlett O'Hara in David O. Selznick's production of "Gone With the Wind," which is showing at the Jim Theatre.

GOP Will Seek 1963 Governor In Mississippi

JACKSON, Miss. (AP) — GOP State Chairman Wirt Yerger Jr. said Saturday the Republican party would run a candidate for governor in 1963 and that the democratic candidate would have to take "full responsibility" for Gov. Ross Barnett.

Gov. Barnett ran for office under the Democratic banner, but switched to unpledged electors in the presidential campaign.

Yerger did not elaborate on his statement about Barnett. "I think it speaks for itself," he said.

The comment came at a news conference to announce that Bob Enlow, advertising manager for the Mississippi Power and Light Co., had been hired as executive director of the state Republican party effective May 1.

Yerger said the unpledged elector movement in the presidential race made Mississippi "look absolutely silly in national prestige."

He said most of the unpledged voters have gone back to the Democratic party and some have swung to the Republican column.

RUGGED OUTDOOR adventure drama, "Gold of the Seven Saints" stars Clint (Cheyenne) Walker and opens Friday at the Paramount Theatre.

Curtain Call

"Damn Yankees" is now history. And, what a glorious history it made! We played to near capacity houses every night and a Sunday Matinee.

We were so happy to have Pericles Alexander, the drama critic of the Shreveport Times, in the audience Saturday night a week ago. The cast was elated over the glowing review he gave in Monday's Times. He enjoyed the performance and had many compliments for our new theatre.

DOFF HATS

We doff our hats to our hospitality committee for the smooth way in which they served coffee at intermission. This was a big undertaking, but they handled it well and efficiently. Our thanks go to Ethel Boardman, Carol Layton, Frances McHenry and Myrtle Carter.

Richard announces that he will hold try - outs for the last play of the season tomorrow night, April 24, and Tuesday, April 25, at 7:30 p.m. at the Strauss Playhouse. "The Diary of Anne Frank," has been chosen to close our current season. It will be presented the last week in May.

"The Diary of Anne Frank," the prize winning drama of the 1955 Broadway season, offers choice roles for 10 actors, five male and five female. In addition to the demanding roles of Anne and her father, Mr. Frank, there are eight equally interesting roles. For men there are three aged 35-50 and one young man 17-21. In the women's department there are parts for three girls age 14-21 and two ladies, aged 35-50. Here is a fine opportunity for actors interested in creating solid characterizations. In this warmly touching story of the beauty of hope and faith surviving in an environment gone mad with fear and hate, actors have a rare opportunity to recreate a human experience unique in the theatre.

The annual meeting for all Little Theatre members is scheduled for Monday, May 1st at 7:30 p.m. at the Strauss Playhouse with a 6:30 board meeting preceeding it. Keep this date in mind and plan to come to this important meeting. Five new board members will be elected at the annual meeting.

Barking Dogs Do Bite Says E.L. Boies

By MARY ANNE CORPIN
World Staff Writer

"Barking dogs DO bite," said Earl L. Boies.

Boies, who retired from the postal department after 34 years as a mailman, knows what he's talking about. He was bitten 50 times.

Monroe Postmaster Woodrow W. Hathorn presented Boies with a certificate of appreciation, signed by Postmaster General J. Edward Day and acting regional operations director J. L. Pearce of Dallas.

His fellow employees presented him with a 20-gauge automatic shotgun for his favorite sport, duck hunting.

Now 64, Boies started work with the postal department as a 31-year old temporary substitute carrier, for 65 cents an hour on December 9, 1927.

He was promoted to regular carrier in 1931, rode the streetcars to his mail routes, on the southside, and then the northside between Louisville Avenue and Auburn.

"I've been bit by dogs all over town, but mostly in the Highland Park area. I had four bites in three months up there," said Boies.

"A dog that is ordinarily peaceful resents the postman, because you have something in your hand and are walking fast. The dog thinks you're after him.

"Our last Postmaster General issued a bulletin on 'How to make friends with dogs' but if a dog ever runs at you, he will never make friends," said the veteran letter carrier.

Boies, who has carried up to 150 pounds of mail out of the Post-office, chuckles when he recalls how a certain dog on Roselawn (then Alexandria) bit mailman Sam Quigley. Boies replaced him on the route and three months later the same dog bit Boies.

"Postmaster James R. Wooten went up to see if it was a vicious dog and he got bit by the same animal," Boies said.

During the last 12 years, he has been a parcel post driver, and covered the southside and east toward the college.

"I've enjoyed carrying the mail, because I got to meet a lot of nice people.

"But I've looked forward to retiring. I used to count the months and days left before 30 years were up, then I went on and served three years and three months past," he admitted.

"Men of Mr. Boies caliber are hard to replace in this day and time," commented Postmaster Hathorn.

"He is well thought of and respected by the younger employees," the postmaster added.

"I wouldn't say how many I've helped break in, but there've been at least 25 men," said Boies.

Only two men still are at the Postoffice, of approximately 25 employed between Monroe and West Monroe offices when he first started work. Robert Ellington is now assistant postmaster, and J. E. Peters is superintendent of mails.

Boies, who came to Monroe from Mangham, is married, has three grown children, and resides at 311 Vernon St.

NOW CRITICALLY ILL

Gary Cooper Has Enviable Record

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — Gary Cooper, critically ill, approaches his 60th birthday May 7 without a known enemy in the world.

For any man anywhere, that's quite an accomplishment. For a star who has remained atop the Hollywood heap for 35 years, it's a miracle.

Those extremely close to the actor say that he has cancer and that he knows it. This provides a special sadness for his friends—and no man was ever a stranger to Cooper.

To this day he speaks to anyone who speaks to him first, and often he is the first to break the ice.

Richard Arlen is one of Cooper's oldest friends. The two worked as extras in silent pictures, and both got their biggest breaks with Clara Bow as the costars of "Wings."

"Some people are just born nice guys and nothing—not even Hollywood—can change it," says Arlen. "Coop took plenty of knocks in the early days, doublecrosses and the like, and when he got stabbed in the back, he always blamed himself for getting his back in the way of the knife. Coop just likes people; it's as simple as that."

This doesn't mean that Coop is a dupe. There's no shrewder businessman in town, perhaps no wealthier star.

When Cooper first came to Hollywood in 1924 he was shy and awkward but friendly. The last time I talked to him he was shy, awkward and friendly—and that was only a few months ago.

He always seems a little embarrassed by his fame. At the Friars' testimonial in January, a panel of speakers praised him to the heavens.

Then on came Milton Berle who insulted him unmercifully as only Uncle Miltie can, calling him "the Grandma Moses of the prairie."

"He's built like Slim Summerville, talks like Roscoe Ates, and is about as romantic as Oscar Levant on an island with Elsa Maxwell. He's Randolph Scott with novocain lips," said Berle.

After the testimonial, Cooper singled out Berle and thanked him profusely for the insults.

"Thank God, you came on when you did," Berle quoted Cooper. "Else I would have been under the table with all that praise."

At the same dinner poet Carl Sandburg gave a simple but eloquent sum-up of Cooper: "A tradition while he's living something of a clean sport ... a lack of the phony."

Then Cooper acknowledged the tributes and proved most eloquent of all.

"I want to thank each and every one of you for coming here tonight," he said. He added: "Never has so much fuss been made by so many over so little. The only achievement I am really proud of is the friends I have made in this community."

The words in print sound even a little corny, but Cooper's delivery gave the tip-off why he has outlasted all other movie stars.

Blind Negro, 41, Struck, Robbed Of Three Dollars

A 41 - year - old blind Negro was struck on the head Friday night and robbed of $3, Monroe police said Saturday.

Curtis V. Coleman, of 306 11th St., told officers that he had gone to a local Negro nightclub Friday night and while he was in a corridor alone, someone came behind him and hit him on the head with a bottle.

Coleman related that he caught the party that struck him, but that a second person hit him in the head again with a bottle.

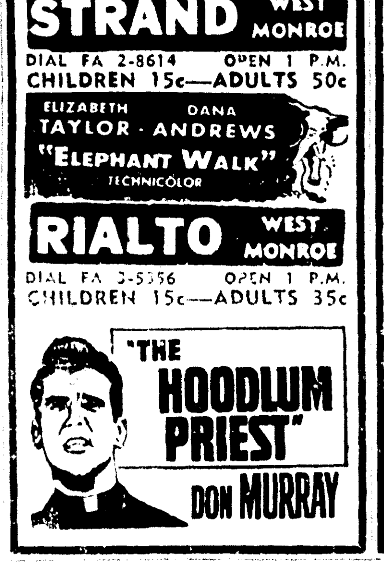
The two then grabbed a small brown purse from the blind Negro and ran. It conatined $3.

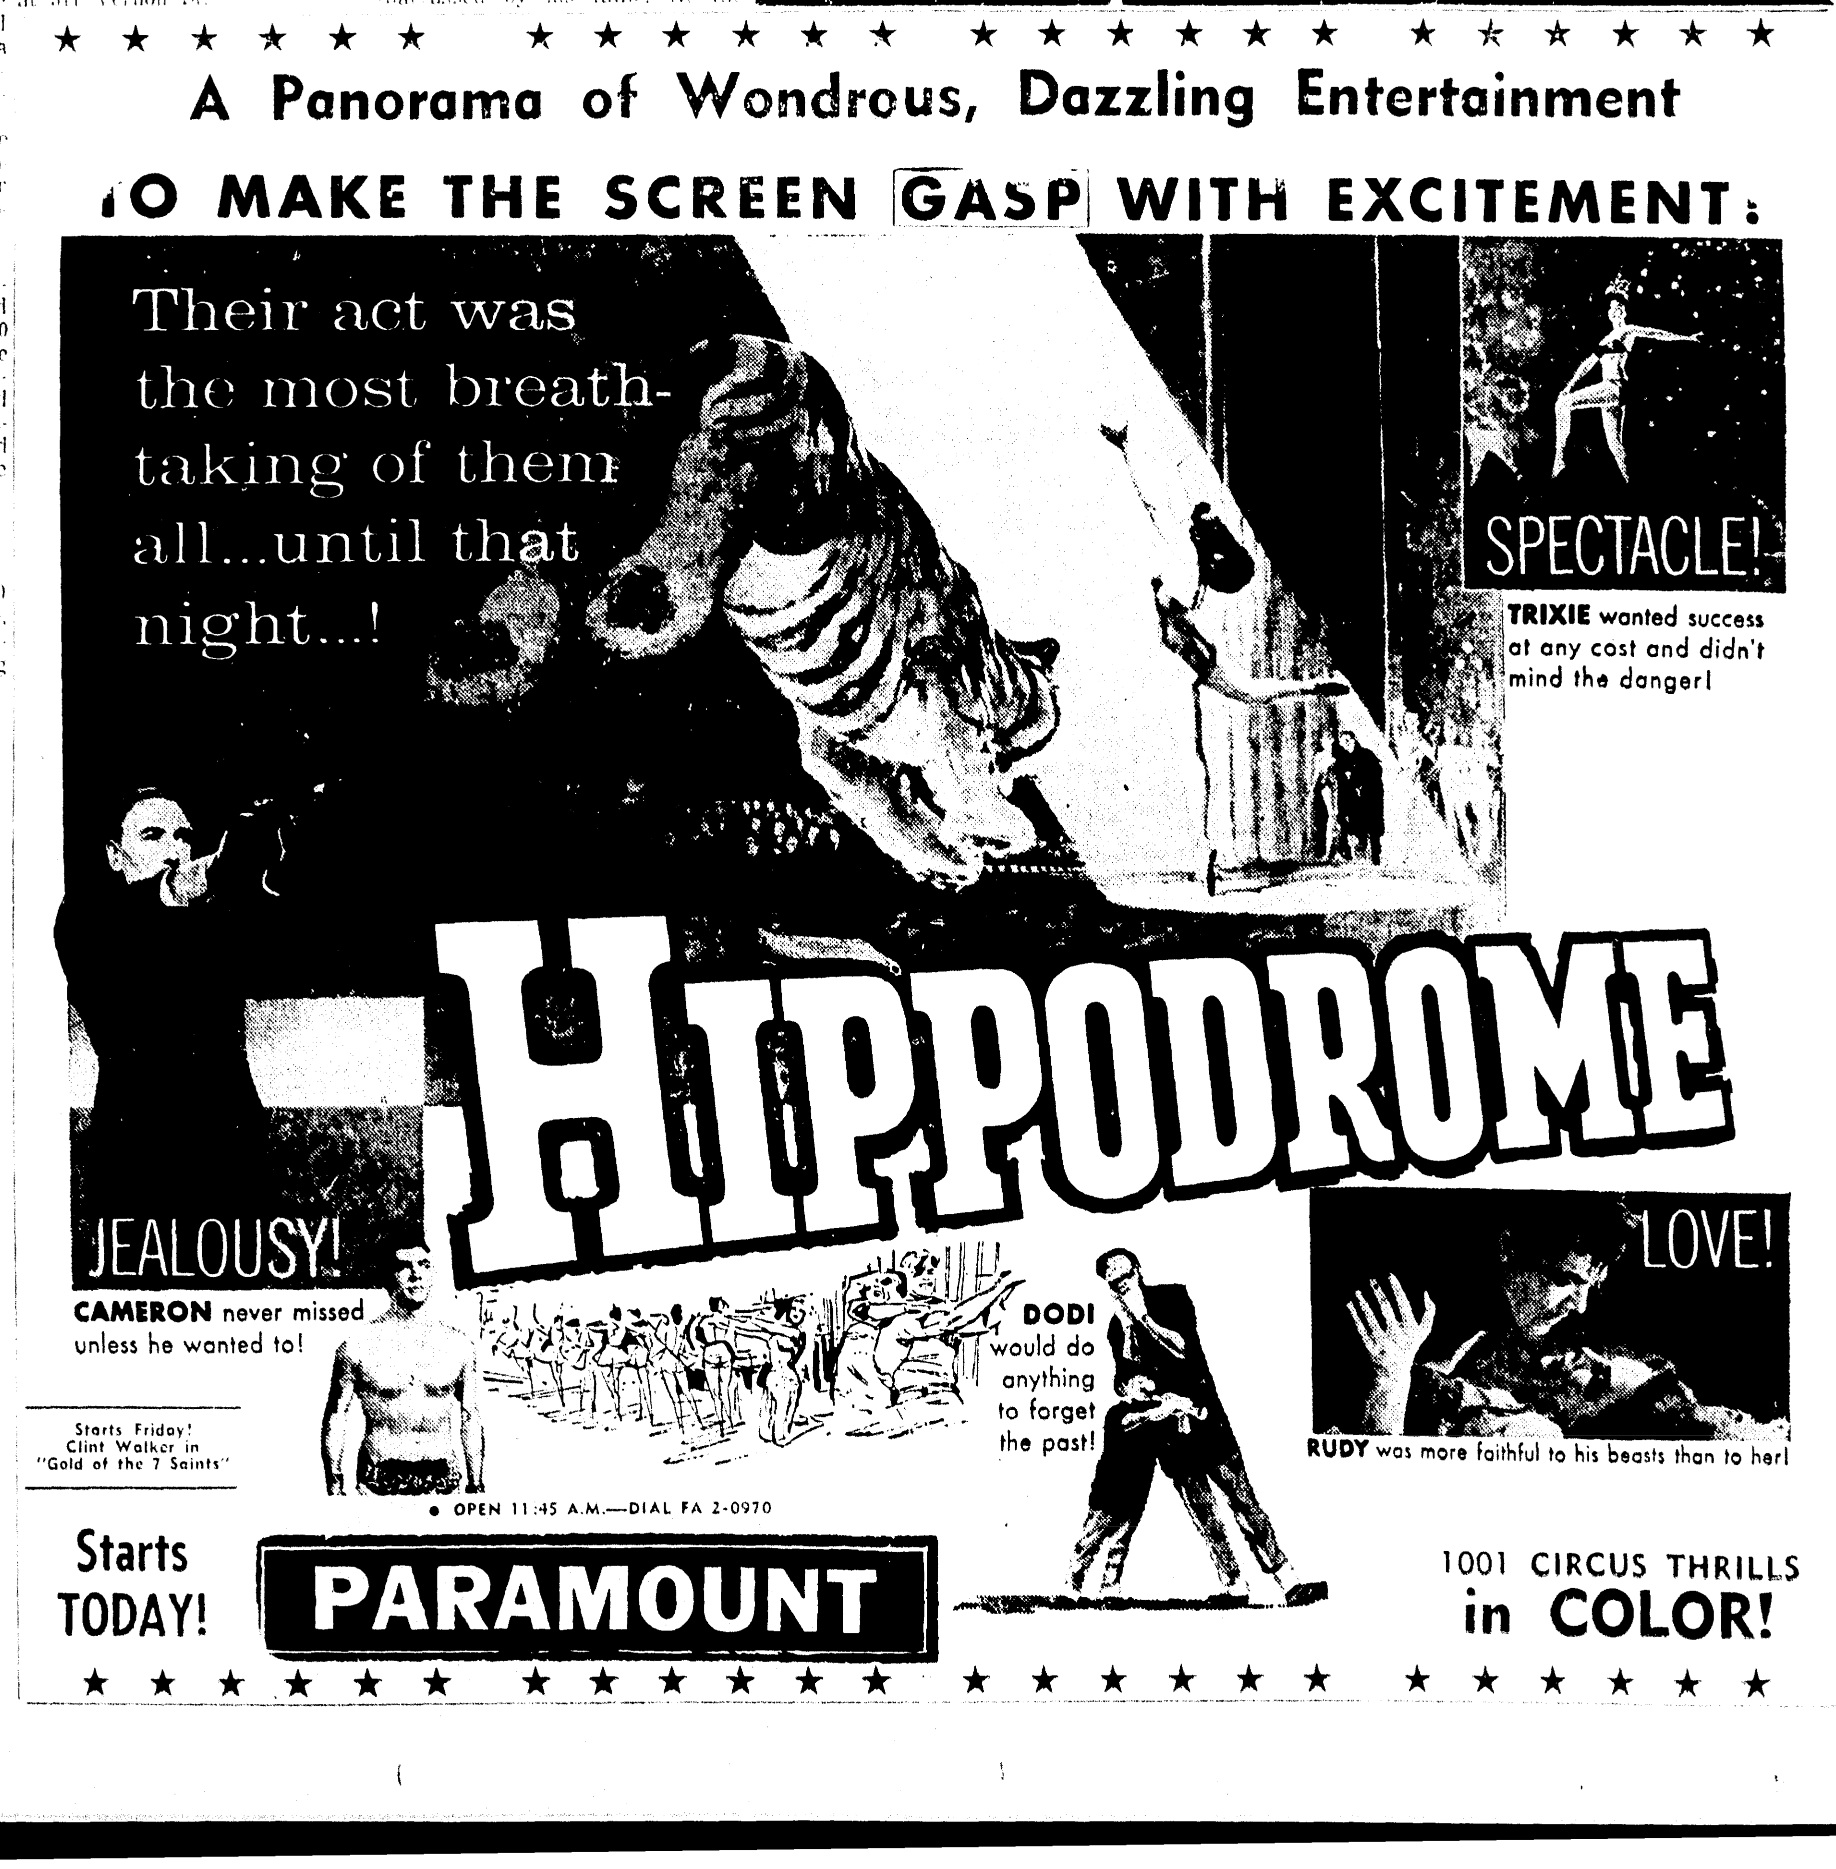
Coleman was unable to give the officers any clues as to who his assailants might have been. He said that neither of them said a word during the assault.

In a case of theft, Sherman Gilbert, Negro, 28 of 1207 Columbia Ave., told officers that he had been clipped for approximately $50 at another Negro nightspot Friday night.

Gilbert said that while at the club, he fell asleep at one of the booths. While he was asleep, he said some unknown party or parties took two $20 bills from his wallet and one $5 bill. Around $4 in change was taken from his pocket.

Officers were investigating the theft yesterday.





GWTW Is Now Showing At Jim Theatre

David O. Selznick's production of "Gone With the Wind," now presented by Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer in tribute to the year of the Civil War Centennial, has broken every box-office record in motion picture history. Its gross film rentals alone total a staggering $59,000,000, with approximately $35,000,000 from the United States and Canada and the other $24,000,000 from overseas.

It has played in practically every city in the world, including those behind the Iron Curtain, where seized prints are exhibited. Its record-breaking aggregate audience totals more than 120,000,000 people and it has been shown somewhere every day since it first opened 21 years ago. It won a then unprecedented 10 Academy Awards, including the Thalberg Award given to Producer Selznick for "most consistent high quality of production."

TURNING POINT

Clark Gable became Hollywood's "King" as a result of his portrayal as Rhett Butler. The picture also proved a turning point in the careers of Vivien Leigh, who won an "Oscar" as best actress of the year for her role as Scarlett, Olivia de Havilland and Leslie Howard.

Although the Academy Awards are recognized as the final accolade, there were many other honors and tributes. At opposite ends of the pole, for example, Winston Churchill sent a personal message of congratulations and Adolph Hitler seized a print and ran it over and over for his personal pleasure.

It was released in England during the Battle of Britain and moviegoers queued up at the box-office, ignoring the Nazi bombs. It missed playing four years in two theatres in London by only seven weeks. Its longest continuous run was in Paris, where it played for three years and 11 months.

Both humor and pathos are provided by Dody, the clown, and his little son who goads him into forgetting his personal grief and despair by creating a new comeback act. Their charming father and son performance, which captivates the audience in the film, will surely have the same effect on the live theatre-goers.

RUGGED OUTDOOR adventure drama, "Gold of the Seven Saints" stars Clint (Cheyenne) Walker and opens Friday at the Paramount Theatre.

DOFF HATS

We doff our hats to our hospitality committee for the smooth way in which they served coffee at intermission. This was a big undertaking, but they handled it well and efficiently. Our thanks go to Ethel Boardman, Carol Layton, Frances McHenry and Myrtle Carter.

Richard announces that he will hold try - outs for the last play of the season tomorrow night, April 24, and Tuesday, April 25, at 7:30 p.m. at the Strauss Playhouse. "The Diary of Anne Frank," has been chosen to close our current season. It will be presented the last week in May.

"The Diary of Anne Frank," the prize winning drama of the 1955 Broadway season, offers choice roles for 10 actors, five male and five female. In addition to the demanding roles of Anne and her father, Mr. Frank, there are eight equally interesting roles. For men there are three aged 35-50 and one young man 17-21. In the women's department there are parts for three girls age 14-21 and two ladies, aged 35-50. Here is a fine opportunity for actors interested in creating solid charaterizations. In this warmly touching story of the beauty of hope and faith surviving in an environment gone mad with fear and hate, actors have a rare opportunity to recreate a human experience unique in the theatre.

The annual meeting for all Little Theatre members is scheduled for Monday, May 1st at 7:30 p.m. at the Strauss Playhouse with a 6:30 board meeting preceeding it. Keep this date in mind and plan to come to this important meeting. Five new board members will be elected at the annual meeting.

GOP Will Seek 1963 Governor In Mississippi

JACKSON, Miss. (AP) — GOP State Chairman Wirt Yerger Jr. said Saturday the Republican party would run a candidate for governor in 1963 and that the democratic candidate would have to take "full responsibility" for Gov. Ross Barnett.

Gov. Barnett ran for office under the Democratic banner, but switched to unpledged electors in the presidential campaign.

Yerger did not elaborate on his statement about Barnett. "I think it speaks for itself," he said.

The comment came at a news conference to announce that Bob Enlow, advertising manager for the Mississippi Power and Light Co., had been hired as executive director of the state Republican party effective May 1.

Yerger said the unpledged elector movement in the presidential race made Mississippi "look absolutely silly in national prestige."

He said most of the unpledged voters have gone back to the Democratic party and some have swung to the Republican column.

Barking Dogs Do Bite Says E.L. Boies

By MARY ANNE CORPIN
World Staff Writer

"Barking dogs DO bite," said Earl L. Boies.

Boies, who retired from the postal department after 34 years as a mailman, knows what he's talking about. He was bitten 50 times.

Monroe Postmaster Woodrow W. Hathorn presented Boies with a certificate of appreciation, signed by Postmaster General J. Edward Day and acting regional operations director J. L. Pearce of Dallas.

His fellow employees presented him with a 20-gauge automatic shotgun for his favorite sport, duck hunting.

Now 64, Boies started work with the postal department as a 31-year old temporary substitute carrier, for 65 cents an hour on December 9, 1927.

He was promoted to regular carrier in 1931, rode the streetcars to his mail routes, on the southside, and then the northside between Louisville Avenue and Auburn.

"I've been bit by dogs all over town, but mostly in the Highland Park area. I had four bites in three months up there," said Boies.

"A dog that is ordinarily peaceful resents the postman, because you have something in your hand and are walking fast. The dog thinks you're after him.

"Our last Postmaster General issued a bulletin on 'How to make friends with dogs' but if a dog ever runs at you, he will never make friends," said the veteran letter carrier.

Boies, who has carried up to 150 pounds of mail out of the Postoffice, chuckles when he recalls how a certain dog on Roselawn (then Alexandria) bit mailman Sam Quigley, Boies replaced him on the route and three months later the same dog bit Boies.

"Postmaster James R. Wooten went up to see if it was a vicious dog and he got bit by the same animal," Boies said.

During the last 12 years, he has been a parcel post driver, and covered the northside and east toward the college.

"I've enjoyed carrying the mail, because I got to meet a lot of nice people.

"But I've looked forward to retiring. I used to count the months and days left before 30 years were up, then I went on and served three years and three months past," he admitted.

"Men of Mr. Boies caliber are hard to replace in this day and time," commented Postmaster Hathorn.

"He is well thought of and respected by the younger employees," the postmaster added.

"I wouldn't say how many I've helped break in, but there've been at least 25 men," said Boies.

Only two men still are at the Postoffice, of approximately 25 employed between Monroe and West Monroe offices when he first started work. Robert Ellington is now assistant postmaster, and J. E. Peters is superintendent of mails.

Boies, who came to Monroe from Mangham, is married, has three grown children, and resides at 311 Vernon St.

NOW CRITICALLY ILL

Gary Cooper Has Enviable Record

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — Gary Cooper, critically ill, approaches his 60th birthday May 7 without a known enemy in the world.

For any man anywhere, that's quite an accomplishment. For a star who has remained atop the Hollywood heap for 35 years, it's a miracle.

Those extremely close to the actor say that he has cancer and that he knows it. This provides a special sadness for his friends—and no man was ever a stranger to Cooper.

To this day he speaks to anyone who speaks to him first, and often he is the first to break the ice.

Richard Arlen is one of Cooper's oldest friends. The two worked as extras in silent pictures, and both got their biggest breaks with Clara Bow as the costars of "Wings."

"Some people are just born nice guys and nothing—not even Hollywood—can change it," says Arlen. "Coop took plenty of knocks in the early days, doublecrosses and the like, and when he got stabbed in the back, he always blamed himself for getting his back in the way of the knife. Coop just likes people; it's as simple as that."

This doesn't mean that Coop is a dupe. There's no shrewder businessman in town, perhaps no wealthier star.

When Cooper first came to Hollywood in 1924 he was shy and awkward but friendly. The last time I talked to him he was shy, awkward and friendly—and that was only a few months ago.

He always seems a little embarrassed by his fame. At the Friars' testimonial in January, a panel of speakers praised him to the heavens.

Then on came Milton Berle who insulted him unmercifully as only Uncle Miltie can, calling him "the Grandma Moses of the prairie."

"He's built like Slim Summerville, talks like Roscoe Ates, and is about as romantic as Oscar Levant on an island with Elsa Maxwell. He's Randolph Scott with novocain lips," said Berle.

After the testimonial, Cooper singled out Berle and thanked him profusely for the insults.

"Thank God, you came on when you did," Berle quoted Cooper. "Else I would have been under the table with all that praise."

At the same dinner poet Carl Sandburg gave a simple but eloquent sum-up of Cooper: "A tradition while he's living something of a clean sport . . . a lack of the phony."

Then Cooper acknowledged the tributes and proved most eloquent of all.

"I want to thank each and every one of you for coming here tonight," he said. He added: "Never has so much fuss been made by so many over so little. The only achievement I am really proud of is the friends I have made in this community."

The words in print sound even a little corny, but Cooper's delivery gave the tip-off why he has outlasted all other movie stars.

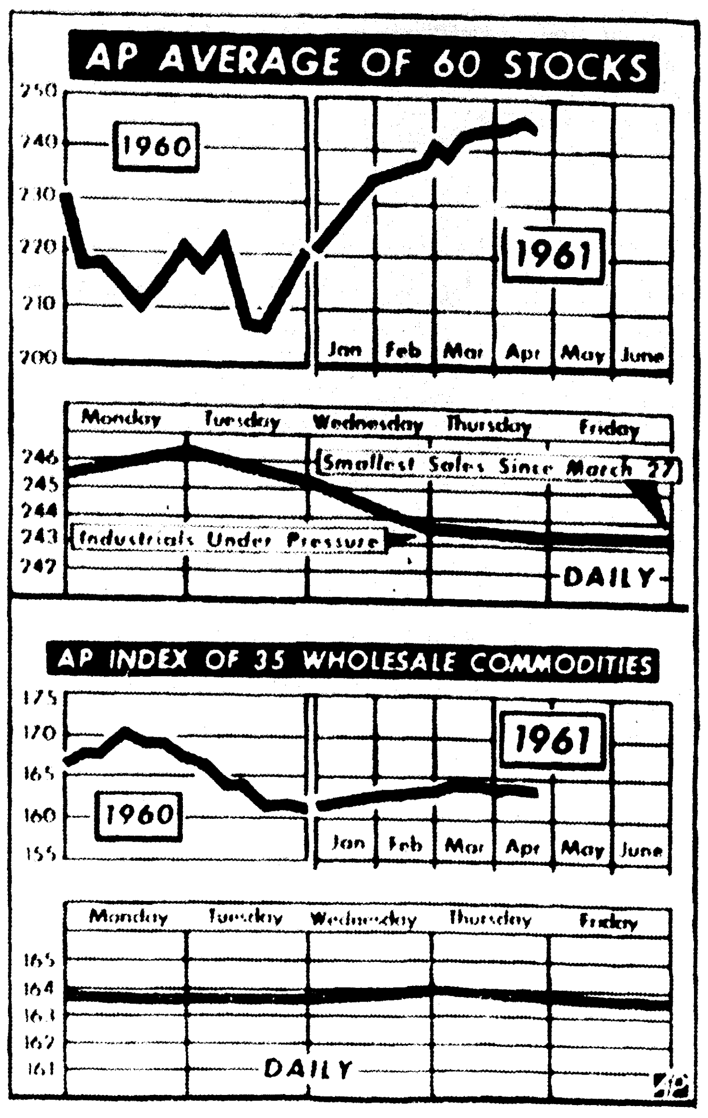
President's Tax Plan Stirs Up Controversy

FINANCIAL OIL-GAS NEWS



THE ASSOCIATED Press average of 60 stocks declined for the first time in six weeks when it closed at 243.3 from 245.5 a week ago. Commodity index fell back for the second straight week, closing at 163.6 from 163.8 in preceding period. (AP Wirephoto Chart)

Interstate Gas Market Plan Given

By MAX B. SKELTON

HOUSTON, Tex. (AP) — An installment purchase plan is making additional Texas-Louisiana natural gas available for interstate markets.

Interstate gas pipelines are purchasing gas reserves "in place" for resale on a long-range basis in midwestern and eastern consumer areas.

Each "in place" purchase has its individual problems and peculiarities, but the formula boils down to a transaction in which the owner of gas reserve sells his lease to an interstate line.

The pipelines becomes the owner and producer of the reserves. He makes a down payment and pays the balance on the installment plan.

The producer or seller escapes federal regulation, but, as one executive said, he has had to sell out in order to do so.

PROBLEMS

State and federal regulatory problems continue for the pipeliner but vary from contract to contract.

"In place" purchases are complicated and difficult to put together but offer several advantages to the pipeliner.

Harold Burrow, president of Tennessee Gas Transmission Co., recently outlined these advantages—increased reserves, greater physical flexibility in gas dispatching, unit prices that forestall the effect of inflation, and known prices.

"It may be the only way to get the gas," he said. "In our case, the . . . producer-owners were either extremely reluctant or downright opposed to selling this gas under contract for resale in interstate commerce."

Many conventional pipeline contracts with producers reduce dispatching flexibility because they require the company to take or pay for certain minimum amounts of gas daily. Direct ownership eliminates required minimums and maximums. This simplifies dispatching for a company such as Tennessee, which, at the end of 1960, was obtaining its gas supplies from 201 Texas and 70 Louisiana fields.

"Known price is an advantage, inflation or no inflation," Burrow said. "In 'in place' deals made thus far, both ours and others, it is my opinion the price has been less than the gas could have been sold for under contract."

Tennessee has announced three "in place" projects involving Louisiana offshore gas reserves. The installment purchase details include:

1. MCN area—460 billion (b) cubic feet of reserves, $8,300,000 cash payment when consumated, and approximately $60 million in non-interest bearing notes payable over 16 years.

2. Bastian Bay area — over one trillion (t) cubic feet of reserves, $9,400,000 paid last December, and $150 million in non-interest notes payable over 17 years.

3. Ship Shoal area—533 billion (b) cubic feet of reserves, $18 million down payment when consummated, and $79,300,000 in non-interest notes payable over 16 years.

Humble Oil & Refining Co. last week announced an "in place" arrangement affecting some 6.2 trillion (t) cubic feet of gas from the King Ranch area of south Texas.

Humble, the domestic affiliate of Standard Oil Co. (New Jersey), plans an "in place" sale to a new firm, Monterey Gas Transmission Co. The Columbia Gas System Inc. plans to purchase the gas from Monterey for distribution to consumers in Ohio, Pennsylvania, West Virginia, Virginia, Kentucky, New York, Maryland, and the District of Columbia.

Marcello Waits For Guatemala Court Action

GUATEMALA (AP) — Carlos Marcello, deported New Orleans underworld boss, sat in police headquarters Saturday facing the prospect of a weekend behind bars.

Marcello was arrested Friday on a charge of falsifying a birth certificate to make him appear Guatemalan-born. His appearance in court was delayed until Monday.

Marcello said his Guatemalan lawyer saw him shortly after his arrest but made no report on the prospects of obtaining release on bail.

U.S. immigration officials in New Orleans deported Marcello last month and Guatemalan authorities immediately began an investigation to determine his right to stay in this country.

In Washington, meanwhile, a three-man federal judge has been appointed to rule on Marcello's contention ch was deported illegally.

Goldberg Gives Labor Warning

WASHINGTON (AP) — Major employer and union organizations have received personal notice from Secretary of Labor Arthur J. Goldberg that he intends to enforce labor-management corruption controls vigorously.

At the same time there were indications the government may soon disclose a major union embezzlement case, along with some civil actions against employers and labor consultants for failure to file required reports.

IN SIX WEEKS

Market Suffers First Big Loss

NEW YORK (AP) — The stock market took its first loss in six weeks as the Cuban fighting resulted in tension between the United States and Russia this week.

Some poor first quarter earnings reports, as expected, also had an impact on investor sentiment and there were other factors which contributed to the decline.

One of these was that six months has elapsed since the market began its dramatic upswing from last October's low and this provided a chance to establish long-term capital gains. At the same time, the market had risen to new highs and a number of analysts recommended that investors pause to re-evaluate their holdings. In some cases they urged switches from stocks which have had big gains to others which still seemed to have room on the upside.

The trading week began with an irregular rise which saw both the Dow Jones industrial average and Standard & Poor's 500-stock index rise to new historic highs. The direction was downward for the next three sessions. On Friday prices held irregularly.

The Dow industrials reached a record closing high of 696.72 on Monday but closed at 685.26 for a net loss of 8.46 on the week.

The Associated Press average of 60 stocks this week declined 2.20 to 243.30.

Emphasis was taken from the decline in prices by a drop off in weekly volume to 24,716,930 shares from 25,670,470 the prior week. It was the lightest volume in three weeks and seemed to indicate that investors were standing aside until the air cleared rather than rushing to sell.

Of the 1,483 issues traded this week, 632 advanced and 714 declined.

The most active issue this week on the American Stock Exchange was Walter Precision, up 1 at 4 on 405,200 shares.

Bond trading produced a jumbled price pattern this week. U.S. government issues improved noticeably while corporates fell fractions.

The government market gain, reaching 5/8 of a point, turned out to be the best in six weeks. The corporate loss, amounting to 1/2 to 3/4 point, was the fifth in a row, based on the AP averages.

A Treasury statement, the successful sale of the largest new issue in the market since 1958 and Federal Reserve open market buying was credited with producing the stronger tone in governments.

The Treasury move concerned the $7,752,000,000 of notes and certificates that fall due May 15. Holders will be paid off in cash and will not receive exclusive rights to exchange holdings for new securities.

Volume on the New York Stock Exchange increased to $37,445,000 par value from $33,757,000 and the daily average rose to $7,489,000 from $6,751,400.

Ellender Says Omnibus Farm Bill Has Flaws

WASHINGTON (AP) — Sen. Allen J. Ellender, D-La., who had a big hand in drafting the omnibus farm bill presented by the Kennedy administration, said Saturday it does not constitute a final answer to farm problems.

He said, however, that his Senate Agriculture Committee will soon start lengthy hearings on the measure and he hopes that the final measure will provide for a good comprehensive farm program.

Under the new bill, farmers are to participate in the formation of their own programs.

"Obviously this system will prevent forcing upon any segment of the agricultural community a program different from that under which they are presently operating and which satisfactorily meets their needs," Ellender said in a talk for broadcast in Louisiana.

Ellender said that after hearings on the bill his committee will evaluate all testimony before making "additional and necessary changes in the bill so as to make it practical and workable."

"It is my hope," he said, "that the Omnibus Farm Bill will result in a comprehensive farm program whereby the Congress will be able to carry out its attention and responsibility more effectively by devoting its attention to the broad policy questions and implications of recommended programs, and not become bogged down in a welter of discussion of the minute details involved."

Stockholders Of Department Stores Pleased

NEW YORK (UPI) — Stockholders of Interstate Department Stores, Inc. have received nothing but good news recently.

Directors authorized a 3-for-1 stock split; management intends to recommend higher dividends on the increased stock; the board also plans to continue considering year end stock dividends; and management looks for earnings to reach $4.20 a share this year against $4.11 last year and $2.06 in 1959.

All this good news has been generated from the company's successful plunge into the discount field. This effort began early in 1959, when, after several years of operating an experimental discount store, Interstate decided they had some ideas and methods to contribute to the then rapidly expanding field.

Prior to 1959 the company operated exclusively in the downtown department store field.

Interstate already has become a major factor in the discount field, with 20 of its 60 stores discount centers. And the discount stores account for an even greater volume of sales than these figures would indicate.

The company expects its total sales this year to be around $160 million, with discount stores now in operation accounting for approximately $100 million.

Though discount stores will continue to take an increasing share of the customer's retail dollar, Interstate management believes that the key downtown store will continue to grow and play an important role in retailing.

The marginal stores, which are neither key department stores nor discount stores, will feel the pressure, and ultimately, in Interstate's view, pass from the American scene.

Reflecting this point of view, emphasis on three programs:

—To expand its position in the discount field.

—To strengthen its major downtown stores which are, or can be, the key stores in their communities.

—To terminate operations which can best be described as marginal.

Grain Futures Move Slow On Chicago Board

CHICAGO (AP) — International developments involving Cuba and Laos gave the grain futures market its only bullish nudge of the week and although it appeared to be rather shallow it was fairly durable.

It brought no general rush to buy and therefor was by no means a scare but it encouraged a good deal of short covering as a precautionary measure. Once that had been accomplished, the market steadied and showed only minor day to day changes in dull trading thereafter.

For the week, the grains posted moderate general gains with corn leading the advance while soybeans [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] [illegible].

Maj. Gen. T. A. Lane, president of the commission, said the new river boat was commissioned in Memphis, April 19. It replaces the "Mississippi" which had been in use since 1927.

Businessmen See Program Another Way

NEW YORK (AP) — President Kennedy's tax program stirred up controversy in business and financial circles the last week.

The President told Congress his aim was to modernize business and create 500,000 jobs.

A lot of business men didn't see it that way.

Kennedy proposed, among other things, a special tax incentive for business to modernize and expand plants, withholding taxes on dividends and interest, and repeal of special tax treatment given dividends.

Some business men expressed a preference for an increase in their depreciation allowance as a means of spurring the rate of plant expansion.

Kennedy contended that while the tax incentive plan would cut tax revenues by $1.7 billion a year, the higher depreciation allowance would cost $3.4 billion.

INCREASE

He said his proposal would bring about a big increase in employment in such industries as construction, lumber, steel, cement and machinery.

The proposals on dividends and interest seemed sure to draw widespread opposition from the nation's 15 million stockowners and others who draw interest on bonds, mortgages and savings.

The President wants to repeal the exclusion from income of the first $50 of dividends and the four per cent tax credit on dividends. He said a proposed 20 per cent tax would bring in $450 million annually.

Keith Funston, president of the New York Stock Exchange, contended this would be double taxation on the full amount of dividend and interest income because corporations pay tax on the money they pay out in dividends.

"The administration's proposals to levy an even stiffer penalty on millions of investors, already harassed by a dividend tax that is patently unjust, moves exactly in the wrong direction," he said.

"Economic growth is not going to be stimulated by taking money out of the pockets of millions of taxpayers—particularly those in the lower income brackets—and the administration's proposals would do just that."

COVERAGE

Also on the Washington scene, the Senate passed Kennedy's bill raising the $1 hourly minimum wage to $1.25 by 1963 and extending coverage to an additional 4,026,000 workers, and the House passed his legislation allowing men to retire at 62 and otherwise broadening the Social Security system.

Business was apprehensive about the deteriorating Cuban situation and its international implications. This anxiety was felt on the stock market and the long advance was interrupted.

However, there was no dimming of the burgeoning optimism about the business outlook.

Corporation reports of poor first quarter earnings were laced with expressions of conviction that better times are not too far ahead. U.S. Rubber Co. declared "the worst of the recession is over." American Cyanamid Co. forecast a gradual improvement in business. John Harrison, economist for the Tri-Continental Corp., the nation's largest closed-end investment company, declared "the recession is apparently ended."

The steel industry, most important beacon in the economic seas, flashed what some saw as a go-ahead signal.

Production rose last week for the fifth straight week to a 10-month high of more than 60 per cent of capacity.

The trade publication, Iron Age, found "real buoyancy" in demand for steel for the first time since the upturn began.

Plants fired up more furnaces and put more men to work.

Automobile production hit the highest level of the year with every one of the industry's 49 plants building cars. It was the first week this year that all had operated simultaneously. Output of 126,137 passenger cars was scheduled, compared with 111,110 the prior week. Car sales in the first one-third of April picked up, [illegible] per cent [illegible] over the early March rate.

President's Tax Plan Stirs Up Controversy

Interstate Gas Market Plan Given

By MAX B. SKELTON

HOUSTON, Tex. (AP) — An installment purchase plan is making additional Texas-Louisiana natural gas available for interstate markets.

Interstate gas pipelines are purchasing gas reserves "in place" for resale on a long-range basis in midwestern and eastern consumer areas.

Each "in place" purchase has its individual problems and peculiarities, but the formula boils down to a transaction in which the owner of gas reserve sells his lease to an interstate line.

The pipelines becomes the owner and producer of the reserves. He makes a down payment and pays the balance on the installment plan.

The producer or seller escapes federal regulation, but, as one executive said, he has had to sell out in order to do so.

PROBLEMS

State and federal regulatory problems continue for the pipeliner but vary from contract to contract.

"In place" purchases are complicated and difficult to put together but offer several advantages to the pipeliner.

Harold Burrow, president of Tennessee Gas Transmission Co., recently outlined these advantages—increased reserves, greater physical flexibility in gas dispatching, unit prices that forestall the effect of inflation, and known prices.

"It may be the only way to get the gas," he said. "In our case, the . . . producer-owners were either extremely reluctant or downright opposed to selling this gas under contract for resale in interstate commerce."

Many conventional pipeline contracts with producers reduce dispatching flexibility because they require the company to take or pay for certain minimum amounts of gas daily. Direct ownership eliminates required minimums and maximums. This simplifies dispatching for a company such as Tennessee, which, at the end of 1960, was obtaining its gas supplies from 201 Texas and 70 Louisiana fields.

"Known price is an advantage, inflation or no inflation," Burrow said. "In 'in place' deals made thus far, both ours and others, it is my opinion the price has been less than the gas could have been sold for under contract."

Tennessee has announced three "in place" projects involving Louisiana offshore gas reserves. The installment purchase details include:

1. MCN area—460 billion (b) cubic feet of reserves, $8,300,000 cash payment when consumated, and approximately $60 million in non-interest bearing notes payable over 16 years.

2. Bastian Bay area — over one trillion (t) cubic feet of reserves, $9,400,000 paid last December, and $150 million in non-interest notes payable over 17 years.

3. Ship Shoal area—533 billion (b) cubic feet of reserves, $18 million down payment when consummated, and $79,300,000 in non-interest notes payable over 16 years.

Humble Oil & Refining Co. last week announced an "in place" arrangement affecting some 6.2 trillion (t) cubic feet of gas from the King Ranch area of south Texas.

Humble, the domestic affiliate of Standard Oil Co. (New Jersey), plans an "in place" sale to a new firm, Monterey Gas Transmission Co. The Columbia Gas System Inc. plans to purchase the gas from Monterey for distribution to consumers in Ohio, Pennsylvania, West Virginia, Virginia, Kentucky, New York, Maryland, and the District of Columbia.

Marcello Waits For Guatemala Court Action

GUATEMALA (AP) — Carlos Marcello, deported New Orleans underworld boss, sat in police headquarters Saturday facing the prospect of a weekend behind bars.

Marcello was arrested Friday on a charge of falsifying a birth certificate to make him appear Guatemalan-born. His appearance in court was delayed until Monday.

Marcello said his Guatemalan lawyer saw him shortly after his arrest but made no report on the prospects of obtaining release on bail.

U.S. immigration officials in New Orleans deported Marcello last month and Guatemalan authorities immediately began an investigation to determine his right to stay in this country.

In Washington, meanwhile, a three-man federal judge has been appointed to rule on Marcello's contention eh was deported illegally.

Goldberg Gives Labor Warning

WASHINGTON (AP) — Major employer and union organizations have received personal notice from Secretary of Labor Arthur J. Goldberg that he intends to enforce labor-management corruption controls vigorously.

At the same time there were indications the government may soon disclose a major union embezzlement case, along with some civil actions against employers and labor consultants for failure to file required reports.

FINANCIAL $OIL-GAS NEWS

IN SIX WEEKS

Market Suffers First Big Loss

NEW YORK (AP) — The stock market took its first loss in six weeks as the Cuban fighting resulted in tension between the United States and Russia this week.

Some poor first quarter earnings reports, as expected, also had an impact on investor sentiment and there were other factors which contributed to the decline.

One of these was that six months has elapsed since the market began its dramatic upswing from last October's low and this provided a chance to establish long-term capital gains. At the same time, the market had risen to new highs and a number of analysts recommended that investors pause to re-evaluate their holdings. In some cases they urged switches from stocks which have had big gains to others which still seemed to have room on the upside.

The trading week began with an irregular rise which saw both the Dow Jones industrial average and Standard & Poor's 500-stock index rise to new historic highs. The direction was downward for the next three sessions. On Friday prices held irregularly.

The Dow industrials reached a record closing high of 696.72 on Monday but closed at 685.26 for a net loss of 8.46 on the week.

The Associated Press average of 60 stocks this week declined 2.20 to 243.30.

Emphasis was taken from the decline in prices by a drop off in weekly volume to 24,716,960 shares from 25,670,470 the prior week. It was the lightest volume in three weeks and seemed to indicate that investors were standing aside until the air cleared rather than rushing to sell.

Of the 1,483 issues traded this week, 632 advanced and 714 declined.

The most active issue this week on the American Stock Exchange was Walter Precision, up 1 at 4 on 405,200 shares.

Bond trading produced a jumbled price pattern this week. U.S. government issues improved noticeably while corporates fell fractions.

The government market gain, reaching ⅝ of a point, turned out to be the best in six weeks. The corporate loss, amounting to ½ to ¾ point, was the fifth in a row, based on the AP averages.

A Treasury statement, the successful sale of the largest new issue in the market since 1958 and Federal Reserve open market buying was credited with producing the stronger tone in governments.

The Treasury move concerned the $7,752,000,000 of notes and certificates that fall due May 15. Holders will be paid off in cash and will not receive exclusive rights to exchange holdings for new securities.

Volume on the New York Stock Exchange increased to $37,445,000 par value from $33,757,000 and the daily average rose to $7,489,000 from $6,751,400.

Ellender Says Omnibus Farm Bill Has Flaws

WASHINGTON (AP) — Sen. Allen J. Ellender, D-La., who had a big hand in drafting the omnibus farm bill presented by the Kennedy administration, said Saturday it does not constitute a final answer to farm problems.

He said, however, that his Senate Agriculture Committee will soon start lengthy hearings on the measure and he hopes that the final measure will provide for a good comprehensive farm program.

Under the new bill, farmers are to participate in the formation of their own programs.

"Obviously this system will prevent forcing upon any segment of the agricultural community a program different from that under which they are presently operating and which satisfactorily meets their needs," Ellender said in a talk for broadcast in Louisiana.

Ellender said that after hearings on the bill his committee will evaluate all testimony before making "additional and necessary changes in the bill so as to make it practical and workable."

"It is my hope," he said, "that the Omnibus Farm Bill will result in a comprehensive farm program whereby the Congress will be able to carry out its attention and responsibility more effectively by devoting its attention to the broad policy questions and implications of recommended programs, and not become bogged down in a welter of discussion of the minute details involved."

Stockholders Of Department Stores Pleased

NEW YORK (UPI) —Stockholders of Interstate Department Stores, Inc. have received nothing but good news recently.

Directors authorized a 3-for-1 stock split; management intends to recommend higher dividends on the increased stock; the board also plans to continue considering year end stock dividends; and management looks for earnings to reach $4.20 a share this year against $4.11 last year and $2.06 in 1959.

All this good news has been generated from the company's successful plunge into the discount field. This effort began early in 1959, when, after several years of operating an experimental discount store, Interstate decided they had some ideas and methods to contribute to the then rapidly expanding field.

Prior to 1959 the company operated exclusively in the downtown department store field.

Grain Futures Move Slow On Chicago Board

CHICAGO (AP) — International developments involving Cuba and Laos gave the grain futures market its only bullish nudge of the week and although it appeared to be rather shallow it was fairly durable.

It brought no general rush to buy and therefor was by no means a scare but it encouraged a good deal of short covering as a precautionary measure. Once that had been accomplished, the market steadied and showed only minor day to day changes in dull trading thereafter.

For the week, the grains posted moderate general gains with corn leading the advance while soybeans ranged broadly both ways. After the steep declines of Monday, May and July soybeans fell into an active two-sided trade with profit takers raking bulges of two and three cents then reinstating long positions on setbacks of about the sam range.

At the end of the week, soybeans were 8 cents a bushel lower to 6¼ cents, higher, May 3.18½-19¼; wheat ⅜ lower to ⅞ higher, May 1.91½; corn 1½-2½ higher, May 1.11½-⅝; oats ½-1⅛ higher, May 62¼-⅜; rye ¾-1¾ higher,

Businessmen See Program Another Way

NEW YORK (AP) — President Kennedy's tax program stirred up controversy in business and financial circles the last week.

The President told Congress his aim was to modernize business and create 500,000 jobs.

A lot of business men didn't see it that way.

Kennedy proposed, among other things, a special tax incentive for business to modernize and expand plants, withholding taxes on dividends and interest, and repeal of special tax treatment given dividends.

Some business men expressed a preference for an increase in their depreciation allowance as a means of spurring the rate of plant expansion.

Kennedy contended that while the tax incentive plan would cut tax revenues by $1.7 billion a year, the higher depreciation allowance would cost $3.4 billion.

INCREASE

He said his proposal would bring about a big increase in employment in such industries as construction, lumber, steel, cement and machinery.

The proposals on dividends and interest seemed sure to draw widespread opposition from the nation's 15 million stockowners and others who draw interest on bonds, mortgages and savings.

The President wants to repeal the exclusion from income of the first $50 of dividends and the four per cent tax credit on dividends. He said a proposed 20 per cent tax would bring in $450 million annually.

Keith Funston, president of the New York Stock Exchange, contended this would be double taxation on the full amount of dividend and interest income because corporations pay tax on the money they pay out in dividends.

"The administration's proposals to levy an even stiffer penalty on millions of investors, already harassed by a dividend tax that is patently unjust, moves exactly in the wrong direction," he said.

"Eonomic growth is not going to be stimulated by taking money out of the pockets of millions of taxpayers—particularly those in the lower income brackets—and the administration's proposals would do just that."

COVERAGE

Also on the Washington scene, the Senate passed Kennedy's bill raising the $1 hourly minimum wage to $1.25 by 1963 and extending coverage to an additional 4,086,000 workers, and the House passed his legislation allowing men to retire at 62 and otherwise broadening the Social Security system.

Business was apprehensive about the deteriorating Cuban situation and its international implications. This anxiety was felt on the stock market and the long advance was interrupted.

However, there was no dimming of the burgeoning optimism about the business outlook.

Corporation reports of poor first quarter earnings were laced with expressions of conviction that better times are not too far ahead. U.S. Rubber Co. declared "the worst of the recession is over." American Cyanamid Co. forecast a gradual improvement in business. John Harrison, economist for the Tri-Continental Corp., the nation's largest closed-end investment company, declared "the recession is apparently ended."

The steel industry, most important beacon in the economic seas, flashed what some saw as a go-ahead signal.

Production rose last week for the fifth straight week to a 10-month high of more than 60 per cent of capacity.

The trade publication, Iron Age, found "real buoyancy" in demand for steel for the first time since the upturn began.

Plants fired up more furnaces and put more men to work.

Automobile production hit the highest level of the year with every one of the industry's 49 plants building cars. It was the first week this year that all had operated simultaneously. Output of 126,137 passenger cars was scheduled, compared with 114,110 the prior week. Car sales in the first one-third of April picked up, totaling 128,900, a 2½ per cent gain over the early March rate.

Two Arrested For Burglaries

MCCOMB, Miss. (UPI) — Two men have been arrested in connection with a series of burglaries and robberies, authorities said Saturday.

They said another man, Henry Rayborn of McComb, was still at large. The pair in custody were identified as William A. Cummings and Hollis Mitchell, both of McComb.

Rayborn and Cummings were caught Friday night burglarizing a drive-in here. Cummings was arrested but Rayborn escaped.

Upon interrogation, Cummings implicated Mitchell in other burglaries and the latter was arrested at his home. Officers confiscated boat motors, tires, appliances and other articles.

PAUL MARTIN LOOKS 'EM OVER

LSU Ticket Sales Near

Everybody who halfway followed the doings of the Louisiana State University Tigers last football season seems to feel the next campaign is going to be one of the best in the school's history although we expect Coach Paul Dietzel at anytime to begin itemizing just why this is going to be a tough season for the Bengals.

You won't need Dietzel to tell you how tough its going to be if you'll just study the schedule, but its the kind of fare that has been met with success to help LSU, under Dietzel, become a national power in recent years.

So, with those sophomores of last year primed for their big year, promising a keener offense, and with a recognized fine defense, we look for LSU to supplant Ole Miss in the SEC or become the victim of resounding upsets.

We do this shot for LSU today when reminded that Jack Gilmore, business manager of Athletics at LSU, is preparing to mail out application forms to all regular season ticket holders for LSU's 1961 home games.

If you owned season tickets to LSU stadium last year, you will be given a chance between May 1. and May 29 to reclaim the same seats or be given better ones in the event that an old customer who had the better seat does not reclaim the same. You who held season tickets last year will automatically receive application forms for this year.

LSU will conduct an advanced general sale of the season pasteboards during the same period in May, and any LSU fans of this area who did not own such tickets last year, but who would like to purchase them this year, can apply now to "Jack Gilmore, Business Manager of Athletics, Louisiana State University, Baton Rouge, La." and he will send you the regular ticket application forms that will also include the separate and varying prices for tickets to LSU games away from home.

After the regular customers are taken care of, the new applicants will be supplied the remaining tickets for Bendal Stadium. The tickets will be mailed out about August 15.

The price will be $25 for six home games —Texas A&-M, Sept. 30; Georgia Tech, Oct. 7; Kentucky (Homecoming), Oct. 21; Ole Miss., Nov. 4; Mississippi State, Nov. 18; and Tulane, Nov. 25. The road games are Rice at Houston, Sept. 23; South Carolina at Columbia, S. C., Oct. 14; Florida at Gainesville, Oct. 28; and North Carolina at Chapel Hill, Nov. 11.

Bow And Arrow Fans Organize

Organization of bow hunters and field archers of Ouachita parish is planned here tomorrow night when bow enthusiasts gather at the Monroe Community Center to take steps toward forming their own club.

Meeting time is 7 o'clock tomorrow evening. In addition to organizational plans, the program will include a 30-minute film about longbow hunting, some demonstration shooting, registration of members, and election of officers.

Mr. and Mrs. J. M. McBeth, among the foremost archers that we know about in Louisiana, are Ouachita residents who are among the leaders of the organizational plan.

A. S. Huffman and Ada Bess Hart, directors of physical education and health respectively of men and women at Northeast Louisiana State College, have helped develope a lot of young archers with regular classes at the Monroe school. A lot of the charter members will very likely be products of the college archery range.

Men, women, and children are invited to participate, and the women, at least, will be able to boast one of the south's foremost women archers in their ranks.

Mrs. McBeth recently won the women's division championship of the Deep South Archery Tournament at Louisiana Tech. The men have a lot of respect for her bow. There are very few in this section who can match or beat her shooting.

She will participate in the El Dorado Open Tournament next Sunday, and she will be numbered among the expected 10,000 archers who will participate in the National Tournament at Crystal Springs, Ark., June 27-28-29-30. It will be the first time for the National to be held in the south.

Louisiana bow hunting season in the past few years have helped stimulate the sport. Last fall bow hunters were given five successive weekends of deer hunting before the regular gun seasons opened and then they could continue to use their bow instead of a gun. (By the way, Mrs. McBeth got her deer last year, too).

The Louisiana Wildlife Federation, at its recent convention here, drafted a recommendation to the Louisiana Wild Life and Fisheries Commission requesting "more days" for the bow hunters next season.

Caught On The Fly

Junior guard Shelby Aulds, West Monroe, and freshman forward Bobby Andrews, Marion, were north Louisiana athletes among the eight University of Southwestern Louisiana basketball players rewarded with their big "S" letters for an outstanding season recently.

Dickie Crowe, Monroe, and Richard Mitchell, Calhoun, both second basemen, will be seeing a lot of each other this summer in the Class B Northwest League.

Dickie, the ex - Ouachita Parish High athlete owned by the Los Angeles Dodgers, is playing at Salem, Ore., and Richard, property of the San Francisco Giants, is doing his chores at Eugene.

Since the Gulf States Conference track meet is scheduled for Saturday, May 13, conflicting with previously announced dates for Louisiana High School Athletic Association meets, the LHSAA is moving its meets up one day to Friday, May 12, according to Commissioner T. H. Waters.

McNeese hosts triple - A; double -A is at Northwestern State; Class A is at LSU; Class B performs at Louisiana Tech; and Southwestern hosts Class C.

Cubs Overhaul Phillies By 6-4

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — Don Zimmer's home run in the 11th inning, with a man on base, gave the Chicago Cubs a 6-4 victory Saturday over the Philadelphia Phillies.

Homers by veterans Frank Thomas and Ernie Banks contributed to the victory.

Zimmer, who had figured in all of Chicago's scoring against Philadelphia in a 3-2 victory Friday night, drove home pinch hitter Richie Ashburn with his first homer of the year.

Asburn, a former Phil, had opened the inning with a single off reliever Dick Farrell, the loser and the last of three Philadelphia pitchers. Don Elston got the victory.

The game had been tied at 4-all in the sixth.

Thomas, who had three hits, got his homer in the second, for the first run of the game. The Phillies scored two runs in the bottom of the second after Jack Curtis gave up walks to Tony Gonzalez and Frank Herrera. Gonzalez scored on a passed ball and Herrera on Rebuen Amaro's squeeze bunt.

The Phillies then went ahead 3-1 in the third on Bobby Gene Smith's RBI double.

The Cubs came back strong in the fifth and sixth innings. Curtis singled and Al Heist drove him home with a triple in the fifth, then Banks led off the sixth with his second homer of the year. Thomas, coming to bat next, doubled. He scored on Dick Bertell's single to make the score 4-3.

But the Phillies tied it in the bottom of the inning, on Clay Dalrymple's bloop single, which scored Gonzalez.

Redskins Are Warned Not To Fight Govt.

WASHINGTON (AP) — Secretary of the Interior Stewart L. Udall expressed hope Thursday that owner George Preston Marshall of the Washington professional football team will hire a Negro player rather than fight the Interior Department.

Udall has warned Marshall that of he practices discrimination in hiring players he can not use the new Washington stadium now being built.

A reporter asked the secretary at a news conference if he would report on what progress he was making in his controversy with Marshall.

"Up to the present we have been gathering facts and information from several quarters," Udall said.

"We are trying to get into strong enough position to make it plain to George that it will be the better part of wisdom to cooperate with us and not fight against the department."

He added he has not been contacted by Marshall or his attorneys since the team owner first replied by letter to the secretary's notice that Marshall would be expected to abide by anti-discrimination policies of the Kennedy administration.

Marshall has contracted to use the new District of Columbia stadium, now under construction on park land, which is under Udall's administration.

Orioles Overpower Yanks To Snap 5-Tilt Win Skein

BALTIMORE (AP)—The Baltimore Orioles beat the New York Yankees at their patented home run game Saturday, but had to settle for one victory and a tie in a rain-shortened day-night doubleheader.

The Orioles won the day game 5-3 on a two-run homer by Gus Triandos in the eighth inning. Another two-run homer by Jackie Brandt tied the nightcap 5-5 in the seventh inning just before rain ended the contest with the Orioles at bat.

The second game, delayed 51 minutes by rain at the start and called after a 32-minute wait in the seventh, goes into the books as a tie game and will have to be replayed in its entirety. The performances by the players will be added to their records.

Brandt's seventh inning homer off relief pitcher Bill Stafford, his second of the night game and the fifth of the twin bill by the Orioles, enabled Baltimore to overcome a 5-1 New York lead manufactured by Bill Skowron's grand slam homer in the fourth inning.

The Yankees scored one run off Oriole starter Hal Brown in the third on singles by Elston Howard, Cletis Boyer and Bobby Richardson. Brown departed in the fourth when New York loaded the bases on a single by Tony Kubek, a double by Mickey Mantle and a walk.

Skowron sliced reliefer Wes Stock's first pitch high into the right field bleachers, just inside the foul pole.

Baltimore, which had scored one run in the first on two singles and a double by Gus Triandos, picked up two more in the fifth on solo homers by Brandt and Jim Gentile off Yankee starter Jim Coates.

New York rapped out 10 hits in the opener to Baltimore's six, but again the long ball played a big role in the Oriole triumph.

In addition to the game-winning homer by Triandos, Marv Breeding hit a solo blast to ignite a three-run fifth inning off starter Ralph Terry. Whitey Herzog's triple drove in another and he scored on a wild relay throw by shortstop Kubek.

Ryne Duren, who walked Gentile with two out before Triandos homered, was tagged with the loss.

The Yanks scored two runs in the fourth on a sacrifice fly by Roger Maris and a run-producing single by Skowron. They tied the score 3-3 in the seventh on three singles, the last by Hector Lopez driving in a run.

The first game defeat dropped the Yanks from a first-place tie into third place in the American League.

A crowd of 26,662 watched the separate admissions doubleheader.

AFTER BEATING DEMONS

Bulldogs Claim Strong GSC Lead

RUSTON, La. (Special)—Louisiana Tech's miraculous Bulldogs, a green corps that wasn't given much chance to defend its GSC baseball crown this year, moved into a commanding lead in the pennant race here yesterday with a doubleheader sweep over Northwestern State 6-4 and 1-0.

The Bulldogs reached the halfway mark yesterday with a 9-1 record by using the same tactics that have paid - off for them all season.

Razor - sharp pitching and just enough hitting to win, plus the ability to come from behind when the chips were down, have been Bulldog Hallmarks all year and the Demon twinbill was no exception.

The Canines bounced back from a 4-4 tie in the first game with enough hitting power to win, then turned to mound mastary in the second.

Both Charley Fuller and Willie Williams won their third games of the season without a loss, with Williams outdueling Don Scribber 1-0 in the nitecap.

In the opener Fuller was staked to a four-run lead with Paul Labenne's double and Rron McNabb's single in the first inning, a solo circuit clout by George Garrett in the second and a two-run homer by Joe Zaffster in the fourth.

The Demons bunched three of their six hits off Fuller in the sixth to tie the score. Tom Mitchell reached, on a fielder's choice, Tom Baker singled, and O'Brian Smith singled scoring Mitchell. Herbie Smith then clouted a three - run homer.

Tech bounded to win in the bottom half when Garrett walked, Frank Betz singled and both runners advanced on a wild pitch. Kelton Bacon singled in the two runs.

The Bulldogs broke up the scoreless nightcap when Wendell Lorio was hit by a pitch, was sacrificed to second and had to hold second when Max Lewis got an infield hit. Both runners advanced on a passed ball and Lorio scored when Mack Hunt got a scratch hit off the pitcher's glove.

The twin wins upped the Berry Hinton coached Bulldog's record for the full campaign to 15-3. NSC has won one and lost nine in the GSC race.

The Indian win held Southeastern to a 6-4 four mark and enabled the Cowpokes to tie them for second, while Northwestern stayed in the celler.

Champ Manages Decision Victory

By Bob Hoobing

BOSTON (AP) — Artful Paul Pender retained his version of the world middleweight boxing title Saturday night, using his rapier-like left hand as a double-edged weapon for a unanimous 15-round decision over stubborn Carmen Basilio.

Pender twice, led the crustly former middle and welterweight king. Basilio took an eight-count when hammered off his feet by pender's smashing left in the 13th. Paul used the left hook to send Basilio to the canvas again in the 15th round.

Basilio earlier had claimed he had not been knocked down in 78 previous pro fights, including 10 other title contests.

Pender, fighting his skillful waiting, counter-punching game against a hard-hitting foe, had to withstand some Basilio bombs in the early stages before carrying out his pre-fight battle plan.

Referee Eddie Bradley scored 148-135 for Pender on the 10-point "must" scoring system in Massachusetts while Judge Joe Blumsack and Judge Harry Sundberg called it 147-132 and 147-138 for the champ in this nationally televised show from Boston Garden.

Making his third defense of a crown recognized in Massachusetts, New York and Europe, Pender held off the feared Basilio power in the early stages and again in a late rally. The left hand served to keep Basilio off stride and to land when Carmen crouched his way in close under Paul's stand-up style.

Pender, four years younger at 30 with more speed and an edge in reflexes, slowly wore down Basilio, turning the left into a battering attack weapon. The ceaseless left hand barrage finally took its toll.

Basilio came out in the 13th in a bold bid to take command. But Pender rallied quickly and sent Carmen down with a left. Carmen partially fell across the ropes and went down on one knee. After taking an eight-count he got up unsteadily just before the bell.

Basilio went down, taking a nine-count, from a Pender left hook in the 15th.

Carmen had Pender in trouble in the second round with a flurry which began with a brutal right to the side of the head. Pender took a series of shots to the body and appeared to be hanging on momentarily from instinct.

A Basilio right hand bomb opened a cut over the left eyelid in the fourth round and Carmen was able to keep reopening the wound throughout the struggle.

After his second round lesson, Pender managed to move smartly out of reach of many of Basilio's smashing shots or managed to partially deflect them.

Pender, who kept reporters waiting for about five minutes before admitting them to his dressing room, said the Basilio right hand in the second round didn't hurt him as much as it appeared.

"It was more a flash sting. I recovered and came right out of it. If you'll remember I hurt him right after this," he said.

Pender saluted the gallant old former champion as "a good worker, who takes a good whacking and keeps on coming. I knew he was going to be tough."

He said his next bout will be against Terry Downes in London, England, July 3. Paul said he planned to go to England in June and train for the fight there.

Pender said the fight went "just about like I had it planned. I thought from the fifth on I could breeze on in."

Asked if he was in trouble in either the second or the fourth rounds, Pender replied, "No. I was never in trouble."

Basilio said he hurt his left shoulder in the fourth round and "couldn't fight with the left hook from then on. If I'd had a left hook, I think I could have beat him."

Basilio declined to make any statement about possible retirement.

Los Angeles Manages 1-0 Red Victory

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Wally Moon ran his hitting streak to 11 games and drove in the only run with a first inning single Saturday night as the Los Angeles defeated Cincinnati 1-0 behind six-hit pitching by Johnny Podres.

The victory moved the Dodgers into first place in the National League.

It was a tough loss for Joey Jay, the former Milwaukee righthander, who went the distance for the Reds and yielded only four hits.

The Dodgers got their run when Jim Gilliam sliced a double to left, moved to third on a wild pitch and came in on Moon's line single to left. It was Moon's 20th hit in 11 games.

Gilliam was thrown out of the game in the third for protesting too vigorously when he was called out on an attempted steal of second.

Podres was relieved by Larry Sherry after giving up two walks in the ninth. Sherry retired the next two men in order to end the game.

The Reds didn't get a hit until the fourth and got a runner as far the fourth and got a runner as far as third base only twice all night. The first time was in the fifth when Cincinnati had Frank Robinson on third and Gene Freese on first with only one out. But the rally collapsed when Gordon Coleman bounced into a double-play.

Jay, who had an earned run average of 1.82 in 39 2-3 inningh against Los Angeles last season, allowed the Dodgers only two hits in last seven innings in this one. Podres, who picked up his second victory in two starts, opened the ninth by walking Chico Cardenas. He got pinch hitter Gus Bell to fly out but was lifted when he walked another pinch hitter, Willie Jones.

LSU Ticket Sales Near

Everybody who halfway followed the doings of the Louisiana State University Tigers last football season seems to feel the next campaign is going to be one of the best in the school's history although we expect Coach Paul Dietzel at anytime to begin itemizing just why this is going to be a tough season for the Bengals.

You won't need Dietzel to tell you how tough its going to be if you'll just study the schedule, but its the kind of fare that has been met with success to help LSU, under Dietzel, become a national power in recent years.

So, with those sophomores of last year primed for their big year, promising a keener offense, and with a recognized fine defense, we look for LSU to supplant Ole Miss in the SEC or become the victim of resounding upsets.

We do this shot for LSU today when reminded that Jack Gilmore, business manager of Athletics at LSU, is preparing to mail out application forms to all regular season ticket holders for LSU's 1961 home games.

If you owned season tickets to LSU stadium last year, you will be given a chance between May 1, and May 29 to reclaim the same seats or be given better ones in the event that an old customer who had the better seat does not reclaim the same. You who held season tickets last year will automatically receive application forms for this year.

LSU will conduct an advanced general sale of the season pasteboards during the same period in May, and any LSU fans of this area who did not own such tickets last year, but who would like to purchase them this year, can apply now to "Jack Gilmore, Business Manager of Athletics, Louisiana State University, Baton Rouge, La." and he will send you the regular ticket application forms that will also include the separate and varying prices for tickets to LSU games away from home.

After the regular customers are taken care of, the new applicants will be supplied the remaining tickets for Bendal Stadium. The tickets will be mailed out about August 15.

The price will be $25 for six home games —Texas A&M, Sept. 30; Georgia Tech, Oct. 7; Kentucky (Homecoming), Oct. 21; Ole Miss., Nov. 4; Mississippi State, Nov. 18; and Tulane, Nov. 25. The road games are Rice at Houston, Sept. 23; South Carolina at Columbia, S. C., Oct. 14; Florida at Gainesville, Oct. 28; and North Carolina at Chapel Hill, Nov. 11.

Bow And Arrow Fans Organize

Organization of bow hunters and field archers of Ouachita parish is planned here tomorrow night when bow enthusiasts gather at the Monroe Community Center to take steps toward forming their own club.

Meeting time is 7 o'clock tomorrow evening. In addition to organizational plans, the program will include a 30-minute film about longbow hunting, some demonstration shooting, registration of members, and election of officers.

Mr. and Mrs. J. M. McBeth, among the foremost archers that we know about in Louisiana, are Ouachita residents who are among the leaders of the organizational plan.

A. S. Huffman and Ada Bess Hart, directors of physical education and health respectively of men and women at Northeast Louisiana State College, have helped develope a lot of young archers with regular classes at the Monroe school. A lot of the charter members will very likely be products of the college archery range.

Men, women, and children are invited to participate, and the women, at least, will be able to boast one of the south's foremost women archers in their ranks.

Mrs. McBeth recently won the women's division championship of the Deep South Archery Tournament at Louisiana Tech. The men have a lot of respect for her bow. There are very few in this section who can match or beat her shooting.

She will participate in the El Dorado Open Tournament next Sunday, and she will be numbered among the expected 10,000 archers who will participate in the National Tournament at Crystal Springs, Ark., June 27-28-29-30. It will be the first time for the National to be held in the south.

Louisiana bow hunting season in the past few years have helped stimulate the sport. Last fall bow hunters were given five successive weekends of deer hunting before the regular gun seasons opened and then they could continue to use their bow instead of a gun. (By the way, Mrs. McBeth got her deer last year, too).

The Louisiana Wildlife Federation, at its recent convention here, drafted a recommendation to the Louisiana Wild Life and Fisheries Commission requesting "more days" for the bow hunters next season.

Caught On The Fly

Junior guard Shelby Aulds, West Monroe, and freshman forward Bobby Andrews, Marion, were north Louisiana athletes among the eight University of Southwestern Louisiana basketball players rewarded with their big "S" letters for an outstanding season recently.

Dickie Crowe, Monroe, and Richard Mitchell, Calhoun, both second basemen, will be seeing a lot of each other this summer in the Class B Northwest League.

Dickie, the ex - Ouachita Parish High athlete owned by the Los Angeles Dodgers, is playing at Salem, Ore., and Richard, property of the San Francisco Giants, is doing his chores at Eugene.

Since the Gulf States Conference track meet is scheduled for Saturday, May 13, conflicting with previously announced dates for Louisiana High School Athletic Association meets, the LHSAA is moving its meets up one day to Friday, May 12, according to Commissioner T. H. Waters.

McNeese hosts triple - A; double -A is at Northwestern State; Class A is at LSU; Class B performs at Louisiana Tech; and Southwestern hosts Class C.

ZIMMER STARS

Cubs Overhaul Phillies By 6-4

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — Don Zimmer's home run in the 11th inning, with a man on base, gave the Chicago Cubs a 6-4 victory Saturday over the Philadelphia Phillies.

Homers by veterans Frank Thomas and Ernie Banks contributed to the victory.

Zimmer, who had figured in all of Chicago's scoring against Philadelphia in a 3-2 victory Friday night, drove home pinch hitter Richie Ashburn with his first homer of the year.

Asburn, a former Phil, had opened the inning with a single off reliever Dick Farrell, the loser and the last of three Philadelphia pitchers. Don Elston got the victory.

The game had been tied at 4-all in the sixth.

Thomas, who had three hits, got his homer in the second, for the first run of the game. The Phillies scored two runs in the bottom of the second after Jack Curtis gave up walks to Tony Gonzalez and Frank Herrera. Gonzalez scored on a passed ball and Herrera on Rebuen Amaro's squeeze bunt.

The Phillies then went ahead 3-1 in the third on Bobby Gene Smith's RBI double.

The Cubs came back strong in the fifth and sixth innings. Curtis singled and Al Heist drove him home with a triple in the fifth, then Banks led off the sixth with his second homer of the year. Thomas, coming to bat next, doubled. He scored on Dick Bertell's single to make the score 4-3.

But the Phillies tied it in the bottom of the inning, on Clay Dalrymple's bloop single, which scored Gonzalez.

Redskins Are Warned Not To Fight Govt.

WASHINGTON (AP) — Secretary of the Interior Stewart L. Udall expressed hope Thursday that owner George Preston Marshall of the Washington professional football team will hire a Negro player rather than fight the Interior Department.

Udall has warned Marshall that of he practices discrimination in hiring players he can not use the new Washington stadium now being built.

A reporter asked the secretary at a news conference if he would report on what progress he was making in his controversy with Marshall.

"Up to the present we have been gathering facts and information from several quarters," Udall said.

"We are trying to get into strong enough position to make it plain to George that it will be the better part of wisdom to cooperate with us and not fight against the department."

He added he has not been contacted by Marshall or his attorneys since the team owner first replied by letter to the secretary's notice that Marshall would be expected to abide by anti-discrimination policies of the Kennedy administration.

Marshall has contracted to use the new District of Columbia stadium, now under construction on park land, which is under Udall's administration.

TRIANDOS STARS IN 5-3 VICTORY

Orioles Overpower Yanks To Snap 5-Tilt Win Skein

BALTIMORE (AP)—The Baltimore Orioles beat the New York Yankees at their patented home run game Saturday, but had to settle for one victory and a tie in a rain-shortened day-night doubleheader.

The Orioles won the day game 5-3 on a two-run homer by Gus Triandos in the eighth inning. Another two-run homer by Jackie Brandt tied the nightcap 5-5 in the seventh inning just before rain ended the contest with the Orioles at bat.

The second game, delayed 51 minutes by rain at the start and called after a 32-minute wait in the seventh, goes into the books as a tie game and will have to be replayed in its entirety. The performances by the players will be added to their records.

Brandt's seventh inning homer off relief pitcher Bill Stafford, his second of the night game and the fifth of the twin bill by the Orioles, enabled Baltimore to overcome a 5-1 New York lead manufactured by Bill Skowron's grand slam homer in the fourth inning.

The Yankees scored one run off Oriole starter Hal Brown in the third on singles by Elston Howard, Cletis Boyer and Bobby Richardson. Brown departed in the fourth when New York loaded the bases on a single by Tony Kubek, a double by Mickey Mantle and a walk.

Skowron sliced reliefer Wes Stock's first pitch high into the right field bleachers, just inside the foul pole.

Baltimore, which had scored one run in the first on two singles and a double by Gus Triandos, picked up two more in the fifth on solo homers by Brandt and Jim Gentile off Yankee starter Jim Coates.

New York rapped out 10 hits in the opener to Baltimore's six, but again the long ball played a big role in the Oriole triumph.

In addition to the game-winning homer by Triandos, Marv Breeding hit a solo blast to ignite a three-run fifth inning off starter Ralph Terry. Whitey Herzog's triple drove in another and he scored on a wild relay throw by shortstop Kubek.

Ryne Duren, who walked Gentile with two out before Triandos homered, was tagged with the loss.

The Yanks scored two runs in the fourth on a sacrifice fly by Roger Maris and a run-producing single by Skowron. They tied the score 3-3 in the seventh on three singles, the last by Hector Lopez driving in a run.

The first game defeat dropped the Yanks from a first-place tie into third place in the American League.

A crowd of 26,662 watched the separate admissions doubleheader.

Bulldogs Claim Strong GSC Lead

RUSTON, La. (Special)—Louisiana Tech's miraculous Bulldogs, a green corps that wasn't given much chance to defend its GSC baseball crown this year, moved into a commanding lead in the pennant race here yesterday with a doubleheader sweep over Northwestern State 6-4 and 1-0.

The Bulldogs reached the halfway mark yesterday with a 9-1 record by using the same tactics that have paid - off for them all season.

Razor - sharp pitching and just enough hitting to win, plus the ability to come from behind when the chips were down, have been Bulldog Hallmarks all year and the Demon twinbill was no exception.

The Canines bounced back from a 4-4 tie in the first game with enough hitting power to win, then turned to mound mastary in the second.

Both Charley Fuller and Willie Williams won their third games of the season without a loss, with Williams outdueling Don Scribber 1-0 in the nitecap.

In the opener Fuller was staked to a four-run lead with Paul Labenne's double and Rron McNabb's single in the first inning, a solo circuit clout by George Garrett in the second and a two-run homer by Joe Zaffster in the fourth.

The Demons bunched three of their six hits off Fuller in the sixth to tie the score. Tom Mitchell reached, on a fielder's choice, Tom Baker singled, and O'Brian Smith singled scoring Mitchell. Herbie Smith then clouted a three - run homer.

Tech bounded to win in the bottom half when Garrett walked, Frank Betz singled and both runners advanced on a wild pitch. Kelton Bacon singled in the two runs.

The Bulldogs broke up the scoreless nightcap when Wendell Lorio was hit by a pitch, was sacrificed to second and had to hold second when Max Lewis got an infield hit. Both runners advanced on a passed ball and Lorio scored when Mack Hunt got a scratch hit off the pitcher's glove.

The twin wins upped the Berry Hinton coached Bulldog's record for the full campaign to 15-3. NSC has won one and lost nine in the GSC race.

Champ Manages Decision Victory

By Bob Hoobing

BOSTON (AP) — Artful Paul Pender retained his version of the world middleweight boxing title Saturday night, using his rapier-like left hand as a double-edged weapon for a unanimous 15-round decision over stubborn Carmen Basilio.

Pender twice, led the crustly former middle and welterweight king. Basilio took an eight-count when hammered off his feet by pender's smashing left in the 13th. Paul used the left hook to send Basilio to the canvas again in the 15th round.

Basilio earlier had claimed he had not been knocked down in 78 previous pro fights, including 10 other title contests.

Pender, fighting his skillful waiting, counter-punching game against a hard-hitting foe, had to withstand some Basilio bombs in the early stages before carrying out his pre-fight battle plan.

Referee Eddie Bradley scored 148-135 for Pender on the 10-point "must" scoring system in Massachusetts while Judge Joe Blumsack and Judge Harry Sundberg called it 147-132 and 147-138 for the champ in this nationally televised show from Boston Garden.

Making his third defense of a crown recognized in Massachusetts, New York and Europe, Pender held off the feared Basilio power in the early stages and again in a late rally. The left hand served to keep Basilio off stride and to land when Carmen crouched his way in close under Paul's stand-up style.

Pender, four years younger at 30 with more speed and an edge in reflexes, slowly wore down Basilio, turning the left into a battering attack weapon. The ceaseless left hand barrage finally took its toll.

Basilio came out in the 13th in a bold bid to take command. But Pender rallied quickly and sent Carmen down with a left. Carmen partially fell across the ropes and went down on one knee. After taking an eight-count he got up unsteadily just before the bell.

Basilio went down, taking a nine-count, from a Pender left hook in the 15th.

Carmen had Pender in trouble in the second round with a flurry which began with a brutal right to the side of the head. Pender took a series of shots to the body and appeared to be hanging on momentarily from instinct.

A Basilio right hand bomb opened a cut over the left eyelid in the fourth round and Carmen was able to keep reopening the wound throughout the struggle.

After his second round lesson, Pender managed to move smartly out of reach of many of Basilio's smashing shots or managed to partially deflect them.

Pender, who kept reporters waiting for about five minutes before admitting them to his dressing room, said the Basilio right hand in the second round didn't hurt him as much as it appeared.

"It was more a flash sting. I recovered and came right out of it. If you'll remember I hurt him right after this," he said.

Pender saluted the gallant old former champion as "a good worker, who takes a good whacking and keeps on coming. I knew he was going to be tough."

He said his next bout will be against Terry Downes in London, England, July 3. Paul said he planned to go to England in June and train for the fight there.

Pender said the fight went "just about like I had it planned. I thought from the fifth on I could breeze on in."

Asked if he was in trouble in either the second or the fourth rounds, Pender replied, "No, I was never in trouble."

Basilio said he hurt his left shoulder in the fourth round and "couldn't fight with the left hook from then on. If I'd had a left hook, I think I could have beat him."

Basilio declined to make any statement about possible retirement.

Los Angeles Manages 1-0 Red Victory

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Wally Moon ran his hitting streak to 11 games and drove in the only run with a first inning single Saturday night as the Los Angeles defeated Cincinnati 1-0 behind six-hit pitching by Johnny Podres.

The victory moved the Dodgers into first place in the National League.

It was a tough loss for Joey Jay, the former Milwaukee righthander, who went the distance for the Reds and yielded only four hits.

The Dodgers got their run when Jim Gilliam sliced a double to left, moved to third on a wild pitch and came in on Moon's line single to left. It was Moon's 20th hit in 11 games.

Gilliam was thrown out of the game in the third for protesting too vigorously when he was called out on an attempted steal of second.

Podres was relieved by Larry Sherry after giving up two walks in the ninth. Sherry retired the next two men in order to end the game.

The Reds didn't get a hit until the fourth and got a runner as far the fourth and got a runner as far as third base only twice all night. The first time was in the fifth when Cincinnati had Frank Robinson on third and Gene Freese on first with only one out. But the rally collapsed when Gordon Coleman bounced into a double-play.

Jay, who had an earned run average of 1.82 in 39 2-3 inningh against Los Angeles last season, allowed the Dodgers only two hits in last seven innings in this one. Podres, who picked up his second victory in two starts, opened the ninth by walking Chico Cardenas. He got pinch hitter Gus Bell to fly out but was lifted when he walked another pinch hitter, Willie Jones.

SIX - HOMER GAME

Boston Red Sox Shade Chicago By 7-6 Margin

By JERRY LISKA

CHICAGO (AP) — Pumpsie Green's leadoff homer in the 11th broke up a wild, six-homer game Saturday and gave the Boston Red Sox a 7-6 victory over the Chicago White Sox.

It was Boston's first Comiskey Park triumph in 14 starts. Ironically, the 7-6 score was the same by which Boston last won in Chicago on Aug. 26, 1959.

The game went crazier than Bill Veeck's earth-shaking scoreboard in a ninth inning which produced five Boston runs as Pete Runnels and Gary Geiger each belted two-run homers for a 6-4 Red Sox lead, and White Sox rookie J. C. Martin slammed a two-run homer to tie it at 6-6.

Boston's explosive ninth nullified a 4-1 Chicago lead built on Sherm Lollar's three-run homer in the fourth and Al Smith's solo homer in the sixth.

The winner was Ted Wills, fourth Red Sox pitcher, who entered the game in the ninth. The loser was Turk Lown, third White Sox hurler, who started the 10th.

Chicago starter Frank Baumann appeared headed for his second victory against one defeat on a four-hitter until the ninth. Then he was shelled from the mound by Runnels two-run homer. Green's double and Rip Repulski's single, scoring Green.

Gerry Staley whiffed the next batter, but then was tagged for a two-run homer by Geiger, which put Boston ahead 6-4.

In the bottom of the ninth, the third Boston pitcher, Mike Fornieles, walked the leadoff Sox batter and then rookie Martin stroked a two-run homer into the right field stands to tie it at 6-6.

The Sox almost had the victory stowed away later in the ninth when Nellie Fox, who banged four hits, singled to center with men on second and first. But pinch runner Floyd Robinson cartwheeled rounding third and was nailed at the plate.

Boston scored an unearned run in the second on a walk and two errors.

But the Pale Hose caught up with Boston starter Ike Delock in the fourth when Lollar slammed his first homer after singles by Roy Sievers and Minnie Minoso for a 3-1 Chicago lead.

With two out in the sixth, Smith also slammed a homer into the left field stands, and after that inning, Delock yielded to a pinch hitter and was replaced by Tracy Stallard.

DOWN LIONS 4-2

Tribe Wins First Loop Tiff Away

HAMMOND, La. (Special) — Northeast State finally won a game away from home, but fell prey to the splitting jinx again when the Indians downed Southeastern 4-2 in the first of two here yesterday, but lost the nightcap 7-1.

As usual Northeast's winning pitcher was leftie Jerry Godwin, a 6'2" sophomore from Shreveport. Of the four loop games the 'Skins have won, Godwin has accounted for three.

He held the Lions to nine widely scattered hits and left 10 stranded on the base paths, en route to his fourth win of the season.

Northeast scored all the runs it needed in the first inning when a double scored one run and John Pace slammed a two-run homer.

Godwin however, overextended his hand when he attempted to pitch the second game and accumulated the loss when Southeastern tied the score in the fourth then pummeled the Tribe for three runs in both the fifth and sixth, including a pinch-hit homer with on aboard by Butch Troy.

Jack Oubre won the nightcap for the Lions, limiting the Tribe to five hits. Stan Gardner relieved Godwin in the fifth and was spelled in the sixth by Teddy Payne.

The knotter, fourth of the year for Northeast, enabled them to tie for third with Southwestern in the muddled lower echelons of conference play, when the Bulldogs dropped a pair to McNeese. Both stand 4-6 in GSC running.

Southeastern, the conference favorite was held to a tie for second with a 6-4 skein when McNeese, a late comer, bounced Southwestern, to claim and equal ranking.

Ken Venturi Pulls To Tie In Houston

By MAX B. SKELTON

HOUSTON (AP)—Peter Thomson lost a two-stroke lead Saturday and then sank birdie putts on the two final holes to rescue a tie with Ken Venturi and Tommy Bolt for the 54-hole lead in the $40,000 Houston Golf Classic.

Thomson, the leader after 18 and 36 holes, had seen Bolt and Venturi surge into the lead on the 16th green. The Australian then sank a 15-footer on the 17th and a 4-footer on the final green for a 2-over-par 72 and a 54-hole 208.

Venturi, the Californian who is seeking his first championship of the year, had started the birdie parade at 13 by hitting an 8-footer for a 70-70—68—208.

Bolt, playing in the same threesome with Thomson, got his tie with a 1-footer and placed a 70 beside a pair of 69s.

Tied at 209 were Jay Hebert, Lafayette, La., and Julius Boros, Mid Pines, N. C.

Heading a four-way tie at 210 wah Arnold Palmer, who began the day one stroke off the pace and jumped to a 73. Tied with him were Freddie Haas, New Orleans; Lionel Hebert, Lafayette, La., and Dape Marr, Sun City, Ariz.

The wild reshuffle on the back nine gave indication the event could be headed for its third straight playoff. Boros defeated Jack Burke Jr. in 1959 while Bill Collins defeated Palmer a year ago.

Thomson, with early rounds of 65 and 71, had five bogies and only one birdie as he moved onto the 17th green.

Venturi got his 68 with a 34-34 for the 7,122-yard, par 72 Memorial Park course.

"Am I really leading?" he asked sportswriters. "I thought you guys thought this was a two-man tournament."

Venturi was referring to an anticipated duel between Palmer and Gary Player, the stars of the Masters tournament two weeks ago. Player moved into contention with 72-69-70—211.

The leaders:

Ken Venturi	70-70-68—208

Lena Faulk In Babe Zaharias Tourney Lead

BEAUMONT, Tex. (AP)—Mary Lena Faulk of Sea Island, Ga., who has been a long time away from the winner's circle, carved a 4-under-par 69 Saturday to take the lead at 36 holes in the $7,000 Babe Zaharias Open Golf Tournament.

Her 141 was a stroke better than Mickey Wright of Dallas, the first-round leader, who shot a 72 for 142.

Surging up from back in the pack came Louise Suggs of Atlanta, the leading winner of women's golf, who matched Miss Faulks' 69 and pulled into third place at 143.

Patty Berg, the veteran from St. Andrews, Ill., and Kathy Whitworth of Jal, N. M., were tied for fourth place at 146.

Miss Faulk played a most consistent round and had only one bogey—on the 14th hole where she pushed into a trap and took three to get down. She banged birdies on 7, 8, 11, 12 and 13, sinking a 25-footer for the first one.

Miss Wright got into all sorts of trouble on the 6,219 yard Beaumont Country Club course but was sensational at getting out.

Miss Suggs played a typically consistent round with only one bogey when she hit a trap. She had five birdies, sinking long putts for two of them.

The leaders:

Indians Host Cowboy Tennis Squad Monday

LAKE CHARLES, La. (Special) —McNeese State College's defending Gulf States Conference tennis champions ride a four-match winning streak into a home clash with Northeast Louisiana Monday.

The Cowboys dropped their season-opener to SMU, but have bounced back to whip TCU, Southeastern Louisiana, Southwestern Louisiana and Northwestern State in subsequent starts.

Monday's match is the first of four on tap for coach Lee Hayley's Cowboys during the week. McNeese will invade New Orleans for a bout with Loyola on Thursday, then will take on Southeastern at Hammond on Friday.

The Pokes will return to their home courts for a match with Louisiana Tech on Saturday.

Agile Federico Zarazua, senior from Mexico City who has ruled the GSC as No. 1 singles champion for three straight years, is McNeese's leading netter.

Tigers Topple State Again In SEC Action

STATE COLLEGE, Miss. (AP) —Sophomore Lynn Amedee pitched Louisiana State to a two-hit 4-2 victory over Mississippi State Saturday.

Amedee gave up singles to Johnny Cantrell and Don Pope in the second inning when MSU scored its ifrst run. He was relieved by Allen Smith after hitting two batters in the ninth.

LSU's winning run came in the sixth inning when Roy Winston's squeeze bunt scored John Bailey LSU's leading hitter with his three bagger and two singles.

BATTLE RAGINS FOR POSITIONS

Dietzal Claims Satisfaction With Bengal Grid Practice

BATON ROUGE, La. (Special) —Louisiana State University's footballers have passed the halfway mark in spring drills and Coach Paul Dietzel has expressed satisfaction with progress made by the Bengal gridders to date.

Heading into the final half of spring drills with one eye on the spring game date of May 6, Coach Dietzel praised the spirit and attitude of the squad which he termed "as spirited a squad as I have seen at LSU."

Faced with a problem of replacing nine top defensive players, the Bengal coach said that it was too early to tell whether this problem had been solved, but admitted that the improvement of many players gave some indication that the problem was not as acute as it was at the beginning of spring work.

At left end, where the veteran Andy Bourgeois held forth last year, a red-hot battle is being waged between Gene Sykes of Covington and Bobby Flurry of Homer. Dietzel called Flurry "one of the most improved players on the squad." The rangy (6-3) Flurry is keeping Sykes hustling to maintain his White team position.

Another "vastly improved" lineman is tackle Don "Red" Estes, a 220-pound junior from Brookhaven, Miss. The big redhead is contesting the left tackle position with Bobby Richards, the 1960 White team starter. Although each player has moved up and down in daily workouts, Estes currently holds a slight edge.

With All-SEC contender Roy Winston missing spring drills due to participation in baseball, letterman Dexter Gary, a 200-pound junior from Kaplan, has moved into the White team left guard slot. An extremely hard worker who excels on offense, the Kaplan youth is having a "fine spring."

Pushing Gary for the Number One slot is one of the most pleasant surprises of the spring, sophomore Robbie Hucklebridge, a 220-pounder from Bossier City. Hucklebridge is definitely in contention for playing time this fall.

The center position has been a three-way battle between lettermen Dennis Gaubatz of West Columbia, Tex., and Gary Kinchen (Baton Rouge) and redshirt Ronand Pere (Larose). All three tip the scales at near 200 pounds and while Kinchen and Gaubatz have the edge in experience, Pere is waging a rugged campaign for recognition.

Another highly - competitive spot is right guard where lettermen Eddie Habert (Vicksburg, Miss.) and Monk Guillot (New Orleans) are top contenders. Redshirt Sammy Odom of Minden is also playing like he means to see action this fall.

A trio of lettermen give the Bengals depth at right tackle, with Rodney Guillot of Baton Rouge, Billy Booth of Minden and Fred Miller of Homer not showing too much difference in ability.

Junior Jack Gates, a 200-pounder speedster from Lake Charles, looks like the Number One right end at the present time, although squadman Bob Rice, another Lake Charles product, has shown tremendous improvement. Big Bill Truax, a 6-5 sophomore from New Orleans is also looking good and is scrapping for recognition with sophomores Mike Morgan of Natchez, Miss., Jerry Young of Lafayette and redshirt Darrell Lester of Lake Charles.

Jimmy Field (Baton Rouge) and Dwight Robinson are the class of the spring corps quarterbacks while Lynn Amedee pitches for the Tiger baseball team. Coach Dietzel said that Field was "improved in every phase of the game and should show first class quarterbacking this fall." Robinson, a redshirt from Ponchatoula, is also throwing the ball well enough to merit considerable consideration for play this fall.

Jerry Stovall is again showing why he is one of the best halfbacks in the South. The West Monroe junior has improved defensively as well as ball carrying and his punting is as effective as ever. With Go team halfback Bo Campbell participating in track, the only other letterman available this spring at this position is senior Tommy Neck. Racing back and forth from the tennis courts where he is a member of the Tiger net squad, Neck still has participated enough to command the Number Two halfback post behind Stovall.

Still another pleasant surprise in the Tiger camp is junior right halfback Ray Wilkins of Homer, whom Tiger coaches feel has convinced them that he is a first rate footballer. With senior Wendell Harris sidelined with a pulled muscle, Wilkins has claimed the Number One spot and would not relinquish it too easily.

Another torrid battle is being waged behind Wilkins at right halfback where squadman Johnny Mercer of Bossier City and redshirt Danny Neumann of Tallulah are in contention.

Possibly the bittest scramble, however, is at fullback, where a different player appears each day on the White team. The competition is between Senior lettermen Earl Gros (Houma), junior lettermen Steve Ward (Baton Rouge) and Charles Cranford (Minden) and sophomore Buddy Hamic of Crowley. Although lacking the experience of the three lettermen, Hamic has shown tremendous potential this spring. The 6-2, 195-pounder does everything well.

If dame fortune continues to smile on the Tigers and injuries are kept at their current minimum, fans should see an interesting spring game May 6.

Twins Triumph Over Senators

ST. PAUL-MINNEAPOLIS (AP) —Rookie shortstop Zoilo Versalles punched a sacrifice fly to center field in the bottom of the 10th inning with the bases loaded for a 5-4 Minnesota Twins victory over the Washington Senators Saturday.

Versalles, who had gone 0-for-5 in the nip-and-tuck contest, blasted a line drive off relief pitcher Dave Sisler to dead center as catcher Earl Battey scored the winning run.

Battey had opened the Twins' half of the 10th with a single and went to second on a walk by right-hander Rudy Hernandez, the second of three pitchers who followed starter Bennie Daniels. Third baseman Billy Gardner laid down a sacrifice bunt, which sent Battey to third and Reno Bertoia, who was purposely passed, to second.

Pinch hitter Dan Dobbek walked filling the bases, then Versalles delivered his game-winning sacrifice fly.

Rookie lefthander Bill Pleis, who relieved Twins starter Pedro Ramos in the ninth, was credited with the victory. Hernandez was the loser, having put Battey on first base. Then Dave Sisler, who succeeded Hernandez, gave up the game-winning sacrifice.

Willie Tasby, the Senators' center fielder, smacked a 420-foot home run in the second to tie it up.

Two of the Senators' three runs in the sixth came on Dale Long's home run, his second in two days. Don Mincher, who also hit one Friday for the Twins, hit a solo homer in the bottom of the sixth.

The Twins evened the series at 1-1 and moved into second place in the American League as 17,445 fans watched.

McNeese Golf Squad On Road During Week

LAKE CHARLES, La. (Special) —The open road beckons McNeese State's golfers, who will take on three Gulf States Conference opponents in a week's time.

Coach Ellis Guillory's linkmen are scheduled to make their first stop at Lafayette Monday for a dual match with Southwestern Louisiana.

The Cowboys will meet Northeast at Monroe on Friday and Louisiana Tech at Ruston the following day to close out their rigorous week.

McNeese will enter the Southwestern match with an all-even 3-3 season record.

Doug Farr, wispy 135-pound junior from Alexandria, and slender Vohn Myers, a senior from Beaumont, have sparked the Cowboys to three victories in their last four starts, including a 14½-6½ home course decision over Southwestern.

Each has won four of six individual matches this spring. Farr has scored 11½ points and has averaged only 72.6 strokes per 18-hole round. Myers has scored 11 points and is making the 18-hole tour in an average of 75.6 strokes.

Our Reputation Likes To Ride In Comfort

Some things improve with age like champagne and antiques, but aside from fond family attachments and pleasant memories, an automobile doesn't. When an auto gets along in years, its cash value decreases but it isn't the end of the line for it either.

Take some of the late model used cars of all makes we have over here on our big OK lot at No. 2nd at Washington St., tho we know who owned them, we bring back the new car lustre; we tune and recondition their motors to 1961 efficiency. We actually improve used cars with brand new factory parts and safety check each car to insure your driving safety.

It's like this, when you drive a new or used car out of our place we're watching our reputation go down the street. We don't have to worry about a new Chevrolet or Corvair but we don't want to worry about a used car either. Sure, we guarantee them, but you expect, and we want you to get, more than that—we want your comfort, and our reputation riding in peace on smooth springs.

When you take possession of a new Chevrolet or Corvair or one of our OK reconditioned used cars, it has been checked and serviced thoroughly so it will deliver all the strength and comfort we promised in all seasons on all roads in all kinds of weather. We deliver even more than those pretty picture ads said because it's our baby and our neighbors who bought it.

So when we get a used car in trade though it's one we know personally, it's got to be checked and approved before it becomes yours, because our reputation is going to ride along with you and we're mighty particular about our reputation riding in comfort.

Ken Venturi Pulls To Tie In Houston

By MAX B. SKELTON

HOUSTON (AP)—Peter Thomson lost a two-stroke lead Saturday and then sank birdie putts on the two final holes to rescue a tie with Ken Venturi and Tommy Bolt for the 54-hole lead in the $40,000 Houston Golf Classic.

Thomson, the leader after 18 and 36 holes, had seen Bolt and Venturi surge into the lead on the 16th green. The Australian then sank a 15-footer on the 17th and a 4-footer on the final green for a 2-over-par 72 and a 54-hole 208.

Venturi, the Californian who is seeking his first championship of the year, had started the birdie parade at 18 by hitting an 8-footer for a 70-70—68—208.

Bolt, playing in the same threesome with Thomson, got his tie with a 1-footer and placed a 70 beside a pair of 69s.

Tied at 209 were Jay Hebert, Lafayette, La., and Julius Boros, Mid Pines, N. C.

Heading a four-way tie at 210 wah Arnold Palmer, who began the day one stroke off the pace and jumped to a 73. Tied with him were Freddie Haas, New Orleans; Lionel Hebert, Lafayette, La., and Dape Marr, Sun City, Ariz.

The wild reshuffle on the back nine gave indication the event could be headed for its third straight playoff. Boros defeated Jack Burke Jr. in 1959 while Bill Collins defeated Palmer a year ago.

Thomson, with early rounds of 65 and 71, had five bogies and only one birdie as he moved onto the 17th green.

Venturi got his 68 with a 34-34 for the 7,122-yard, par 72 Memorial Park course.

"Am I really leading?" he asked sportswriters. "I thought you guys thought this was a two-man tournament."

Venturi was referring to an anticipated duel between Palmer and Gary Player, the stars of the Masters tournament two weeks ago. Player moved into contention with 72-69-70—211.

SIX - HOMER GAME

Boston Red Sox Shade Chicago By 7-6 Margin

By JERRY LISKA

CHICAGO (AP) — Pumpsie Green's leadoff homer in the 11th broke up a wild, six-homer game Saturday and gave the Boston Red Sox a 7-6 victory over the Chicago White Sox.

It was Boston's first Comiskey Park triumph in 14 starts. Ironically, the 7-6 score was the same by which Boston last won in Chicago on Aug. 26, 1959.

The game went crazier than Bill Veeck's earth-shaking scoreboard in a ninth inning which produced five Boston runs as Pete Runnels and Gary Geiger each belted two-run homers for a 6-4 Red Sox lead, and White Sox rookie J. C. Martin slammed a two-run homer to tie it at 6-6.

Boston's explosive ninth nullified a 4-1 Chicago lead built on Sherm Lollar's three-run homer in the fourth and Al Smith's solo homer in the sixth.

The winner was Ted Wills, fourth Red Sox pitcher, who entered the game in the ninth. The loser was Turk Lown, third White Sox hurler, who started the 10th.

Chicago starter Frank Baumann appeared headed for his second victory against one defeat on a four-hitter until the ninth. Then he was shelled from the mound by Runnels two-run homer, Green's double and Rip Repulski's single, scoring Green.

Gerry Staley whiffed the next batter, but then was tagged for a two-run homer by Geiger, which put Boston ahead 6-4.

In the bottom of the ninth, the third Boston pitcher, Mike Fornieles, walked the leadoff Sox batter and then rookie Martin stroked a two-run homer into the right field stands to tie it at 6-6.

The Sox almost had the victory stowed away later in the ninth when Nellie Fox, who banged four hits, singled to center with men on second and first. But pinch runner Floyd Robinson cartwheeled rounding third and was nailed at the plate.

Boston scored an unearned run in the second on a walk and two errors.

But the Pale Hose caught up with Boston starter Ike Delock in the fourth when Lollar slammed his first homer after singles by Roy Sievers and Minnie Minoso for a 3-1 Chicago lead.

With two out in the sixth, Smith also slammed a homer into the left field stands, and after that inning, Delock yielded to a pinch hitter and was replaced by Tracy Stallard.

DOWN LIONS 4-2

Tribe Wins First Loop Tiff Away

HAMMOND, La. (Special) — Northeast State finally won a game away from home, but fell prey to the splitting jinx again when the Indians downed Southeastern 4-2 in the first of two here yesterday, but lost the nightcap 7-1.

As usual Northeast's winning pitcher was leftie Jerry Godwin, a 6'2" sophomore from Shreveport. Of the four loop games the 'Skins have won, Godwin has accounted for three.

He held the Lions to nine widely scattered hits and left 10 stranded on the base paths, en route to his fourth win of the season.

Northeast scored all the runs it needed in the first inning when a double scored one run and John Pace slammed a two-run homer.

Godwin however, overextended his hand when he attempted to pitch the second game and accumulated the loss when Southeastern tied the score in the fourth then pummeled the Tribe for three runs in both the fifth and sixth, including a pinch-hit homer with on aboard by Butch Troy.

Jack Oubre won the nightcap for the Lions, limiting the Tribe to five hits. Stan Gardner relieved Godwin in the fifth and was spelled in the sixth by Teddy Payne.

The knotter, fourth of the year for Northeast, enabled them to tie for third with Southwestern in the muddled lower echelons of conference play, when the Bulldogs dropped a pair to McNeese. Both stand 4-6 in GSC running.

Southeastern, the conference favorite was held to a tie for second with a 6-4 skein when McNeese, a late comer, bounced Southwestern, to claim and equal ranking.

Lena Faulk In Babe Zaharias Tourney Lead

BEAUMONT, Tex. (AP)—Mary Lena Faulk of Sea Island, Ga., who has been a long time away from the winner's circle, carved a 4-under-par 69 Saturday to take the lead at 36 holes in the $7,000 Babe Zaharias Open Golf Tournament.

Her 141 was a stroke better than Mickey Wright of Dallas, the first-round leader, who shot a 72 for 142.

Surging up from back in the pack came Louise Suggs of Atlanta, the leading winner of women's golf, who matched Miss Faulks' 69 and pulled into third place at 143.

Patty Berg, the veteran from St. Andrews, Ill., and Kathy Whitworth of Jal, N. M., were tied for fourth place at 146.

Miss Faulk played a most consistent round and had only one bogey—on the 14th hole where she pushed into a trap and took three to get down. She banged birdies on 7, 8, 11, 12 and 13, sinking a 25-footer for the first one.

Miss Wright got into all sorts of trouble on the 6-219-yard Beaumont Country Club course but was sensational at getting out.

Miss Suggs played a typically consistent round with only one bogey when she hit a trap. She had five birdies, sinking long putts for two of them.

The leaders:

Mary Lena Faulk	72-69—141
Mickey Wright	70-72—142

Indians Host Cowboy Tennis Squad Monday

LAKE CHARLES, La. (Special) —McNeese State College's defending Gulf States Conference tennis champions ride a four-match winning streak into a home clash with Northeast Louisiana Monday.

The Cowboys dropped their season-opener to SMU, but have bounced back to whip TCU, Southeastern Louisiana, Southwestern Louisiana and Northwestern State in subsequent starts.

Monday's match is the first of four on tap for coach Lee Hayley's Cowboys during the week. McNeese will invade New Orleans for a bout with Loyola on Thursday, then will take on Southeastern at Hammond on Friday.

The Pokes will return to their home courts for a match with Louisiana Tech on Saturday.

Agile Federico Zarazua, senior from Mexico City who has ruled the GSC as No. 1 singles champion for three straight years, is McNeese's leading netter.

Tigers Topple State Again In SEC Action

STATE COLLEGE, Miss. (AP) —Sophomore Lynn Amedee pitched Louisiana State to a two-hit 4-2 victory over Mississippi State Saturday.

Amedee gave up singles to Johnny Cantrell and Don Pope in the second inning when MSU scored its ifrst run. He was relieved by Allen Smith after hitting two batters in the ninth.

LSU's winning run came in the sixth inning when Roy Winston's squeeze bunt scored John Bailey LSU's leading hitter with his three bagger and two singles.

BATTLE RAGINS FOR POSITIONS

Dietzal Claims Satisfaction With Bengal Grid Practice

BATON ROUGE, La. (Special) —Louisiana State University's footballers have passed the halfway mark in spring drills and Coach Paul Dietzel has expressed satisfaction with progress made by the Bengal gridders to date.

Heading into the final half of spring drills with one eye on the spring game date of May 6, Coach Dietzel praised the spirit and attitude of the squad which he termed "as spirited a squad as I have seen at LSU."

Faced with a problem of replacing nine top defensive players, the Bengal coach said that it was too early to tell whether this problem had been solved, but admitted that the improvement of many players gave some indication that the problem was not as acute as it was at the beginning of spring work.

At left end, where the veteran Andy Bourgeois held forth last year, a red-hot battle is being waged between Gene Sykes of Covington and Bobby Flurry of Homer. Dietzel called Flurry "one of the most improved players on the squad." The rangy (6-3) Flurry is keeping Sykes hustling to maintain his White team position.

Another "vastly improved" lineman is tackle Don "Red" Estes, a 220-pound junior from Brookhaven, Miss. The big redhead is contesting the left tackle position with Bobby Richards, the 1960 White team starter. Although each player has moved up and down in daily workouts, Estes currently holds a slight edge.

With All-SEC contender Roy Winston missing spring drills due to participation in baseball, letterman Dexter Gary, a 200-pound junior from Kaplan, has moved into the White team left guard slot. An extremely hard worker who excels on offense, the Kaplan youth is having a "fine spring."

Pushing Gary for the Number One slot is one of the most pleasant surprises of the spring, sophomore Robbie Hucklebridge, a 220-pounder from Bossier City. Hucklebridge is definitely in contention for playing time this fall.

The center position has been a three-way battle between lettermen Dennis Gaubatz of West Columbia, Tex., and Gary Kinchen (Baton Rouge) and redshirt Ron-and Pere (Larose). All three tip the scales at near 200 pounds and while Kinchen and Gaubatz have the edge in experience, Pere is waging a rugged campaign for recognition.

Another highly - competitive spot is right guard where lettermen Eddie Habert (Vicksburg, Miss.) and Monk Guillot (New Orleans) are top contenders. Redshirt Sammy Odom of Minden is also playing like he means to see action this fall.

A trio of lettermen give the Bengals depth at right tackle, with Rodney Guillot of Baton Rouge, Billy Booth of Minden and Fred Miller of Homer not showing too much difference in ability.

Junior Jack Gates, a 200-pounder speedster from Lake Charles, looks like the Number One right end at the present time, although squadman Bob Rice, another Lake Charles product, has shown tremendous improvement. Big Bill Truax, a 6-5 sophomore from New Orleans is also looking good and is scrapping for recognition with sophomores Mike Morgan of Natchez, Miss., Jerry Young of Lafayette and redshirt Darrell Lester of Lake Charles.

Jimmy Field (Baton Rouge) and Dwight Robinson are the class of the spring corps quarterbacks while Lynn Amedee pitches for the Tiger baseball team. Coach Dietzel said that Field was "improved in every phase of the game and should show first class quarterbacking this fall." Robinson, a redshirt from Ponchatoula, is also throwing the ball well enough to merit considerable consideration for play this fall.

Jerry Stovall is again showing why he is one of the best halfbacks in the South. The West Monroe junior has improved defensively as well as ball carrying and his punting is as effective as ever. With Go team halfback Bo Campbell participating in track, the only other letterman available this spring at this position is senior Tommy Neck. Racing back and forth from the tennis courts where he is a member of the Tiger net squad, Neck still has participated enough to command the Number Two halfback post behind Stovall.

Still another pleasant surprise in the Tiger camp is junior right halfback Ray Wilkins of Homer, whom Tiger coaches feel has convinced them that he is a first rate footballer. With senior Wendell Harris sidelined with a pulled muscle, Wilkins has claimed the Number One spot and might not relinquish it too easily.

Another torrid battle is being waged behind Wilkins at right halfback where squadman Johnny Mercer of Bossier City and redshirt Danny Neumann of Tallulah are in contention.

Possibly the bittest scramble, however, is at fullback, where a different player appears each day on the White team. The competition is between Senior lettermen Earl Gros (Houma), junior lettermen Steve Ward (Baton Rouge) and Charles Cranford (Minden) and sophomore Buddy Hamic of Crowley. Although lacking the experience of the three lettermen, Hamic has shown tremendous potential this spring. The 6-2, 195-pounder does everything well.

If dame fortune continues to smile on the Tigers and injuries are kept at their current minimum, fans should see an interesting spring game May 6.

Twins Triumph Over Senators

ST. PAUL-MINNEAPOLIS (AP) —Rookie shortstop Zoilo Versalles punched a sacrifice fly to center field in the bottom of the 10th inning with the bases loaded for a 5-4 Minnesota Twins victory over the Washington Senators Saturday.

Versalles, who had gone 0-for-5 in the nip-and-tuck contest, blasted a line drive off relief pitcher Dave Sisler to dead center as catcher Earl Battey scored the winning run.

Battey had opened the Twins' half of the 10th with a single and went to second on a walk by righthander Rudy Hernandez, the second of three pitchers who followed starter Bennie Daniels. Third baseman Billy Gardner laid down a sacrifice bunt, which sent Battey to third and Reno Bertoia, who was purposely passed, to second.

Pinch hitter Dan Dobbek walked filling the bases, then Versalles delivered his game-winning sacrifice fly.

Rookie lefthander Bill Pleis, who relieved Twins starter Pedro Ramos in the ninth, was credited with the victory. Hernandez was the loser, having put Battey on first base. Then Dave Sisler, who succeeded Hernandez, gave up the game-winning sacrifice.

Willie Tasby, the Senators' center fielder, smacked a 420-foot home run in the second to tie it up.

Two of the Senators' three runs in the sixth came on Dale Long's home run, his second in two days. Don Mincher, who also hit one Friday for the Twins, hit a solo homer in the bottom of the sixth.

The Twins evened the series at 1-1 and moved into second place in the American League as 17,445 fans watched.

Triple-Main Event Slated At Roll-Arena

Tony Neopolitan takes his second shot at Victor, the 310-pound Canadian Black Bear Monday, as part of a triple main event show at Roll Arena.

Marco Polo, who downed Al Szasz in last week's action, meets Rod Rivera in another match and Ada Ash, the World's Strongest Lady faces well-known Margie Ramsey in an opener.

Last week Neopolitan managed to hold off the monster bear by rolling him outside the ring, but no such luck tomorrow. The ring will be completely wired around and the match will be a fight to the finish. Victor may have more of a chance to show that he is no dumb animal in tonight's match. The bear is said to have a good working knowledge of wrestling holds. Whether he knows more about the game than the remarkable Neopolitan remains to be seen.

Marco Polo may have surprised many fans with his victory over Al Szasz last week. Szasz wears the name "Mr. Wrestling," but Marco outwitted him last week. The Polo - Rivera bout is set for an hour time limit with two falls to win.

Ada Ash, wife of Mr. Wrestling, won a tough decision over China Mira last week and will be back to try to keep the string going over well known local girl Margie Ramsey.

Northeast Indians Win 23rd Northwestern Relays

NATCHITOCHES, La. (Special) — Northeast State's cinder team remained the brightest spot in a not too-glittering spring sports program, by winning the 23rd running of the Northwestern Relays here yesterday.

The Tribe, seemingly back on the right track after two mid-season losses to Louisiana Tech, snared 72½ points to beat the Bulldogs who had 56 1-5.

Lamar Tech was third with 51 ¾, followed by Southeastern 37, Northwestern 31½, Stephen F. Austin 20, Southwestern 17 1-5 and McNeese 13 3-5.

Four records fell and another was tied in the college division concluding the three-day affair.

Northeast won the unofficial team championship with 72¼ points. Louisiana Tech was runnerup with 56 1-5, followed by Lamar Tech 51¾, Southeastern Louisiana 37 1-5 and NSC 32½.

In the freshman division, the championship went to NSC, with 48½ points to SLC's 40. Amite High School won two special relay races in a special prep event.

Outstanding track performer was Northeast's Buddy Eiland who ran anchor on the winning sprint medley and distance medley.

The distance medley winning time of 10:06.6 broke the record of 10:16.3 set by Lamar Tech in 1959.

Pole vaulter John Pennell of Northeast received the outstanding field award. He vaulted 14 feet 7 to break his 1960 mark by 15 inches.

Other records which fell were in the shot put with USL's John Price tossing the ball 52 feet 8½ inches and Stephen F. Austin's James Nixon with a discus toss of 159 feet 8¼.

Summary:

100—1, Pat Garrett, Louisiana Tech, :9.5.

2-Mile run—1, Ian Stewart, Lamar Tech, 9:31.3.

High hurdles—1, Derrell Smith, Lamar Tech, :14.4.

High jump—1-2, Bob Jancik and Colin Ridgeway, both of Lamar Tech, 6 feet 5.

The Tribe took four first places in racking up its third meet win of the season.

In addition to the medley and pole vault marks, northeast snared the 220 low hurdles and sprint medley relay.

Randall Walker did the 200 low hurdles in 23.8 and the combine of Walker, Mouser, McDonald and Eiland sailed across for a sprint medley first in 3:29.

Athletics Dump Cleveland Tribe

By FRANK CRAWFORD

KANSAS CITY (AP) — Kansas City's Athletics won their first home game of the season Saturday defeating the Cleveland Indians 5-2 as lefty Bud Daley hurled his first victory of the year.

Rookie Ed Keegan gave Daley a perfect ninth inning relief assist after Bubba Phillips opened the frame with a single for the Indians' eighth hit.

Marv Throneberry, a first baseman who rode the bench much of last season, provided the winning run when he homered with Andy Carey on base in the second inning. Carey had just driven in the A's first run with a single that plated Bill Tuttle, on base via Phillips' throwing error.

The homer came off starter Johnny Antonelli, the volatile southpaw, who came to the Indians in a winter trade with the San Francisco Giants for Harvey Kuenn. The defeat left Johnny with one defeat against no victories in the young season.

The triumph for Daley was his first of the year, following a defeat at the hands of the Yankees earlier in New York.

The A's finished their scoring for the day in the sixth inning when Jerry Lumpe led off the sixth inning with a single. Hank Bauer sacrificed before Chuck Essegian lined a single to left and Tuttle then hit a ground ball so deep in the hole that shortstop Woody Held couldn't make a play. Lumpe scored and Essegian moved to second before Antonelli walked Carey to fill the bases. Throneberry then hit a topped roller down the first base line that went for a hit and scored Essegian.

Manager Jimmy Dykes decided Antonelli had enough and brought in Barry Latman who got out without further scoring and pitched hitless ball to the end.

But Daley—and Keegan—throttled the Indians the rest of the way.

A crowd of 9,560, compared with Friday's approximately 26,000, watched the game in perfect weather following overnight rains.

BIG RELAYS

Texas Teams Set Kansas Records

By SKIPPER PATRICK

LAWRENCE, Kan. (AP)—Blistering baton teams from Texas, topped by North Texas State's 9:49.3 in the university's distance medley, dominated the 36th running of the Kansas Relays Saturday.

Texas Southern of Houston set two of the four records in the college division, lowering the 440 relay to :41.0 and the 880 relay to 1:24.2 the foursome of Homer Jones, Barney Allen, Charles Frazier and Lester Milburn ran both events.

Howard Payne won its sixth consecutive 2-mile college relay in record time of 7:32, and Emporia, Kan. State set a new standard of 3:12.2 in the college mile relay.

John Kelly, former Stanford star, had a record 50 feet, 3 inches in the hop-step-jump.

Baylor won the university 440 relay in :40.8 and the 800 relay in 1:25.1. Bill Kemp, who won the 100-yard dash going into a stiff wind with a slow :10.1, anchored both relay teams.

Houston University won he 100-yard dash going into a stiff wind with a slow :10.1, anchored both relay teams.

Houston University won the university mile relay in 3:10, and East Texas State negotiated the college distance medley in 10:09.3.

John Cooper anchored North Texas home in the distance medley with a 4:07.1 mile. Richard Bothmer ran the 440-leg in :48.7, John Spencer the half mile in 1:53.6 and Richard Menchaca the three-quarters in 2:59.9.

Menchaca's fine three-quarter trick enabled North Texas to whip Missouri by 30 yards and break the relay's record of 9:50.8, set by Oklahoma in 1958.

Performances before 13,500 were enerally improved over Friday's show conducted on wet grounds in chilly weather. A bright sun, 70-degree temperature and gusty winds prevailed Saturday.

John Fry of Baylor became a double winner with a 57-3 shotput. He beat defending champion Mike Lindsay, Oklahoma, who had a put of 56-9¾. Both were far off their best form. Fry won the discus Friday at 170-7½.

Jim Grelle, former Oregon University athlete, representing the Emerald AC, Eugene, Ore., won the Glenn Cunningham mile in 4:07.4. Ernie Cunliffe, former Stanford star, ran 4:11 for second, Jim Depree, Southern Illinois, 4:13.6 for third and Joe Mullins, a Canadian who finished his eligibility at Nebraska, 4:18.7 for fourth.

J. D. Martin of Oklahoma and George Davies of Oklahoma State had to settle their pole vault feud with a 14-10 tie well off the meet record.

For the first time since World War II the host Kansas Jayhawks failed to win an event although one of its former greats, Cliff Cushman, captured the AAU 400 meter hurdles Friday.

Ralph Alspaugh of Texas, who ran third in the slow university-college 100, won the special 100 in :09.8. He beat second place Henry Wiebe, former Missouri runner, and Dave Styron of Southern Illinois. Charlie Tidwell, ex-Kansas athlete, was disqualified for false starts.

New Jersey Bowlers In Rugged Bid

DETROIT (AP)—New Jersey bowlers are making their first major bid for an American Bowling Congress doubles title since 1914 as Joe Macaluso and Eugene Hering of Irvington moved into the regular two-man division lead Saturday on a 1,342 total.

The last New Jersey pair to take the ABC doubles crown were John Negley and D. Van Ness of Newark at the 1914 meet held in Buffalo. They won with a 1,245.

Macaluso, 30 had a 660 series while Hering, 29 came through with 682 as the pair replaced the previous leaders, Luke Karan and Pat Stone of Detroit, who bowled 1,340 on April 7.

Macaluso, a draftsman, had a sharp line on the pins with games of 200-257-203 while Hering, an electrician, sparkled on games of 200-234-248.

Their team games were 400-491-451 and the 491 is the best two-man game in the regular division.

This was the second ABC in which the pair bowled together. Last year in Toledo, Ohio, they had a weak 1,008 as Macaluso had 507 and Hering 501.

Triple-Main Event Slated At Roll-Arena

Tony Neopolitan takes his second shot at Victor, the 310-pound Canadian Black Bear Monday, in part of a triple main event show at Roll - Arena.

Marco Polo, who downed Al Szasz in last week's action, meets Rod Rivera in another match and Ada Ash, the World's Strongest Lady faces well-known Margie Ramsey in an opener.

Last week Neopolitan managed to hold off the monster bear by rolling him outside the ring, but no such luck tomorrow. The ring will be completely wired around and the match will be a fight to the finish. Victor may have more of a chance to show that he is no dumb animal in tonight's match. The bear is said to have a good working knowledge of wrestling holds. Whether he knows more about the game than the remarkable Neopolitan remains to be seen.

Marco Polo may have surprised many fans with his victory over Al Szasz last week. Szasz wears the name "Mr. Wrestling," but Marco outwitted him last week. The Polo - Rivera bout is set for an hour time limit with two falls to win.

Ada Ash, wife of Mr. Wrestling, won a tough decision over China Mira last week and will be back to try to keep the string going over well known local girl Margie Ramsey.

LAND BOTH OUTSTANDING PERFORMERS

Northeast Indians Win 23rd Northwestern Relays

NATCHITOCHES, La. (Special)—Northeast State's cinder team remained the brightest spot in a not too-glittering spring sports program, by winning the 23rd running of the Northwestern Relays here yesterday.

The Tribe, seemingly back on the right track after two mid-season losses to Louisiana Tech, snared 72½ points to beat the Bulldogs who had 56 1-5.

Lamar Tech was third with 51¾, followed by Southeastern 37, Northwestern 31½, Stephen F. Austin 20, Southwestern 17 1-5 and McNeese 13 3-5.

The distance medley winning time of 10:06.6 broke the record of 10:16.3 set by Lamar Tech in 1959.

Pole vaulter John Pennell of Northeast received the outstanding field award. He vaulted 14 feet 7 to break his 1960 mark by 15 inches.

5-2 MARGIN

Athletics Dump Cleveland Tribe

By FRANK CRAWFORD

KANSAS CITY (AP) — Kansas City's Athletics won their first home game of the season Saturday defeating the Cleveland Indians 5-2 as lefty Bud Daley hurled his first victory of the year.

Rookie Ed Keegan gave Daley a perfect ninth inning relief assist after Bubba Phillips opened the frame with a single for the Indians' eighth hit.

Marv Throneberry, a first baseman who rode the bench much of last season, provided the winning run when he homered with Andy Carey on base in the second inning. Carey had just driven in the A's first run with a single that plated Bill Tuttle, on base via Phillips' throwing error.

The homer came off starter Johnny Antonelli, the volatile southpaw, who came to the Indians in a winter trade with the San Francisco Giants for Harvey Kuenn. The defeat left Johnny with one defeat against no victories in the young season.

The triumph for Daley was his first of the year, following a defeat at the hands of the Yankees earlier in New York.

The A's finished their scoring for the day in the sixth inning when Jerry Lumpe led off the sixth inning with a single. Hank Bauer sacrificed before Chuck Essegian lined a single to left and Tuttle then hit a ground ball so deep in the hole that shortstop Woody Held couldn't make a play. Lumpe scored and Essegian moved to second before Antonelli walked Carey to fill the bases. Throneberry then hit a topped roller down the first base line that went for a hit and scored Essegian.

Manager Jimmy Dykes decided Antonelli had enough and brought in Barry Latman who got out without further scoring and pitched hitless ball to the end.

But Daley—and Keegan—throttled the Indians the rest of the way.

A crowd of 9,560, compared with Friday's approximately 26,000, watched the game in perfect weather following overnight rains.

Doucet beat Jim Guthrie of New Orleans 2 and 1 while Hattier trimmed George Thomas of Lafayette 2 and 1 in the semifinals.

Hattier and Doucet will meet in the finals Sunday morning.

R. D. Bushnell of Alexandria and Leroy Ward of Baton Rouge reached the consolation finals with 2 and 1 victories over G. M. Hisgen of Metairie and J. E. Walters of Covington, respectively.

Dukes Ready

DETROIT (AP)—Walter Dukes, the Detroit Pistons' annual holdout problem, has signed his contract for the 1961-62 season.

The 7-foot center became the first veteran to sign. The Pistons are conferring this weekend with George Finley, a 7-foot 1-inch pivotman from Tennessee A&I. He was Detroit's third choice in the recent college draft and is in town to confer with owner Fred Zollner.

BIG RELAYS

Texas Teams Set Kansas Records

By SKIPPER PATRICK

LAWRENCE, Kan. (AP)—Blistering baton teams from Texas, topped by North Texas State's 9:49.3 in the university's distance medley, dominated the 36th running of the Kansas Relays Saturday.

Texas Southern of Houston set two of the four records in the college division, lowering the 440 relay to :41.0 and the 880 relay to 1:24.2 the foursome of Homer Jones, Barney Allen, Charles Frazier and Lester Milburn ran both events.

Howard Payne won its sixth consecutive 2-mile college relay in record time of 7:32, and Emporia, Kan. State set a new standard of 3:12.2 in the college mile relay.

John Kelly, former Stanford star, had a record 50 feet, 3 inches in the hop-step-jump.

Baylor won the university 440 relay in :40.8 and the 800 relay in 1:25.1. Bill Kemp, who won the 100-yard dash going into a stiff wind with a slow :10.1, anchored both relay teams.

Houston University won he 100-yard dash going into a stiff wind with a slow :10.1, anchored both relay teams.

Houston University won the university mile relay in 3:10, and East Texas State negotiated the college distance medley in 10:09.3.

John Cooper anchored North Texas home in the distance medley with a 4:07.1 mile. Richard Bothmer ran the 440-leg in :48.7, John Spencer the half mile in 1:53.6 and Richard Menchaca the three-quarters in 2:59.9.

Menchaca's fine three-quarter trick enabled North Texas to whip Missouri by 30 yards and break the relay's record of 9:50.8, set by Oklahoma in 1958.

Performances before 13,500 were enerally improved over Friday's show conducted on wet grounds in chilly weather. A bright sun, 70-degree temperature and gusty winds prevailed Saturday.

John Fry of Baylor became a double winner with a 57-3 shot-put. He beat defending champion Mike Lindsay, Oklahoma, who had a put of 56-9¾. Both were far off their best form. Fry won the discus Friday at 170-7½.

Jim Grelle, former Oregon University athlete, representing the Emerald AC, Eugene, Ore., won the Glenn Cunningham mile in 4:07.4. Ernie Cunliffe, former Stanford star, ran 4:11 for second, Jim Depree, Southern Illinois, 4:13.6 for third and Joe Mullins, a Canadian who finished his eligibility at Nebraska, 4:18.7 for fourth.

J. D. Martin of Oklahoma and George Davies of Oklahoma State had to settle their pole vault feud with a 14-10 tie well off the meet record.

For the first time since World War II the host Kansas Jayhawks failed to win an event although one of its former greats, Cliff Cushman, captured the AAU 400-meter hurdles Friday.

Ralph Alspaugh of Texas, who ran third in the slow university-college 100, won the special 100 in :09.8. He beat second place Henry Wiebe, former Missouri runner, and Dave Styron of Southern Illinois. Charlie Tidwell, ex-Kansas athlete, was disqualified for false starts.

New Jersey Bowlers In Rugged Bid

DETROIT (AP)—New Jersey bowlers are making their first major bid for an American Bowling Congress doubles title since 1914 as Joe Macaluso and Eugene Hering of Irvington moved into the regular two-man division lead Saturday on a 1,342 total.

The last New Jersey pair to take the ABC doubles crown were John Negley and D. Van Ness of Newark at the 1914 meet held in Buffalo. They won with a 1,245.

Macaluso, 30 had a 660 series while Hering, 29 came through with 682 as the pair replaced the previous leaders, Luke Karan and Pat Stone of Detroit, who bowled 1,340 on April 7.

Macaluso, a draftsman, had a sharp line on the pins with games of 200-257-203 while Hering, an electrician, sparkled on games of 200-234-248.

Their team games were 400-491-451 and the 491 is the best two-man game in the regular division.

This was the second ABC in which the pair bowled together. Last year in Toledo, Ohio, they had a weak 1,008 as Macaluso had 507 and Hering 501.

CARRY BACK UPSET

Globemaster In Aqueduct Wood Memorial Victory

By JOHN CHANDLER

NEW YORK (AP) — Leonard P. Sasso's Globemaster, an $80,000 yearling bargain, led all the way Saturday and upset the favored Carry Back by 3¼ lengths in the $86,250 Wood Memorial at Aqueduct.

The victory established Globemaster as a colt to be reckoned with in the Kentucky Derby May 6 in Lousville.

Carry Back, owned by Mrs. Katherine Price and co-favored for the $125,000 added Derby along with the West Coast's Four-and-Twenty, had won the $129,800 Flamingo and the $115,100 Florida Derby during the winter. So the crowd of 57,109, largest of the New York season, sent Carry Back off as the 19-20 favorite on this warm but cloudy afternoon.

As customary, Carry Back trailed in the early going, running sixth in the field of seven 3-year-olds. All are eligible for the Derby and the $150,000 Preakness May 20 and the $125,000 Belmont June 3. But Carry Back, who came from behind in the Flamingo and the Florida Derby, couldn't make it this time although he did beat Robert Lehman's Ambiopoise by six lengths for second place.

Ambiopoise took third by a head over Mrs. Ethel D. Jacobs' Dr. Miller.

Globemaster, who had been beaten six lengths by Ambiopoise in the $50,000 Gotham Stakes at Aqueduct April 8, was ridden by John L. Rotz and was the second longest price on the board. He paid $30.40, $7.60 and $3.40. Carry Back, with John Sellers up, paid $3.00 and $2.40. Ambiopoise, the second choice and ridden by Bobby Ussery, paid $2.80 to show.

The winner, a bay son of Heliopolis-No Strings by Occupation, was timed in 1:50 1-5 for the 1⅛ miles, the identical clocking recorded by last year's winner Francis S.

Rotz took Globemaster to the front on the first turn and quickly opened up a two-length margin over William MacDonald Jr.'s Covered Bridge. Ogden Phipps' Hitting Away was third at this point with Harbor View Farm's Garwol fourth.

Globemaster opened up four lengths on Covered Bridge as they started down the back stretch followed by Hitting Away and Grawol. At that point Carry Back was still in sixth place, about 10 lengths behind the leader.

Going to the far turn with a half mile remaining, the crowd roared as Ambiopoise moved up from fifth to make his challenge and Carry Back ranged around on the outside into third position.

At the top of the stretch, one-quarter mile from the finish, Globemaster was still out there winging by four lengths, while Carry Back was overhauling Ambiopoise. But Carry Back was unable to make much of a dent in Globemaster's lead.

Garwol finished fifth. Hitting Away and Covered Bridge, both eased up, finishing sixth and seventh, respectively.

This was the first stakes victory for Globemaster who was bred by the Shawnee Farm and sold to Sasso, a Pittsburgh coal mine owner, at the 1959 Saratoga yearling sales. Last fall in the Garden State Stakes, the world's richest race won by Carry Back, Globemaster finished 13th.

Globemaster earned a purse of $56,062.50, boosting his 1961 earnings to $74,472.50 and his all time total to $150,744.50.

"I didn't mean to open up so far," said Rotz. "But he was a running horse . . . I think the way he ran today he could have taken the extra furlong of the Derby."

Globemaster's trainer, Tom J. Kelly, said, "The Derby? Well, I don't know but I'd say there is a good chance we'll try it . . . if he comes out of it okay, we'll most likely take a shot at Kentucky. The way he ran today I feel he has earned it."

Sellers said that Carry Back "ran his race but we had to catch a front runner with a long lead. He was running mighty strong at the finish."

Jack Price, trainer and husband of Carry Back's owner, said the colt would join the rest of his stable at Garden State Park Sunday and added:

"From there we'll probably go to Kentucky on Thursday or Friday. In all probability, he will not

AGAINST VON CLAY

Johnson To Risk Light Heavy Title

By RALPH BERNSTEIN

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — Harold Johnson defends his National Boxing Association light heavyweight championship Monday night against Von Clay in a battle of counterpuncher vs. puncher.

The 32-year-old Johnson, renowned for his ability to lay back and pick apart an attacker, is a heavy favorite to whip the fourth-ranked challenger in this scheduled 15-rounder between native Philadelphians.

Promoter Al Lewis, in his first title fight venture, predicts a crowd of 4,500 and a gate of $30,000 with Johnson earning the champion's 40 per cent and Clay the challenger's usual 20 per cent. There will be no television with a possibility of a limited radio broadcast.

Johnson, a veteran of 14 - years as a pro, won the NBA title last Feb. 7, with a knockout over Jesse Bowdry at Miami Beach. He is recognized as the light heavy king everywhere but in New York and Massachusetts where Archie Moore holds the mantle.

Moore, incidentally, is slated for a title fight June 10 against Giulio Rinaldi in New York, but there is some doubt that Ancient Archie can get down to 175 pounds. Both Johnson and Clay have been asked to stand-by in case Moore doesn't make weight, which leaves the definite possibility a clear cut light heavy champ may soon be determined.

Johnson, who has won 64 and lost 8 in a career beclouded by injuries and scrapes with the State Athletic Commission describes himself as a "hungry" fighter, anxious for some big pay days. He views the 21-year-old Clay as just the first of a number of title defenses he hopes to make.

Johnson, who trained for the fight in a local gym, says he's ready for 15 rounds, but doesn't expect it to go the limit. His manager, Pat Oliveri, predicts the champion will kayo Clay the first time the challenger makes a mistake. "One mistake and he's (Clay's) out," says Oliveri.

Clay earned his chance at the title with two impressive victories, a kayo of Dudolpho Diaz, the Argentine champ, and a decision over Chic Calderwood in London. Diaz had won 20 straight fights, and the unbeaten Calderwood had a string of 30 before they met the stiff punching Philadelphian.

Clay's trainer, Johnny Hatchinson, says the youngster is a different fighter than the one who last year was made to look ridiculous in losing to Tiger Floyd, and in a draw with Sixto Rodriguez. "He's smarter, has a more varied attack and throws faster and shorter punches," Hutchinson says.

The challenger brings a 13-3-2 record into the fight — he also lost twice to Doug Jones — and on the basis of his comparative inexperience probably will be a 3-1 underdog. Despite the odds, Clay oozes a quiet confidence.

"I know all about what a great boxer and counterfighter Johnson is," says the challenger. "I'm not worried that he'll outbox me and outfox me. Somewhere along the way I'll get to him, and then all his ability won't mean a thing. I can take his best, but I don't think he can take my shots that good."

Disaster Plan, Hall Of Fame On NFL Table

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Discussion of a "disaster plan" and the site of a proposed hall of fame are on the agenda for the annual spring meeting of the National Football League starting here next Wednesday.

On Monday and Tuesday, club owners, general managers and business managers will meet to discuss costs and other administrative problems of the 14 league members.

In reference to the disaster plan, Commissioner Pete Rozelle said Saturday the NFL operation is a multi-million dollar enterprise and that measures must be taken to protect it in the face of possible disaster.

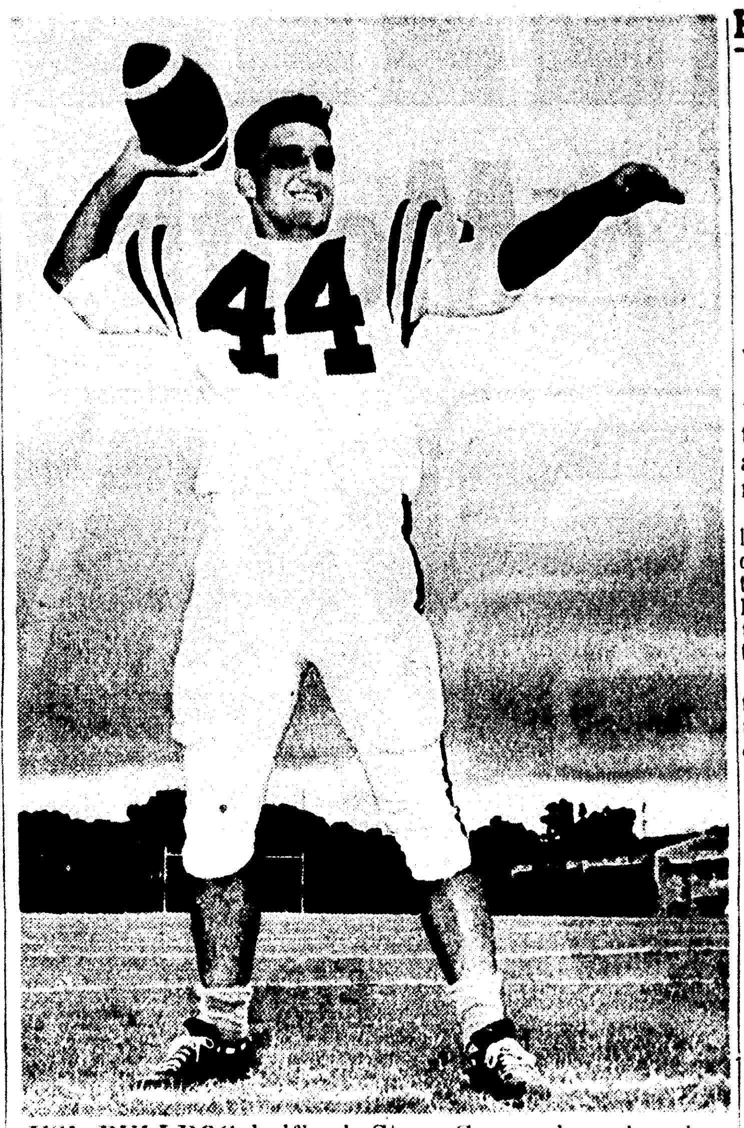
The league and member clubs already are insured financially in the event a disaster strikes a team, but there are no definite provisions for re-stocking a club with players or coaches so the league schedule could be carried on without interruption.

Rozelle said he envisions a plan similar to that by which each member club would re - stock a disaster-stricken club in the same manner that Dallas and Minnesota were stocked with players from other clubs when they joined the league last year.

Canton, Ohio; Latrobe, Pa., and Detroit have formally expressed interest in becoming the site of a permanent NFL hall of fame.

"The NFL opens its 42nd season Sept. 17," Rozelle said, "and with each added year the number of people interested in the league's history grows tremendously. Their interest points up the ready acceptance a NFL hall of fame would receive."

Other items on the agenda include proposed amendments to the league's constitution and by-law, discussion of the Bert Bell player benefit plan, and television arrangements.



USL BULLDOG halfback Steve Gossen has signed a contract to play for the Minnesota Vikings of the NFL. Gossen, who was named team captain at Southwestern in 1960, is considered a strong candidate for punting chores in the pro league.

STEVE GOSSEN

Bulldog Gridder Signs With Viks

LAFAYETTE, La. (Special) — Halfback Steve Gossen, one of the most talented gridders to ever play for the University of Southwestern Louisiana, has signed a professional contract with the Minnesota Vikings of the National Football League.

Considered a strong prospect because of his great punting ability, Gossen was inked here recently by Buddy Leake, who scouts for the newest NFL entry. The Minnesota eleven will be making its debut next fall in the 14-team league.

The two-time All-Gulf States Conference left half saw only limited action in four games last fall, suffering a severe knee injury during pre-season training. He was named team captain for the 1960 season by his teammates.

Since joining the Southwestern athletic camp, the Lafayette standout has won four football letters, three in baseball and one in track. He decided to pass up his final diamond campaign in favor of the Vikings' offer to turn pro.

His finest grid effort came in '59 when he led the Bulldog eleven in total offense (455 yards in nine games), rushing yardage (442 for 5.7 average), scoring (26 points), rush attempts (77), punting (41.5 avg. for 41 punts), punt returns (six for 93 yards), and kickoff returns (seven for 234 yards).

A former All-State star for Lafayette's Cathedral High School, Gossen set a new Gulf States Conference punting record in that superb 1959 performance. His 41.5 average also ranked eighth among the nation's small-college leaders.

Majoring in architecture at USL, the 5-11, 185-pounder is the only athlete in Cathedral's history to letter in five varsity sports. He earned awards in football, 3; baseball, 3; track, 2; basketball, 2; and boxing, 1. This gives him a combined total of 19 high school and college letters.

Married to the former Judith Martin, he is the father of a son, Gregory Martin. Steve's parents are Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Gossen, Jr., of Lafayette.

He is scheduled to report to Minnesota's football camp in early July.

Pollution Is Topic At Local Wildlife Meet

Water pollution and public recreation facilities will be aired at the monthly meeting of the Ouachita Wildlife Unit here Tuesday night.

A report on a pollution committee meeting conducted here Friday will be made, in addition to discussions concerning the FAIR program and recreation facilities.

Club President Lloyd Voorhees emphasized that a general discussion would be called for from the floor on the annual fish fry and fishing contest.

An outdoor film also will be shown—a film obtained Friday from the Louisiana Wild Life & Fisheries Commission on the Louisiana marshes.

Voorhees pointed out that the meeting is open to the public, that all interested persons are urged to attend, especially women and children.

At the same time, he emphasized that the club currently has a membership drive underway. Membership fees are $2 for adults, $1 for persons 16 and under.

HAVE STANDOUT EARL YOUNG

Abeline Christian Heads List For Penn Relay Meet

By RALPH BERNSTEIN

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — The eyes of track fans will be on "Texas" at next weekend's Penn Relays.

A talent-laden group of runners from Abiline Christian of Texas is eaded East with designs on four relay titles. The opinion hereabouts is that they just might turn the trick.

All told, more than 4,500 athletes from 103 colleges, 527 secondary schools, 15 AAU clubs and the armed forces are expected for Friday and Saturday's competition. Six individuals and three teams will defend titles.

In addition to Abilene Christian, teams expected to feature this 67th annual track and field extravaganza include Yale, Villanova, Fordham, Manhattan, Morgan State, Maryland and Michigan.

Abilene Christian, with Olympic star Earl Young as anchor man, will seek the 440, 880 and 1-mile relay titles. John Lawler, a 4:09.9 miler is slated to run the final leg on the Texans' distance medly relay quartet.

Coach Oliver Jackson's 12 athletes will be attempting to equal the carnival record of four championships in a single year. Pitt did it in 1939, and Michigan equaled the effort four years later.

Holders of the world record, 1:22.6, Abilene competition in the 880 is expected from Villanova, Manhattan, North Carolina College, Morgan State, St. John's and Michigan. The same field figures to compete in the 440.

In the mile, Abilene, which earlier this month set a national collegiate record of 3:07.9 faces a stiff challenge from defending champion Villanova, New York University, Morgan State, Manhattan and St. John's.

Villanova has the ame four men who won the mile last year, an unprecedented sixth straight triumph in the event. Morgan State, on the wings of a recent victory over Villanova, must be considered a strong challenger.

Yale has an important decision to make. Defending champion in both the 2-mile and sprint medley relays, a time schedule factor makes it virtually for the Ivy Leaguers to make a strong effort in both events. The races are only half an hour apart on Saturday.

It appears likely that Coach Bob Giegengack will pass up the 2-mile for the sprint in which his team figures to be best. With Tommy Carroll running the half and Jim Stack the quarter, Yale looks the cream of a field which should include Morgan State, Fordham, NYU, Maryland and Manhattan.

Manhattan, with Yale probably out of it, looks best in the 2-mile. Michigan returns to defend its 4-mile and distance medley crowns.

Bayou DeSiard First Round Winners Listed

First round play in the Bayou DeSiard Cramer Haas Memorial handicap golf tournament started Saturday. Curtis Nichols is defending champ in the meet, the first round of which must be completed by Saturday, April 29.

Saturday's results:

Joe Goyne, Jr., defeated Branton Kellogg, one up.

Bob Carson bumped C. C. Boardman, two up.

W. C. Crowell got past R. W. Skillman, two and one.

W. O. Smith won over Dr. Nat Spencer, four-three.

Dr. Frank Rizzo upended C. B. McMahan, four-two.

John Eby beat Russell Cummings by default.

Clyde Nash took C. C. Minard, two up.

John Godfrey edged W. L. Dean three-two.

H. C. Menuet slipped by Ed Shaver, two-one.

George Miller got Amos Smelser, one up.

Tom Hyland dumped Stan Bagwell, one up.

H. L. Woods, Jr., downed Frank Davis, two-one.

Sam Rubin was winner over R. C. White by default.

Dr. J. P. Jackson knifed Dr. A. Altenberg, one up.

NOT INTERESTED IN RECORDS

Fastest Swimmer Out For Victory

By LEONARD MILLIMAN

LOS ALTOS, Calif (AP) — The world's fastest swimmer isn't interested in setting records. He just wants to win.

He is Steve Clark, 17-year-old Los Altos High School honor student, who takes off like an uncoiling spring and hits the water in perfect swimming position.

He's not impressed with his phenomenal :46.8 American record for the 100-yard freestyle, 1.4 seconds better than the old mark. Clark set it three weeks ago in the 25-yard Yale pool in the National AAU indoor swim championships.

"It'll be 44-plus, eventually," he says. "If I don't do it, somebody else will. These indoor meets don't really mean that much. It's what you can do outdoors that counts."

As far as the slender 6-footer is concerned, records are things that you are pushed into, or a coach may ask for.

"A record is not the important thing," Clark says. "The main thing is winning.

"The competition may be so strong that you may be pushed into a record if the conditions are right."

Other swimmers have been pushing Clark since he was 9. That was when he joined the Santa Clara Swim Club, where you have to be fast just to keep up with the girls. They're girls such as world record-holders and Olympic gold medal winners Chris Von Saltza and Lynne Burke.

Steve kept ahead of the girls and jumped into the rough senior competition at the age of 14, and on to a high school team that has won its last 82 straight dual meets and holds 13 of 27 recognized national high school records. Clark figures in all of them.

He is as remarkable out of the pool as he is in it.

Steve gets almost straight A's in school, coaches a fifth grade class in Sunday school, was unopposed for president of the Los Altos High School student body last semester because nobody would run against him, and is a life member and former president of his school's chapter of the California Scholarship Federation.

"I'd like to have a school full of him," says Principal John Wilkins.

"Steve is an outstanding boy in most ways that you can think of. He has the ability to get along with people, perform in the school room, lead others and his athletic ability, of course, has been demonstrated."

"He could have been a tremendous basketball player," adds Dushan Angus, director of student activities, who coached Steve as a freshman on Los Altos high's championship Class D cage team.

"He is strongly competitive." Haines, who has been coaching Steve for eight years, says, "he has a lot of natural athletic ability and a tremendous desire to win. Yet he is a very humble type of kid."

He is. But sometimes his words don't sound that way.

"I know I can win," Steve says. "Now I've just got to prove it. If you aren't mentally prepared before you hit the water, there's no need going in."

"If he were 165-170 he would have the strength to go much faster," Haines says. "He always led the first 25 yards. Now he has the strength to win. He looked so easy doing 46.8."

Neither the 100 yards nor a 25-yard poll are recognized in world records. Haines translates Steve's 46.8 to 53.8 for 100 meters in a 50-meter poll, compared with the world record of 54.6 set by John Devitt of Australia in Brisbane, Australia, Jan. 28, 1957. He looks to Steve to break it this summer.

Having two coaches hasn't bothered Steve. Both Norton Thornton of Los Altos High and Haines follow the same system. All they have to do with Clark, they agree, "is show him the way to the pool."

"This hasn't been easy for him —he's given up so much," says his father, Lyman Clark. "This he has done for himself, with the help of his coaches."

Steve's comment: "My parents have put up with a lot."

CARRY BACK UPSET

Globemaster In Aqueduct Wood Memorial Victory

By JOHN CHANDLER

NEW YORK (AP) — Leonard P. Sasso's Globemaster, an $80,000 yearling bargain, led all the way Saturday and upset the favored Carry Back by 3¼ lengths in the $86,250 Wood Memorial at Aqueduct.

The victory established Globemaster as a colt to be reckoned with in the Kentucky Derby May 6 in Lousville.

Carry Back, owned by Mrs. Katherine Price and co-favored for the $125,000 added Derby along with the West Coast's Four-and-Twenty, had won the $129,800 Flamingo and the $115,100 Florida Derby during the winter. So the crowd of 57,109, largest of the New York season, sent Carry Back off as the 19-20 favorite on this warm but cloudy afternoon.

As customary, Carry Back trailed in the early going, running sixth in the field of seven 3-year-olds. All are eligible for the Derby and the $150,000 Preakness May 20 and the $125,000 Belmont June 3. But Carry Back, who came from behind in the Flamingo and the Florida Derby, couldn't make it this time although he did beat Robert Lehman's Ambiopoise by six lengths for second place.

Ambiopoise took third by a head over Mrs. Ethel D. Jacobs' Dr. Miller.

Globemaster, who had been beaten six lengths by Ambiopoise in the $50,000 Gotham Stakes at Aqueduct April 8, was ridden by John L. Rotz and was the second longest price on the board. He paid $30.40, $7.60 and $3.40. Carry Back, with John Sellers up, paid $3.00 and $2.40. Ambiopoise, the second choice and ridden by Bobby Ussery, paid $2.80 to show.

The winner, a bay son of Heliopolis-No Strings by Occupation, was timed in 1:50 1-5 for the 1⅛ miles, the identical clocking recorded by last year's winner Francis S.

Rotz took Globemaster to the front on the first turn and quickly opened up a two-length margin over William MacDonald Jr.'s Covered Bridge. Ogden Phipps' Hitting Away was third at this point with Harbor View Farm's Garwol fourth.

Globemaster opened up four lengths on Covered Bridge as they started down the back stretch followed by Hitting Away and Grawol. At that point Carry Back was still in sixth place, about 10 lengths behind the leader.

Going to the far turn with a half mile remaining, the crowd roared as Ambiopoise moved up from fifth to make his challenge and Carry Back ranged around on the outside into third position.

At the top of the stretch, one-quarter mile from the finish, Globemaster was still out there winging by four lengths, while Carry Back was overhauling Ambiopoise. But Carry Back was unable to make much of a dent in Globemaster's lead.

Garwol finished fifth. Hitting Away and Covered Bridge, both eased up, finishing sixth and seventh, respectively.

This was the first stakes victory for Globemaster who was bred by the Shawnee Farm and sold to Sasso, a Pittsburgh coal mine owner, at the 1959 Saratoga yearling sales. Last fall in the Garden State Stakes, the world's richest race won by Carry Back, Globemaster finished 13th.

Globemaster earned a purse of $56,062.50, boosting his 1961 earnings to $74,472.50 and his all time total to $150,744.50.

"I didn't mean to open up so far," said Rotz. "But he was a running horse . . . I think the way he ran today he could have taken the extra furlong of the Derby."

Globemaster's trainer, Tom J. Kelly, said, "The Derby? Well, I don't know but I'd say there is a good chance we'll try it . . . if he comes out of it okay, we'll most likely take a shot at Kentucky. The way he ran today I feel he has earned it."

Sellers said that Carry Back "ran his race but we had to catch a front runner with a long lead. He was running mighty strong at the finish."

Jack Price, trainer and husband of Carry Back's owner, said the colt would join the rest of his stable at Garden State Park Sunday and added:

"From there we'll probably go to Kentucky on Thursday or Friday. In all probability, he will not

AGAINST VON CLAY

Johnson To Risk Light Heavy Title

By RALPH BERNSTEIN

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — Harold Johnson defends his National Boxing Association light heavyweight championship Monday night against Von Clay in a battle of counterpuncher vs. puncher.

The 32-year-old Johnson, renowned for his ability to lay back and pick apart an attacker, is a heavy favorite to whip the fourth-ranked challenger in this scheduled 15-rounder between native Philadelphians.

Promoter Al Lewis, in his first title fight venture, predicts a crowd of 4,500 and a gate of $30,000 with Johnson earning the champion's 40 per cent and Clay the challenger's usual 20 per cent. There will be no television with a possibility of a limited radio broadcast.

Johnson, a veteran of 14 - years as a pro, won the NBA title last Feb. 7, with a knockout over Jesse Bowdry at Miami Beach. He is recognized as the light heavy king everywhere but in New York and Massachusetts where Archie Moore holds the mantle.

Moore, incidentally, is slated for a title fight June 10 against Giulio Rinaldi in New York, but there is some doubt that Ancient Archie can get down to 175 pounds. Both Johnson and Clay have been asked to stand-by in case Moore doesn't make weight, which leaves the definite possibility a clear cut light heavy champ may soon be determined.

Johnson, who has won 64 and lost 8 in a career beclouded by injuries and scrapes with the State Athletic Commission describes himself as a "hungry" fighter, anxious for some big pay days. He views the 21-year-old Clay as just the first of a number of title defenses he hopes to make.

Johnson, who trained for the fight in a local gym, says he's ready for 15 rounds, but doesn't expect it to go the limit. His manager, Pat Oliveri, predicts the champion will kayo Clay the first time the challenger makes a mistake. "One mistake and he's (Clay's) out," says Oliveri.

Clay earned his chance at the title with two impressive victories, a kayo of Dudolpho Diaz, the Argentine champ, and a decision over Chic Calderwood in London. Diaz had won 20 straight fights, and the unbeaten Calderwood had a string of 30 before they met the stiff punching Philadelphian.

Clay's trainer, Johnny Hutchinson, says the youngster is a different fighter than the one who last year was made to look ridiculous in losing to Tiger Floyd, and in a draw with Sixto Rodriguez. "He's smarter, has a more varied attack and throws faster and shorter punches," Hutchinson says.

The challenger brings a 13-3-2 record into the fight — he also lost twice to Doug Jones — and on the basis of his comparative inexperience probably will be a 3-1 underdog. Despite the odds, Clay oozes a quiet confidence.

"I know all about what a great boxer and counterfighter Johnson is," says the challenger. "I'm not worried that he'll outbox me and outfox me. Somewhere along the way I'll get to him, and then all his ability won't mean a thing. I can take his best, but I don't think he can take my shots that good."

Disaster Plan, Hall Of Fame On NFL Table

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Discussion of a "disaster plan" and the site of a proposed hall of fame are on the agenda for the annual spring meeting of the National Football League starting here next Wednesday.

On Monday and Tuesday, club owners, general managers and businees managers will meet to discuss costs and other administrative problems of the 14 league members.

In reference to the disaster plan, Commissioner Pete Rozelle said Saturday the NFL operation is a multi-million dollar enterprise and that measures must be taken to protect it in the face of possible disaster.

The league and member clubs already are insured financially in the event a disaster strikes a team, but there are no definite provisions for re-stocking a club with players or coaches so the league schedule could be carried on without interruption.

Rozelle said he envisions a plan similar to that by which each member club would re - stock a disaster-stricken club in the same manner that Dallas and Minnesota were stocked with players from other clubs when they joined the league last year.

Canton, Ohio; Latrobe, Pa., and Detroit have formally expressed interest in becoming the site of a permanent NFL hall of fame.

"The NFL opens its 42nd season Sept. 17," Rozelle said, "and with each added year the number of people interested in the league's history grows tremendously. Their interest points up the ready acceptance a NFL hall of fame would receive."

Other items on the agenda include proposed amendments to the league's constitution and bylaw, discussion of the Bert Bell player benefit plan, and television arrangements.

USL BULLDOG halfback Steve Gossen has signed a contract to play for the Minnesota Vikings of the NFL. Gossen, who was named team captain at Southwestern in 1960, is considered a strong candidate for punting chores in the pro league.

STEVE GOSSEN

Bulldog Gridder Signs With Viks

LAFAYETTE, La. (Special) — Halfback Steve Gossen, one of the most talented gridders to ever play for the University of Southwestern Louisiana, has signed a professional contract with the Minnesota Vikings of the National Football League.

Considered a strong prospect because of his great punting ability, Gossen was inked here recently by Buddy Leake, who scouts for the newest NFL entry. The Minnesota eleven will be making its debut next fall in the 14-team league.

The two-time All-Gulf States Conference left half saw only limited action in four games last fall, suffering a severe knee injury during pre-season training. He was named team captain for the 1960 season by his teammates.

Since joining the Southwestern athletic camp, the Lafayette standout has won four football letters, three in baseball and one in track. He decided to pass up his final diamond campaign in favor of the Vikings' offer to turn pro.

His finest grid effort came in '59 when he led the Bulldog eleven in total offense (455 yards in nine games), rushing yardage (442 for 5.7 average), scoring (26 points), rush attempts (77), punting (41.5 avg. for 41 punts), punt returns (six for 93 yards), and kickoff returns (seven for 234 yards).

A former All-State star for Lafayette's Cathedral High School, Gossen set a new Gulf States Conference punting record in that superb 1959 performance. His 41.5 average also ranked eighth among the nation's small-college leaders.

Majoring in architecture at USL, the 5-11, 185-pounder is the only athlete in Cathedral's history to letter in five varsity sports. He earned awards in football, 3; baseball, 3; track, 2; basketball, 2; and boxing, 1. This gives him a combined total of 19 high school and college letters.

Married to the former Judith Martin, he is the father of a son, Gregory Martin. Steve's parents are Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Gossen, Jr., of Lafayette.

He is scheduled to report to Minnesota's football camp in early July.

Pollution Is Topic At Local Wildlife Meet

Water pollution and public recreation facilities will be aired at the monthly meeting of the Ouachita Wildlife Unit here Tuesday night.

A report on a pollution committee meeting conducted here Friday will be made, in addition to discussions concerning the FAIR program and recreation facilities.

Club President Lloyd Voorhees emphasized that a general discussion would be called for from the floor on the annual fish fry and fishing contest.

An outdoor film also will be shown—a film obtained Friday from the Louisiana Wild Life & Fisheries Commission on the Louisiana marshes.

Voorhees pointed out that the meeting is open to the public, that all interested persons are urged to attend, especially women and children.

At the same time, he emphasized that the club currently has a membership drive underway. Membership fees are $2 for adults, $1 for persons 16 and under.

HAVE STANDOUT EARL YOUNG

Abeline Christian Heads List For Penn Relay Meet

By RALPH BERNSTEIN

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — The eyes of track fans will be on "Texas" at next weekend's Penn Relays.

A talent-laden group of runners from Abiline Christian of Texas is eaded East with designs on four relay titles. The opinion hereabouts is that they just might turn the trick.

All told, more than 4,500 athletes from 103 colleges, 527 secondary schools, 15 AAU clubs and the armed forces are expected for Friday and Saturday's competition. Six individuals and three teams will defend titles.

In addition to Abilene Christian, teams expected to feature this 67th annual track and field extravaganza include Yale, Villanova, Fordham, Manhattan, Morgan State, Maryland and Michigan.

Abilene Christian, with Olympic star Earl Young as anchor man, will seek the 440, 880 and 1-mile relay titles. John Lawler, a 4:09.9 miler is slated to run the final leg on the Texans' distance medly relay quartet.

Coach Oliver Jackson's 12 athletes will be attempting to equal the carnival record of four championships in a single year. Pitt did it in 1939, and Michigan equaled the effort four years later.

Holders of the world record, 1:22.6, Abilene competition in the 880 is expected from Villanova, Manhattan, North Carolina College, Morgan State, St. John's and Michigan. The same field figures to compete in the 440.

In the mile, Abilene, which earlier this month set a national collegiate record of 3:07.9 faces a stiff challenge from defending champion Villanova, New York University, Morgan State, Manhattan and St. John's.

Villanova has the ame four men who won the mile last year, an unprecedented sixth straight triumph in the event. Morgan State, on the wings of a recent victory over Villanova, must be considered a strong challenger.

Yale has an important decision to make. Defending champion in both the 2-mile and sprint medley relays, a time schedule factor makes it virtually for the Ivy Leaguers to make a strong effort in both events. The races are only half an hour apart on Saturday.

It appears likely that Coach Bob Giegengack will pass up the 2-mile for the sprint in which his team figures to be best. With Tommy Carroll running the half and Jim Stack the quarter, Yale looks the cream of a field which should include Morgan State, Fordham, NYU, Maryland and Manhattan.

Manhattan, with Yale probably out of it, looks best in the 2-mile Michigan returns to defend its 4-mile and distance medley crowns.

Bayou DeSiard First Round Winners Listed

First round play in the Bayou DeSiard Cramer Haas Memorial handicap golf tournament started Saturday. Curtis Nichols is defending champ in the meet, the first round of which must be completed by Saturday, April 29.

Saturday's results:

Joe Goyne, Jr., defeated Branton Kellogg, one up.

Bob Carson bumped C. C. Boardman, two up.

W. C. Crowell got past R. W. Skillman, two and one.

W. O. Smith won over Dr. Nat Spencer, four-three.

Dr. Frank Rizzo upended C. B. McMahan, four-two.

John Eby beat Russell Cummings by default.

Clyde Nash took C. C. Minard, two up.

John Godfrey edged W. L. Dean three-two.

H. C. Menuet slipped by Ed Shaver, two-one.

George Miller got Amos Smelser, one up.

Tom Hyland dumped Stan Bagwell, one up.

H. L. Woods, Jr., downed Frank Davis, two-one.

Sam Rubin was winner over R. C. White by default.

Dr. J. P. Jackson knifed Dr. A. Altenberg, one up.

Fastest Swimmer Out For Victory

By LEONARD MILLIMAN

LOS ALTOS, Calif. (AP) — The world's fastest swimmer isn't interested in setting records. He just wants to win.

He is Steve Clark, 17-year-old Los Altos High School honor student, who takes off like an uncoiling spring and hits the water in perfect swimming position.

He's not impressed with his phenomenal :46.8 American record for the 100-yard freestyle, 1.4 seconds better than the old mark. Clark set it three weeks ago in the 25-yard Yale pool in the National AAU indoor swim championships.

"It'll be 44-plus, eventually," he says. "If I don't do it, somebody else will. These indoor meets don't really mean that much. It's what you can do outdoors that counts."

As far as the slender 6-footer is concerned, records are things that you are pushed into, or a coach may ask for.

"A record is not the important thing," Clark says. "The main thing is winning.

"The competition may be so strong that you may be pushed into a record if the conditions are right."

Other swimmers have been pushing Clark since he was 9. That was when he joined the Santa Clara Swim Club, where you have to be fast just to keep up with the girls. They're girls such as world record-holders and Olympic gold medal winners Chris Von Saltza and Lynne Burke.

Steve kept ahead of the girls and jumped into the rough senior competition at the age of 14, and on to a high school team that has won its last 82 straight dual meets and holds 13 of 27 recognized national high school records. Clark figures in all of them.

He is as remarkable out of the pool as he is in it.

Steve gets almost straight A's in school, teaches a fifth grade class in Sunday school, was unopposed for president of the Los Altos High School student body last semester because nobody would run against him, and is a life member and former president of his school's chapter of the california Scholarship Federation.

"I'd like to have a school full of him," says Principal John Wilkins.

"Steve is an outstanding boy in most ways that you can think of. He has the ability to get along with people, perform in the school room, lead others and his athletic ability, of course, has been demonstrated."

"He could have been a tremendous basketball player," adds Dushan Angus, director of student activities, who coached Steve as a freshman on Los Altos high's championship Class D cage team.

"He is strongly competitive."

Haines, who has been coaching Steve for eight years, says, "he has a lot of natural athletic ability and a tremendous desire to win. Yet he is a very humble type of kid."

He is. But sometimes his words don't sound that way.

"I know I can win," Steve says.

"Now I've just got to prove it. If you aren't mentally prepared before you hit the water, there's no need going in."

"If he were 165-170 he would have the strength to go much faster," Haines says. "He always led the first 25 yards. Now he has the strength to win. He looked so easy doing 46.8."

Neither the 100 yards nor a 25-yard poll are recognized in world records. Haines translates Steve's 46.8 to 53.8 for 100 meters in a 50-meter poll, compared with the world record of 54.6 set by John Devitt of Australia in Brisbane, Australia, Jan. 28, 1957. He looks to Steve to break it this summer.

Having two coaches hasn't bothered Steve. Both Norton Thornton of Los Altos High and Haines follow the same system. All they have to do with Clark, they agree, "is show him the way to the pool."

"This hasn't been easy for him —he's given up so much," says his father, Lyman Clark. "This he has done for himself, with the help of his coaches."

Steve's comment: "My parents have put up with a lot."

Fish Fry Held For Ruthers In Vidalia

VIDALIA, La. (Special) — A fish fry was held here Friday night for the players and parents of the Vidalia Babe Ruth League.

The fish fry, which was well attended, was held at the Vidalia Community Recreation center near the Vidalia High School. L. L. Harrison, league president served as master of ceremonies and the fathers of the players assisted in preparing the food.

President Harrison is urging all players who are eligible to play in the league this coming season to register immediately. He said there are a few openings remaining, but these are being filled rapidly.

April is gayest of months. Browning said "Oh, to be in England, now that April's there!" In Monroe, too, we have a special reason for treasuring Spring weather: 'tis a delight after dreary winter, and a respite before heated summer.

Activities for all ages are picking up tempo, approaching the end of school, summer vacations, June bridal festivities, and events which will be crowding the calendar before we know it.

Cleverest place cards of the week were seen at the luncheon given by MARIE SUGAR and ESTHER ROSENHEIN on Tuesday. Guest of honor for the party was MRS. HARRY HAMMELL of Kenosha, Wisconsin, visiting her sister, MINTA SMITH. A green and white theme was carried out in appointments in Bayou DeSiard country club's private dining room. Daisies centered the table. Eight ladies found their places marked with snapshots of themselves made at an early age.

Friday night JOAN and MILES SAGER and JERRY and C. D. OAKLEY, JR., entertained with an old - time barbecue at Bernbet Farm in West Monroe. Long tables were set up in the covered patio area adjoining the log cabin. Osyters and hors d'oeuvres were served early, with barbecued ribs, baked beans, and salad on the supper menu.

Out of town guests at this party were MR. and MRS. WOLLEN WALSHE of New Orleans. The Walshes are here for the weekend as guests of MARIE LOUISE and GEORGE SNELLINGS, JR.

Yesterday the Snellings and their guests went up the river by boat for a picnic lunch. Later in the day, about one hundred friends attended a tea dance at the Snellings home. This morning, the Walshes and their hosts will be honored at a milk punch party at the home of HILDA and GYP M'DONALD.

Clothes watchers can always enjoy themselves at the Big Timers Dance club parties. Last Friday's dance, held at Bayou DeSiard country club from eight until one, brought out a number of lovely new dresses. DARLENE CROSSLAND's black peau de soie was gay with oversize polka dots of orange and shocking pink . . . . WANDA HINKLE wore turquoise shoes with her white chiffon dancing dress . . . . while JUANITA WILSON, also in white chiffon, chose all white accessories . . . . CLYDE HOLLOWAY's eye - catching shoes were covered with vari-colored sequins . . . . Stunning was the word for CHRIS COLLINS' floor - length silk, printed with blue roses . . . PAT RILEY wore yellow embroidered organza over matching taffeta.

The BILL M'DOWELLS have returned from a fabulous New York trip. 'Twas Arden's first visit to Gotham, so they really made all the sightseers spots. During their seven days there, they saw "Camelot," "Sound of Music," and "My Fair Lady:" and dined at Four Seasons and La Fonda del Sol.

"Hobo" invitations of brown paper and bandannas were mailed for the party given last night honoring JAN ADCOCK, who is to be graduated from Neville next month. Hosts were the FRED FUDICKARS, JR., in whose home the affair was held, and the BILL RILEYS. Tables covered with checked tablecloths were set up on the patio overlooking the bayou. Large iron pots filled with ice and bottled drinks were used as centerpieces. A supper of barbecued chicken, rice casserole, and green salad was served to twenty guests. For dessert, gallons of ice cream were set out, and other makings for sundaes.

Members of Bayou DeSiard country club are looking forward with anticipation to this coming Saturday night, when a crawfish supper is planned. M'VEA OLIVER and FLO KELLY will oversee the preparation of crawfish etouffe.

In Dallas Tuesday and Wednesday were DOT and JACK MASUR and their daughters, GRETCHEN and BARBARA. They drove over for Honors Day at Southern Methodist university, when JACQUELINE MASUR was tapped for Mortarboard. Jackie, will be president of the honorary next year.

The ROY LEDBETTERS returned Monday from a weekend trip to Austin, Texas, where they were guests of DR. HENRY RENFERT. On Tuesday Roy's parents, MR. and MRS. R. H. LEDBETTER of Birmingham, Alabama, arrived for a visit. They are to return home today.

Tuesday evening LAURA JOHNSON invited members of St. Theresa chapter of Grace church for dinner at her home. Laura used yellow and white spring flowers — iris, azaleas, tulips — for the table and throughout the house. On the menu served to twelve guests were devilled oysters, baked potatoes, broccoli, and hot biscuits, with angel cake and fresh strawberries for dessert. There were twelve guests.

Young miss CATHY DIXON celebrated her third birthday with an outdoor party Tuesday. A real merry-go-round set up on the lawn contributed to the merriment. The cake itself was decorated as a merry - go - round. Balloon whistles were the favors given to eighteen children who attended.

A rare treat indeed is in store for members of Young Concert-goers association. This coming Saturday an original ballet, "The Frog Prince," will be presented at Neville auditorium at two p.m. Music for the ballet, based on the fairy tale, was written by ELOY FOMINAYA, and will be performed by the Youth Orchestra. PAT WATTLEY did the choreography, and dancers will be her pupils. There will be a narration of the story as the dancers perform.

On her ninth birthday, LINDA USREY was honored with a party at home. Games were played by twenty - five little girls, with MARTHA STONE winning Stop the Music; and HOLLY HEUER and BECKY HUENEFELD, Bingo. A birthday cloth decorated the table, which was set up on the patio. Sandwiches, ice cream and cake were served.

In our poetry corner today, two poems about children. First, "To a Teen - Age Daughter" by Lavonne Mathison:

You borrow my lipstick,
My blouses and skirts,
My nylons and sweaters,
And even Dad's shirts.
As long as you're taking,
It sure would be nice
If just once in a while,
You'd take our advice.

And "Lines for a Little Man" by Mary Margaret Milbrath:

There are kisses to remember,
There are kisses to forget;
There are kisses that will haunt you;
There are some you just won't get.

But of all that I have tasted,
I can truly say I am
Strictly partial to your kisses
Mixed with cookie crumbs and jam.

Seersucker revival is noted in sportswear, casual dresses and children's wear. New colors and patterns, such as plain and puckered stripes, give it freshness and individuality.

Let's talk about Maternity Fashions

MATERNITY LINGERIE

For comfort and smooth line, maternity lingerie is a must under correct fitting maternity fashions. A maternity panty, for example, has a double fold of self fabric at the slightly larger waist line to permit smooth, soft firm stretch as the waist thickens. There is also a set-in section of Helanca fabric from waist to crotch to adjust to the abdomen's changing size and shape. Naturally, a regular panty does not have to meet the changes and variations required of maternity lingerie.

FOR COMFORT

In all forms of maternity wear, the stretch or adjustable features are very important for comfort and looks. This is also true in lingerie. The half slip has built-in stretch where it is needed and is always ready. Careful use of Helanca fabrics and elastic assure you of a slip that hangs right in front and back at all times. You can stand up and sit down as often as you wish in complete comfort. Your maternity lingerie is designed for minimum bulk with maximum comfort. And this is also true of the full slip.

IMPORTANT YOU

Because, during pregnancy, your body is naturally changing its proportions, it is important that you wear clothing that takes this into consideration. This is the main purpose of maternity clothing . . . from the lingerie, foundations, to the fashionable outfits you may choose to wear.

COME TO SEE US

You'll find everything you will need to wear in maternity clothing at 1129 Forsythe Ave. We'll be happy to talk with you anytime.

Room Space Affected By Color Plan

When planning color schemes in your home, consider color in relation to space. Color definitely affects the feeling of space within a room or area.

The warm colors, such as red, yellow, orange or gold, seem to make a room seem smaller when used in quantity. The dark values of all colors, used in quantity, also scale down the dimensions of a room.

Cool colors, on the other hand, have the opposite effect. Blues, greens and violets tend to increase the feeling of spaciousness within a room. This is also true of the tints of lighter values of all colors.

For example: if you are planning a color scheme for a small room, and orange is the favored color, use the lightest shades, or orange with white, for large areas such as the carpet and walls. You will minimize the tendency of orange tones to dominate the room and make it seem smaller.

[illegible] too late now to plant seed [illegible] blooming annuals, but you can get well started plants from nurseries and feed stores. In planning ahead, consider the long list of hot weather annuals. Some of these are [illegible] sweet [illegible], torenia, portulaca, [illegible], zinnia, marigold and others. Consult the seed racks.

Also remember the summer blooming bulbs, tubers and corms [illegible] gladiolus [illegible] dahlias, tuberoses.

GARDEN JOBS

[illegible]

Some bedding plants that you can put out now are blue salvia, red salvia, petunias, verbena and others. Go to the plant house and find what they are offering.

Perennial phlox [illegible] plants are like people, they can fool you.

Mrs. Goodlet also states she loves this tree and has read where they will grow, eventually as high as 190 feet. It is called tulip tree because the leaves are shaped like tulips.

FLOWERING PEACH

Flowering peach (prunus persica) is a fast growing deciduous ornamental shrub or tree that makes a dazzling show in the landscape picture. It is quite spectacular when double white or rose colored flowers are produced on bare branches.

The plant likes a sunny location, well drained soil and is hardy to cold. Flowering branches can be cut and used in the house. The trees are subject to borers, which often kills the plant after a year or two, unless treated. If the plant needs pruning, do this immediately after blooming.

THE TOUR

The Monroe Garden Club tour of gardens will be remembered for a long, long time. The gardens showed no sign of the bad weather. Every garden was outstanding, but since I can't tell you everything, here are a few high points.

The J. H. Thatcher back lawn was planted completely with monkey grass (lily turf). The garden is very shady. Nobody said it was completely impossible to grow any variety of grass. The effect was good and you may need to do the same.

Mrs. Leon Sugar [illegible] as a ground cover around many plants and in a [illegible] bed. So very effective and time saving. The owners do not [illegible] around azaleas since they are acid loving. The lime in the stone and gravel is alkaline.

The J. W. Gaines are about the most energetic pair I've found. They have built brick walks and patios, doing all the work and believe me they looked professional. Ajuga and early wild phlox in the same bed, blooming, brought admiring comments.

[illegible]

The James Alcock garden is a neat one too. The complete layout is perfection and uses the [illegible] to the best advantage from within the house and outside.

THE OPEN ROAD

Just about this time, we get the perennial urge to "take to the road." As we take to the highways we might do well to take a lesson from those stalwart knights of the road, the truck drivers. A survey showed that many of these men keep candy in a compartment as a quick source of energy to help keep them alert.

While there is no substitute for sleep for the tired driver, candy can help maintain alertness at a maximum level. Besides, a lollipop will keep the small fry quiet and content on a long drive. Medical authorities agree that candy is one of the fastest sources of quick energy. So for safety's sake, for your family's sake and for goodness sake, keep alert on our busy spring highways.

Garden Gate Club Exhibits

By GLADYS M. KULCKE

Our show last week was presented by members of the Garden Gate Garden Club of Winnsboro. In the horticulture section a collection of bearded iris was displayed by Mrs. C. O. Bennett, Indian Chief, China Maid, Desert Gold and Scilla Peruviana.

Mrs. Vernon Baldwin selected an amber glass compote for her modified Hogarth Curve. The lazy S curve was delineated with eucalyptus foliage. Yellow and blue Dutch iris were skillfully placed within the established line. Statice was used as a filler. The contrast in color was most effective.

Mrs. Paul Price used a white pottery urn for her church arrangement. The design was vertical in pattern and free - standing (viewed from all sides). The vertical line was established with striped ribbon grass. April narcissus (white with small yellow cup) were effectively massed within the design. Yellow moss flowers were grouped low in the design over the rim of the container. Very fresh and crisp.

A crescent design was created by Mrs. Douglas Naremore. The container selected was a small black iron compote set on a black base. Oasis was the mechanic used in this instance. The crescent line was formed with the new tips of pine, filled in with marguerite daisies and variegated privet. A lovely spring design.

Mrs. Harrold De Ville featured roses in her modified Hogarth Curve. A dark green compote was placed on tiered black bases. The color of the container was a perfect blend for the eucalyptus foliage used to establish the Hogarth curve.

WORKSHOP

A flower arrangement workshop will be held Monday at 9:30 in the Recreation Room, Ruston High School. Mrs. John Lewis, Mrs. C. C. Lucky and Mrs. M. W. Montgomery will be the instructors. The public is invited. There will be a small fee.

Roses — Spray once every two weeks during the growing season with malathion to keep plants free of aphids. Use a rose dust to keep down blackspot and mildew. Fertilize roses immediately after their peak bloom, to renew their vigor for the next blooming period, which should be in about six weeks. Fertilize roses when the soil is moist or water well with a soaker. On new planted bushes, do not cut blossoms with long stems, leave plenty of foliage to insure development of good, strong bushes. Rather than trying to keep weeds down by cultivating (you may injure the rose roots) mulch the area around bushes with peat moss, leaves or pine straw.

Spray your camellias for control of scale insects. Apply volck with a spray particularly to the undersides of leaves will check infestations before hot weather prevents use of oil sprays. Feed the camellias with a camellia fertilizer.

Bulbs to be planted now — dahlias, cannas, fancy - leaved caladiums, ginger lilies, daylilies, tuberoses and continue planting gladiolus every two weeks for continuous blooming.

Set out plants of both annuals and perennials. You will find all the bedding plants ready for transplanting into your garden at your nurserymen's. Sow seed of your favorite annuals for summer blooming. Celosias, marigolds, zinnias, strawflowers and tithonia are some of my favorites. Strawflowers are easy to grow and do well in hot, dry weather. They make wonderful winter bouquets. Do not plant verbena until late in May. It grows well in full sun and some shade. Cut verbena back during the growing season so plants will be fuller and produce more blooms.

Friends of Truman Quinton will regret to learn of his serious illness. Please send him a card to Batesville Hospital, Batesville, Miss.

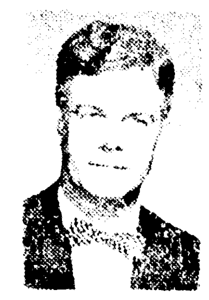
Dogwoods Beautiful



By WILLIAM LANIER HUNT

The dogwood season of 1961 will have to go down as one of the most beautiful in years in spite of the fact that lots of the trees were somewhat cold hurt and never matured their blossoms.

The remarkable thing about this dogwood season was that very cold weather held back the foliage of all the trees and shrubs, and the beautiful white and the creamy cold - hurt blossoms showed up against mostly bare woods that had little green in them.

About 20 years ago, we had a spring like this one, but the cold weather came right after the redbud had come into bloom.

An ice storm in some parts of the south covered the redbud and quinces and early spireas with a glassy covering and held this flower - show - on - ice in suspension for about eight days. Nature is indeed full of surprises.

QUESTION

"Why do dogwoods fail to bloom?" is a common question every year. Well, right now is the time to see to it that they do bloom next year if yours did not flower this season.

Dogwood trees, like any others, must have a certain minimum amount of light and food if they are to bloom for you. Have you noticed how heavily most of the trees bloom where they stand out on the lawns and in the edges of woods in the sun? We are lucky in that they will flower in almost half shade when the competition from the roots of other trees is not too much for them. If your dogwoods are under shade trees, feed them once or twice between now and the 4th of July by scattering a complete fertilizer over the ground underneath them.

You may feed them, of course, by the hole punching method, but these trees are shallow rooted and will soon get the benefit of top feeding. This fertilizer gets to dogwood roots before it reaches those of the large shade trees, which are usually deeper in the ground.

LIMBING

If you think there is too much shade for your dogwoods, try limbing up the bigger trees over them. Get on a ladder and remove the low limbs from oaks and hickories and other big trees which are keeping out the light and air.

Garden Work Eases Ahead

By AUDREY DAWSON

Seems as though "ole Man Winter" wants to hang around. Just can't get much work done in our gardens. Surely hope those of you have put out your plants early that the cold weather has not damaged them - but surely it's about time for the ground to warm up and we can get ever so many plants from our nursery and set out. These include: petunias, verbena, zinnias, vinca, salvia and others.

We are all so tired of this winter weather that it is awfully hard for us to think about color in the landscape next fall but it is time to plant fall blooming bulbs.

The lycorus, or September lily, is a very good fall blooming bulb that will add enrichment to the landscape - colors are red, yellow, pink and white. Remember bulbs require a soil high in organic matter. Organize bulbs in general areas in groups or drifts rather than a scattering a few bulbs over a large area.

DAY LILIES

The day lily is a perennial flower that has grown more in popularity in the past few years than any other one flower. There was a time when a gardener was given day lily plants they were stuck down in a hole and were forgotten, but today this plant really is given one of the best places in the landscape.

Another reason for the popularity of the day lily is that here in the south these can be planted any season except freezing weather, but of course the best time is the early spring or fall.

Nearly all full sized plants will bloom the first year, but be careful not to b too disappointed if the blooms are rather small or poorly colored. Be sure to give the plants at least two seasons to get established.

There are many different opinions as to fertilizing day lilies but in general the recommendation is to use a balanced fertilizer such as 4-10-7 and scatter around plants and water in. This fertilizer should be applied after cold weather is about over.

PERIOD FURNITURE

If you are confused when people talk about period furniture here's an easy way to sort out the different styles in your mind. Almost all period furniture can be divided into two classes - formal and informal. Most formal styles are named after a King, Queen, or famous furniture designer, such as Louis XVI, Queen Anne or Chippendale.

Most of these styles can be used together. Informal styles often have the name of a country in their name such as Early American, French Provincial, or Italian Provincial. The most recent Scandinavian furniture with its flat surfaces and straight lines combined with graceful curves, also, falls into this class.

The same rule holds for combining period and contemporary styles. The more formal and elegant contemporary pieces blend with formal period styles. One other point to remember is make sure that the pieces you use together are in proportion that one dosen't seem too big and massive and the other too small and dainty.

MILDEW

With all this damp weather we have been experiencing lately may mean that you, Mrs. Homemaker, are having trouble with mildew. Of course the best remedy is to prevent it, which means that storage spaces should be dry and should be aired often.

Mildew is a fungus which grows on all fabrics and causes hard to remove stains and if allowed to grow will weaken fibers. If mildew is discovered, treat the spots immediately because they are easier to remove at an early stage. Soap and warm water will often remove mildew stains from washable material. If the spot is stubborn, treat it with lemon juice and salt and dry in the sun. If the stain is old, bleach it with household bleach or hydrogen peroxide. Rinse well after the treatment. One percaution, be sure to test for color fastness on a hidden spot on the article, if bleach is used. Remember, bleaches may not be used on all fabrics.

Well-Started Plants Sturdy

By MILDRED SWIFT

It's too late now to plant seed of spring blooming annuals, but you can get well started plants from nurseries and seed stores. In planning ahead, consider the long list of hot weather annuals. Some of those are cosmos, ageratum, sweet alyssum, gaillardia, portulaca, sun flower, zinnia, marigold and others. Consult the seed racks.

Also, remember the summer blooming bulbs, tubers and corms — gladiolus, cannas, crinums, dahlias, tuberoses.

GARDEN JOBS

Watch, your spider lily (lycoris) foliage. Just as soon as it begins to turn yellow, dig up the bulbs and divide and replant. After the foliage dies it is difficult to find them. If you divide these every four or five years they'll multiply faster.

The same can be done with other spring flowering bulbs whose spring foliage dies in the summer, such as narcissus, hyacinths, snowflakes, etc.

Some bedding plants that you can put out now are blue salvia, red salvia, petunias, verbena and others. Go to the plant houses and find what they are offering.

Perennial phlox is beginning to put out growth for blooming this summer. So, rush your planting of those, dividing the old clumps. The same for golden glow and stokesia.

If you transplant daylilies now, you'll get few flowers this year. Their blooming season is just ahead.

When dahlias have put out about five sets of leaves, pinch the top out. That will make the plant grow thicker and you'll have more flowers. There are some small flowering dahlias that grow from seed. Planted now they'll bloom in late summer and early fall.

Along the last of April or first of May, verbena begins to get mildew and puts out long leggy runners. Dust with sulphur (when the foliage is dry) and cut off tops. You'll be rewarded with more blooms later on.

I can't remember who told me that a better plan than plaiting bulb foliage is putting a rubber band around each one. This keeps the foliage from falling over in the beds. The band will rot by the time the foliage has died. Good idea!

Mrs. Davie Goodlet, 611 North Third Street, West Monroe read in this column that tulip pop'ars often wait as long as 20 years to bloom. She says she planted two of these trees five years ago. One has not bloomed, but one of the plants bloomed in 1959, did not bloom in 1960, and this year is again covered with blossoms. Just goes to show you plants are like people, they can fool you.

Mrs. Goodlet also states she loves this tree and has read where they will grow, eventually as high as 190 feet. It is called tulip tree because the leaves are shaped like tulips.

FLOWERING PEACH

Flowering peach (prunus persica) is a fast growing deciduous ornamental shrub or tree that makes a dazzling show in the landscape picture. It is quite spectacular when double white or rose colored flowers are produced on bare branches.

This plant likes a sunny location, well drained loamy soil. It is hardy to cold. Flowering branches can be cut and used in the house. The trees are subject to borer, which often kills the plant after a year or two, unless treated. If the plant needs prunning, do this immediately after blooming.

There are "weeping peaches" now with double white or double red flowers. These are quite artistic. There's also a dwarf flowering and fruiting peach. It never gets more than five feet high.

These plants should be put out during the winter planting months.

THE TOUR

The Monroe Garden Club tour of gardens will be remembered for a long, long time. The gardens showed no signs of the bad weather. Every garden was outstanding, but since I can't tell you everything, here are a few high points:

The J. H. Thatcher back lawn was planted completely with monkey grass (lily turf). The garden is very shady. Nodi said it was completely impossible to raise any variety of grass. The effect was good and you may need to do the same.

Mrs. Leon Sugar has used white gravel as a ground cover around many plants and in a number of beds. So very effective and time saving. The owners do not use this around azaleas since they are acid loving. The lime in the stone and gravel is alkaline.

The J. W. Gaines are about the most energetic pair I've found. They have built brick walks and patios, doing all the work and believe me they looked professional. Adjuga and early wild flocks in the same bed, blooming, brought admiring comments.

Hortense Touchstone is one of north Louisiana's best gardeners. Her young garden looks as though it has been established for years. The highlight here was the gorgeous snowball hydrangea in bloom.

The Jamar Adcock garden is a new one too. The complete layout is perfection and uses the bayou to the best advantage from within the house and outside.

THE OPEN ROAD

Just about this time, we get the perennial urge to "take to the road." As we take to the highways we might do well to take a lesson from those stalwart knights of the road, the truck drivers. Historic Meet Scheduled By Church Group

DALLAS (Special) — The Highland Park Presbyterian Church here will be host to the historic Centennial General Assembly of the Presbyterian Church, U.S., April 27-May 3.

It will be the largest Assembly in the history of the denomination, and will be held in its largest church (5,300 members). The meeting will be colorful, marked by pageantry and an international flavor, and will deal with a number of controversial and important items of business.

Commissioners attending will number 534 from 16 southern states. They will take note of the organiztion at Augusta, Ga., in 1861, of the southern branch of Presbyterianism, but most of the special celebrations will emphasize the heritage the church shares in the Presbyterian and Reformed family, and the evangelistic mission which it is undertaking during 1961.

ATTENTION

Moderators, stated clerks, or other officials of some 25 other Presbyterian Churches from throughout the world will be present, and special attention will be focused on the leaders from churches in seven lands where the Presbyterian Church, U.S. has played a vital role in missionary effort. These include Korea, the Congo, Japan, Mexico, Taiwan, Brazil and Portugal.

The ecumenical flavor of the Centennial Assembly will be emphasized by major addresses by men from three nations. Dr. Marcel Pradervand of Geneva, Switzerland, executive secretary of the World Presbyterian Alliance, will speak April 30, and Dr. Franklin Clark Fry, president of the Lutheran World Federation and leader in the National and World Councils of Churches, will speak May 1. Dr. James I. McCord, president of Princeton Seminary, and Dr. J. C. McLelland, seminarian of Montreal, Canada, will be the other major speakers.

BUSINESS

Among important business to face the historic Assembly will be proposals for a union with other Presbyterian and Protestant bodies; a recond budget, a study on capital punishment, and mission-church relationship with the National Presbyterian Church of Mexico.

Overtures (requests for action) from threee presbyteries, Central Texas, Southwest Oklahoma, and St. Johns in Florida, ask that the Assembly accept invitations to discuss merger, either with the United Presbyterian Church, U.S.A., or with it and other Protestant Churches as suggested in the "Blake-Pike Proposal."

May Fellowship Day Observance Announced Here

The United Church Women of Monroe and West Monroe will take part in the nationwide observance of May Fellowship Day on May 5th with two meetings.

A covered-dish luncheon meeting will be held at St. Paul's Methodist Church at 12:30 noon, and there will be a covered dish supper meeting at First Christian Church at 7 p.m.

The Rev. W. Alan King of St. Alban's Episcopal Church in Monroe and St. Patrick's Episcopal Church in West Monroe, will address the group.

May Fellowship Day is an annual observance sponsored by United Church Women.

The Monroe-West Monroe group is one of more than 2,200 local and state councils taking part in this year's observance.

Mrs. S. W. Raby, chairman, said, "Our theme points up our responsibility, not only as individuals, but as Christian groups. The responsibility and freedom of the churches are matters of nationwide concern. We hope through our study of this problem we will be able to develop a clearer understanding of the role of the churches in the community and in the nation."

Historic Meet Scheduled By Church Group

DALLAS (Special) — The Highland Park Presbyterian Church here will be host to the historic Centennial General Assembly of the Presbyterian Church, U.S., April 27-May 3.

It will be the largest Assembly in the history of the denomination, and will be held in its largest church (5,300 members). The meeting will be colorful, marked by pageantry and an international flavor, and will deal with a number of controversial and important items of business.

Commissioners attending will number 534 from 16 southern states. They will take note of the organiztion at Augusta, Ga., in 1861, of the southern branch of Presbyterianism, but most of the special celebrations will emphasize the heritage the church shares in the Presbyterian and Reformed family, and the evangelistic mission which it is undertaking during 1961.

ATTENTION

Moderators, stated clerks, or other officials of some 25 other Presbyterian Churches from throughout the world will be present, and special attention will be focused on the leaders from churches in seven lands where the Presbyterian Church, U.S. has played a vital role in missionary effort. These include Korea, the Congo, Japan, Mexico, Taiwan, Brazil and Portugal.

The ecumenical flavor of the Centennial Assembly will be emphasized by major addresses by men from three nations. Dr. Marcel Pradervand of Geneva, Switzerland, executive secretary of the World Presbyterian Alliance, will speak April 30, and Dr. Franklin Clark Fry, president of the Lutheran World Federation and leader in the National and World Councils of Churches, will speak May 1. Dr. James I. McCord, president of Princeton Seminary, and Dr. J. C. McLelland, seminarian of Montreal, Canada, will be the other major speakers.

BUSINESS

Aming important business to face the historic Assembly will be proposals for a union with other Presbyterian and Protestant bodies; a recond budget, a study on capital punishment, and mission-church relationship with the National Presbyterian Church of Mexico.

Overtures (requests for action) from threee presbyteries, Central Texas, Southwest Oklahoma, and St. Johns in Florida, ask that the Assembly accept invitations to discuss merger, either with the United Presbyterian Church, U.S.A., or with it and other Protestant Churches as suggested in the "Blake-Pike Proposal."

Mrs. S. W. Raby, chairman, said, "Our theme points up our responsibility, not only as individuals, but as Christian groups. The responsibility and freedom of the churches are matters of nationwide concern. We hope through our study of this problem we will be able to develop a clearer understanding of the role of the churches in the community and in the nation."

SEW SIMPLE

By Eunice Farmer

"Dear Mrs. Farmer:

"I wish you would [illegible] whether it is necessary to shrink most of our cottons today before cutting them.

Also, in making pleated skirts, is it permissible to leave on the salvage when seaming the lengths together?"

Mrs. E.T.

Good quality cottons will [illegible] it depends on how you will launder them. If you intend washing them in very hot water, it would be a good idea to shrink them first.

You may use the selvage edge of the fabric in the skirt seam, but since the selvage is woven tighter than the rest of the fabric, you [illegible] clip this edge every inch or so. [illegible] pressing of the seam.

Dear Mrs. Farmer:

PATTERN MEASURE

Dear Mrs. M. Mc:

In all my experience [illegible] I have found that [illegible] closest to this measurement, the chances are that you will be more satisfied with the fit of the garment. This measurement given on the pattern may even be SMALLER than your bust measurement, but unless you are very large in the shoulders, it probably will fit you better.

Dear Eunice:

In relation to [illegible] and size of buttons, I am never sure where to start the buttonhole. Do you start it on the center front line or [illegible] left of the center? Do you always sew the buttons on the center front line? Please help."

Mrs. S.C.

BUTTONHOLE HINT

Dear Mrs. S.C.:

Except for some unusual reason, the buttonholes should begin at the center front in all garments. Your buttons, too, may be placed on the exact center front.

Don't sew the buttons on according to the marks on the pattern. Instead, mark the exact spot for buttons by lapping the right front over the left front after the garment is completed.

Africa was the subject of the afternoon's program introduced by Mrs. Spencer. "The Tribe That Lost Its Head," a novel by Nicholas Monsarrat, one of the most exciting writers of this generation, was reviewed by Mrs. Walker. The author reveals the conflict in ideas and ideals of a young American, an Englishman and the African native.

Mrs. Marcus Mapp reviewed a non-fiction book, "The Death of Africa," by Peter Ritner, young American journalist who is associate editor of Current, a new review specializing in political and scientific areas. The documental work vivifies the situation in Africa, with emphasis in South Africa and the American stake in it, according to the reviewer. Hair Color, Shape Share Top Billing

Hairdos are news this spring in two ways — in color and shape. The little round hairdo is definitely in, and its simplicity calls for shiny tresses, sparkling with color highlights.

The briefer hairdos are flattering to all ages and all shapes of face — round, oval or heart shaped. There are enough variations on the new short style for almost anyone to find the right one. Best of all, the short, neat look is easy to manage and keep yourself.

Color is also very much on the scene this spring, and it's just as easy as washing your hair. If you like to experiment conservatively, then one of the new color shampoos is right up your alley. Color sheen shampoo accents your own natural color, adding highlights and sheen, but it does not radically change the color. It comes in five shades, pastel blonde, golden brown, deep brown, flame red and french blue.

How to arrive at the new hair silhouette: A visit to the hairdresser is probably the quickest way to find the right style for you because some cutting and shaping may be in order. When your hair is being set, keep an eagle eye on how the rollers and pincurls are placed, the directions in which they are set, the sizes of the rollers used and the procedure of combing out. This will be a big help when you set your hair at home.

Setting your own hair: A little advance shopping and planning can make this job easier. First, be sure to have on hand all the necessary sizes of rollers (those with brushes inside are best) and some long as well as short clips. Set aside an hour or so to do the job, at a time when you're not rushed. (While you're washing your hair, soak your brush and comb in a basin of hot sudsy water.)

Then blot excess water with a Turkish towel, park yourself in front of a well-lit mirror and go to work with the rollers. They're tricky at first and may take a bit of patience. When you have them set, wrap a kerchief or hairnet around your head to keep them in place. When you're dry, take out the rollers and brush all your hair back and up. Then with a comb, carefully arrange your hairdo. Set waves in place with long clips and leave them in for a few minutes. Spray lightly, if desired.

Voila, a brand new hairdo that goes beautifully with the colorful graceful new clothes you'll be buying.

Swami Santha Installs Officers

New officers for Swami Santha No. 102 for 1961 were installed Monday night at a meeting in Castle Hall, 127½ St. John with Anita Causey, past regent as installing officer.

They include Louise Fleet, rani; Jim Tolson, rajah; Callie Crow, princess; Rachel Miller, Pundita; Anita Causey, Purohita; Zora M[illegible], treasurer; Gertrude Barke, scribe; Angelo Kanelos, department of works; Nell Heard, Rish; Jean Leavitt, second warder; Mae Bearden, first warder; Harriett Thompson, Sanon; Bessie Haile, imperial representative; Anita Causey, alternate and Dr. H. H. Baur, press correspondent.

During the business session applications were voted upon from El Dorado, Ark. and a donation was made to the stringed band instrument scholarship.

At conclusion of the meeting refreshments were served in the dining hall by Jim Tolson and Dr. Baur.

Bath Sales

Talk about door-to-door selling—even baths were dispensed by this method in Paris during the 18th and 19th centuries. A Parisian desiring a bath contacted a licensed water-seller, who carted both a tub and hot water to his home for the occasion.

Women's Pants Now Available In 11 Lengths

By GAY PAULEY
UPI Women's Editor

NEW YORK (UPI) — The hemline is only one facet of fashion that has its ups and downs. So do the pants that more women are wearing than ever before.

To date, there are 11 lengths of these trousers and the woman shopper needs a chart to know what she's getting when the clerk says "[illegible]" or "Capri" or "Nassau" or "Bermuda."

Wilma Donaldson, fashion coordinator for Queens casuals, which [illegible] more than one million pair of pants annually, has tried to eliminate some of the confusion by drawing up a guide for the woman shopper. And, of course, for observant males everywhere.

At the same time, Miss Donaldson said that one of the newest trends in trousers is to make them reversible. For instance, tapered pants are done in gabardine, solid color on one side, floral printed on the other. Put a roll on the pants leg, and everyone knows you're coordinating your trousers with an overblouse made of the same floral print.

Now for Miss Donaldson's dictionary of pants lengths:

Shortie short: Just a bit on the leg as modesty will permit.

Intermediate short: Two inches longer than the shorty.

Regulation short: Two inches longer than the intermediate.

Jamaica short: Mid-thigh, on most women.

Nassau short: About two inches longer than the Jamaica.

Bermuda short: Hemmed off at about two inches above the knee.

Knee pants: Just what the name indicates — a length, highly popular for summer, ending in the middle of the knee.

Deck pants: About two inches below the knee. Also known as cabin-boy.

Pedal pusher: A length which stops at mid-calf.

Capri: A tapered leg trouser which stops three to four inches above the ankle bone.

Slack — the familiar length reaching all the way to the ankle.

Girl Scout News

Day camp registration has reached a total of 196. Since there is a quota of each age group in order to insure a complete age range of 8-15 in camp, registrations should be made as early as possible.

The progression in adventurous activity that girls have experienced at day camp has largely been responsible for the interest in primitive camping that is being shown. Troop 41, with Mrs. Louis Breard and Mrs. N. J. Huckabee in charge, spent two nights last week end at Pine Wood, sleeping on bedrolls in tents. The [illegible] Saturday proved that the girls were good at tent pitching.

Guests of the troop for lunch Saturday remarked that there was nothing primitive about food when they were served barbecued chicken, mashed potatoes, peas, rolls, and cherry pie. The food was cooked outdoors on charcoal stoves, however, and the girls had planned to cook the cobbler on a reflector oven. However, it turned so cold that a large group was enjoying the warmth of a fire and the cooks decided to use the stove instead.

Girls attending the outing were Bonnie Baldo, Linda Breard, Ann Brinson, Sally Hover, Susan Ellington, Louise Starsney, Virginia Starsney, Carole Overton, Gretchen Haas, Margaret Breard, Loretta Jones and Marilyn Denoux.

Another activity going on at the same time was the first session of training with the girls who have indicated an interest in the '62 senior roundup. Mrs. Charles Overton, roundup trainer, was in charge of the review of simple out-of-door skills for the 29 girls who attended. Another skills day is planned for April 29, to be followed by two nights in June, a unit of day camp which will include three days of tent camping, and a week in August.

Eight girls will attend the roundup, to be held at Button Bay State Park, Vermont, in July 1962. Another patrol will be chosen to participate in a regional event.

Added to the list of summer activities for Scouts is an opportunity to learn to sew. Mrs. Audrey Dawson, parish demonstration agent, is making arrangements for two sewing classes in June, open to girls who next fall will be in the fifth grade or above. They will learn to use a sewing machine and to make a simple apron. Classes will be limited to ten girls each. Dates are June 12-16 and June 19-23, at the agricultural extension building in West Monroe. Registrations will be taken at the Girl Scout office on a first come, first served basis.

Troop 8 did a splendid job of a conservation project when they spent a night at Pine Wood recently. The girls put up a barrier to keep people from crossing a slope near the building and covered the slope with bricks and stones to keep soil from washing away. Mrs. E. M. Varnado and Mrs. Ellis Hunt accompanied this troop of junior high girls on camp, where they also completed requirements for first class rank. A reminder of their camp is a much-needed new can opener, which the troop donated to the camp in appreciation of their good times.

The Almanac

Today is Sunday, April 23, the 113th day of the year with 252 more in 1961.

The moon is approaching its full phase.

The morning stars are Venus, Jupiter and Saturn.

The evening star is Mars.

On this day in history:

In 1791, James Buchanan, the 15th United States President, was born.

In 1898, the United States government asked for 125,000 volunteers to assist in the war against Spain.

In 1915, English poet Rupert Brooke, died in Greece while on duty with the royal navy in World War I.

In 1959, Red China reported a victory in Tibet, after nearly 2,000 persons were killed.

Thought for today: English novelist Herbert George Wells said: "Human history becomes more and more a race between education and catastrophe."

Toy Testers Throw Caution To The Winds

ON RAISING CHILDREN
By PATRICIA MCCORMACK

NEW YORK (UPI)—For childish reasons, Dr. Emma D. Sheehy sometimes hops along on a pogo stick.

She tries to yank out teddy bears' eyes and pull the wheels off toy cars.

The professor emeritus also kicks, drops, tosses and generally attempts to break dolls, wagons and other toys.

Once she even put a match near the plastic skirt of a doll and caused a flash fire.

What's more, one of Dr. Sheehy's associates, Dr. Mary Moffitt, has been seen trying to sink her teeth into some toys.

Such antics are part of the day's work when the consultants for the Toy Guidance Council (TGC) evaluate new toys.

Dr. Sheehy, of Teachers College, Columbia University, and chairman of the TGC's panel of toy-testers, has been putting new toys through her rugged obstacle course for 23 years.

Safety's a major consideration. The doll with the plastic skirt that flamed up when a match was held NEAR it, for example, flunked.

Dr. Sheehy said in an interview that the rough treatment is usually confined to toys for pre-schoolers. During the testing, Dr. Sheehy—a grandmotherly type — must pretend she's a toddler.

"We try to do everything to the toy that a child would," she said. "And every child does non-conformist things with a toy."

At the TGA headquarters in New York there also is a play laboratory. There, children from a local day nursery help the toy testers by playing with the newest ones.

Dr. Sheehy, who has taught at Columbia for 30 years, calls toys "play tools." She defines play as "child's work."

"A good play tool," she said, "engages a child's interest. It is something he can work with and receive satisfaction from."

The educator said parents never should hand a child a new toy and tell the child how to play with it.

"Letting a child work with his play tools as he wants to is an indication that you have respect for the child's ingenuity and resourcefulness," Dr. Sheehy said.

Other tips for parents are contained in a TGA booklet, "Development Through Play." In the forward, Mel Freud, president of the TGA, reports:

"If play is to have its maximum values for your child, he must have good toys, properly selected for each of the many stages in his development.

"Toys are not only the tools of play; they perform the even greater service of maintaining the youngster's eagerness, his ability to learn."

Through the TGA, a virtual science of good, safe toys has developed to match the growing understanding of why children play and what makes play worthwhile.

"Good toys are not luxuries," Freud said. "They are necessities for the welfare of your child. But always remember that to be right, a toy must first of all give the youngster fun."

But what about too much of a good thing? That is, what should you do when you home starts to look like a toy museum?

"Too many toys," Dr. Sheehy said, "frustrate a child. When your home begins to look like one big playroom, put some of the toys out of sight.

"It's a good idea to consult with your child about giving some of the toys to a charity for children."

"If you give away his toys without getting his permission, he'll think you're stealing from him."

Art Symbolizes Search For God

COLUMBUS, Ohio (AP) — The story of St. Christopher, symbolizing man's search for God, is portrayed in an unusual relief on two panels at the front of St. Christopher's Church here.

Between the panels, each of which is 40 feet high and 12 feet wide, is a stained glass shaft of baptistry windows. The relief was done by William Thompson, member of the Fine and Applied Arts Department faculty at Ohio State University.

A scale model first was carved in plaster, then cut by the artist in Indiana limestone. At night, the constant changing of light patterns heightens its beauty.

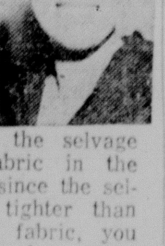
SEW SIMPLE
By Eunice Farmer

"Dear Mrs. Farmer:

"I wish you would discuss whether it is necessary to shrink most of our cottons today before cutting them.

Also, in making pleated skirts, is it permissible to leave on the salvage when seaming the lengths together?"

Mrs. E.T.



Good quality cottons will rarely shrink. It depends on how you will launder them. If you intend washing them in very hot water, it would be a good idea to shrink them first.

You may use the selvage edge of the fabric in the skirt seam, but since the selvage is woven tighter than the rest of the fabric, you must clip this edge every inch or so. This will prevent pulling at the seams.

"Dear Mrs. Farmer:

"How should one take a "bust measurement" to determine the size pattern to buy?"

Mrs. M. McC.

PATTERN MEASURE

Dear Mrs. M. McC:

In all my experiences with fitting, I have found that most women buy a pattern that is too large for them at the neckline, shoulders, and bodice in general. In most instances, don't take into consideration, the waist measurement or the hip measurement. These can be easily enlarged.

Measure yourself rather tightly just above the fullest part of the bust. In other words, a chest measurement rather than a bust measurement. If you buy a pattern closest to this measurement, the chances are that you will be more satisfied with the fit of the garment. This measurement given on the pattern may even be SMALLER than your bust measurement, but unless you are very large in the shoulders, it probably will fit you better.

"Dear Eunice:

"In relation to centers and size of buttons, I am never sure where to start the buttonhole. Do you start right on the center front line or ¼" left of the center. Do you always sew the buttons on the center front line? Please help!'

Mrs. S.C.

BUTTONHOLE HINT

Dear Mrs. S.C.:

Except for some unusual reason, the buttonholes should begin at the center front in all garments. Your buttons too, may be placed on the exact center front.

Don't sew the buttons on according to the marks on the pattern. Instead, mark the exact spot for buttons by lapping the right front over the left front, after garment is completed.

SEWING GLOSSARY:

Steamin; Applying steam, such as a steam iron, slightly above your fabric to raise the nap or pile. This is usually necessary if you have pressed the edges of fabric too hard and flattened the pile.

Please send all questions and suggestions to Sew Simple, in care of this newspaper. For detailed instructions on making buttonholes, send for my free leaflet, "Bound Buttonholes." Obtain by sending a large, stamped, self-addressed envelope with your request to Eunice Farmer, in care of Monroe Morning World.

Books On Africa Feature Program For Review Club

Floral accents provided a spring note throughout the home when Mrs. George T. Walker entertained members of the Review Club Monday afternoon, April 17. White roses in a silver urn were used in an opulent arrangement on a console table in the entrance. Gardenias were featured in the living room and the dining table had for its focal point a dramatic arrangement of multi-colored tulips, roses and iris in a silver compote.

The group assembled in the family room where the president, Mrs. W. M. Inabnet called the meeting to order and led the club collect. During the business session tentative program plans for the ensuing year were submitted by Mrs. N. R. Spencer, chairman of the advisory board.

Mrs. Sam Smith, treasurer, reported an acknowledgment from General Federation of Women's clubs for the Review club's contribution to a Latin American Scholarship fund. The president read a message from Mrs. Thomas Jett, president of fifth district federation.

Africa was the subject of the afternoon's program introduced by Mrs. Spencer. "The Tribe That Lost Its Head," a novel by Nicholas Monsarrat, one of the most exciting writers of this generation, was reviewed by Mrs. Walker. Setting for the work of fiction is only 32 air miles from London — 5,000 miles away—yet years apart in culture and tradition on the Maula island of Pharamaul, just off Southwest Africa. The author reveals the conflicting ideas and ideals of a young American, an Englishman and the African natives.

Mrs. Marcus Mapp reviewed a non-fiction book, "The Death of Africa," by Peter Retner, young American journalist who is associate editor of Current, a new review specializing in political and scientific areas. The documental work vivifies the situation in Africa, with emphasis in South Africa and the American stake in it, according to the review. Also in the book concrete ways are offered to translate our new understanding of Africa into an enlightened American policy.

During a social hour following the program the hostess served a dessert course to Mrs. W. E. Bennett, Jr., Mrs. E. P. Cudd, Mrs. Thomas C. Dansby, Mrs. W. T. Davis, Mrs. A. T. Givens, Mrs. C. P. Gray, Jr., Mrs. D. W. Griffith, Mrs. DeWitt Henry, Mrs. Fred Huenefeld, Mrs. W. M. Inabnet, Mrs. Robert Lewis, Mrs. J. C. Loftin, Mrs. Marcus Mapp, Mrs. Sam Smith, Mrs. N. R. Spencer and Mrs. L. N. Waddell.

Hair Color, Shape Share Top Billing

Hairdos are news this spring in two ways — in color and shape. The little round hairdo is definitely in, and its simplicity calls for shiny tresses, sparkling with color highlights.

The briefer hairdos are flattering to all ages and all shapes of faces — round, oval or heart-shaped. There are enough variations on this new short style for almost anyone to find the right one. Best of all, the short, neat look is easy to manage and keep yourself.

Color is also very much on the scene this spring, and it's just as easy as washing your hair. If you like to experiment conservatively, then one of the new color shampoos is right up your alley. Color sheen shampoo accents your own natural color, adding highlights and sheen, but it does not radically change the color. It comes in five shades, pastel blonde, golden brown, deep brown, flame red and french blue.

How to arrive at the new hair silhouette: A visit to the hairdresser is probably the quickest way to find the right style for you because some cutting and shaping may be in order. When your hair is being set, keep an eagle eye on how the rollers and pincurls are placed, the directions in which they are set, the sizes of the rollers used and the procedure of combing out. This will be a big help when you set your hair at home.

Setting your own hair: A little advance shopping and planning can make this job easier. First, be sure to have on hand all the necessary sizes of rollers (those with brushes inside are best) and some long as well as short clips. Set aside an hour or so to do the job, at a time when you're not rushed. (While you're washing your hair, soak your brush and comb in a basin of hot sudsy water.)

Then blot excess water with a Turkish towel, park yourself in front of a well - lit mirror and go to work with the rollers. They're tricky at first and may take a bit of patience. When you have them set, wrap a kerchief or hairnet around your head to keep them in place. When you're dry, take out the rollers and brush all your hair back and up. Then with a comb, carefully arrange your hairdo. Set waves in place with long clips and leave them in for a few minutes. Spray lightly, if desired.

Voila, a brand new hairdo that goes beautifully with the colorful graceful new clothes you'll be buying.

Swami Santha Installs Officers

New officers for Swami Santha No. 102 for 1961 were installed Monday night at a meeting in Castle Hall, 127½ St. John with Anita Causey, past regent as installing officer.

They include Louise Fleet, rani; Jim Tolson, rajah; Callie Crow, princess; Rachel Miller, Pundita; Anita Causey, Purohita; Zora Minor, treasurer; Gertrude Burke, scribe; Angelo Kanelos, department of works; Nell Heard, Rishi; Jean Leavitt, second warder; Aline Bearden, first warder; Harriett Thompson, Samon; Bessie Haile, imperial representative; Anita Causey, alternate and Dr. H. H. Baur, press correspondent.

During the business session applications were voted upon from El Dorado, Ark. and a donation was made to the stringed band instrument scholarship.

At conclusion of the meeting refreshments were served in the dining hall by Jim Tolson and Dr. Baur.

Bath Sales

Talk about door-to-door selling —even baths were dispensed by this method in Paris during the 18th and 19th centuries. A Parisian desiring a bath contacted a licensed water-seller, who carted both a tub and hot water to his home for the occasion.

Women's Pants Now Available In 11 Lengths

By GAY PAULEY
UPI Women's Editor

NEW YORK (UPI) — The hemline is only one facet of fashion that has its ups and downs. So do the pants that more women are wearing than ever before.

To date, there are 11 lengths of these trousers and the woman shopper needs a chart to know what she's getting when the clerk suggests "deck" or "Capri" or "Nassau" or "Bermuda."

Wilma Donaldson, fashion coordinator for Queens casuals which sells more than one million pairs of pants annually, has tried to eliminate some of the confusion by drawing up a guide for the woman shopper. And, of course for observant males everywhere.

At the same time, Miss Donaldson said that one of the newest trends in trousers is to make them reversible. For instance, tapered pants are done in gabardine, solid color on one side, flora printed on the other. Put a roll on the pants leg, and everyone knows you're coordinating your trousers with an overblouse made of the same floral print.

Now, for Miss Donaldson's dictionary of pants lengths:

—Shorty short. Just as high on the leg as modesty will permit.

—Intermediate short. Two inches longer than the shorty.

—Regulation short. Two inches longer than the intermediate.

—Jamaica short. Mid-thigh, on most women.

—Nassau short. About two inches longer than the Jamaica.

—Bermuda short. Hemmed off at about two inches above the knee.

—Knee pants. Just what the name indicates — a lengthy highly popular for summer, ending in the middle of the knee.

—Deck pants. About two inches below the knee. Also known as cabin-boys.

—Pedal pusher. A length which stops at mid-calf.

—Capri. A tapered leg trouser which stops three to four inches above the ankle bone.

—Slack — the familiar length reaching all the way to the ankle.

Girl Scout News

Day camp registrations have reached a total of 195. Since there is a quota of each age group, in order to insure a complete age range of 8-15 in camp, registrations should be made as early as possible.

The progression in adventurous activity that girls have experienced in day camp has largely been responsible for the interest in primitive camping that is being shown. Troop 44, with Mrs. Louis Breard and Mrs. N. L. Huckabee in charge, spent two nights last week end at Pine Wood, sleeping on bedrolls in the tents. The wind Saturday proved that the girls were good at tent pitching.

Guests of the troop for lunch Saturday remarked that there was nothing primitive about food, when they were served barbecued chicken, mashed potatoes, peas, rolls, and cherry pie. The food was cooked outdoors on charcoal stoves, however, and the girls had planned to cook the cobbler on a reflector oven. However, it turned so cold that a large group was enjoying the warmth of a fire and the cooks decided to use the stove instead.

Girls attending the outing were Bonnie Baldo, Linda Breard, Ann Brinson, Sally Hover, Susan Ellington, Louise Starsney, Virginia Starsney, Carole Overton, Gretchen Haas, Margaret Breard, Loretta Jones and Marilyn Denoux.

Another activity going on at the same time was the first session of training with the girls who have indicated an interest in the '62 senior roundup. Mrs. Charles Overton, roundup trainer, was in charge of the review of simple out-of-door skills for the 29 girls who attended. Another skills day is planned for April 29, to be followed by two nights in June, a unit of day camp which will include three days of tent camping, and a week in August.

Eight girls will attend the roundup, to be held at Button Bay State Park, Vermont, in July 1962. Another patrol will be chosen to participate in a regional event.

Added to the list of summer activities for Scouts is an opportunity to learn to sew. Mrs. Audrey Dawson, parish demonstration agent is making arrangements for two sewing classes in June, open to girls who next fall will be in the fifth grade or above. They will learn to use a sewing machine and to make a simple apron. Classes will be limited to ten girls each. Dates are June 12-16 and June 19-23, at the agricultural extension building in West Monroe. Registrations will be taken at the Girl Scout office on a first come, first served basis.

Troop 8 did a splendid job of a conservation project when they spent a night at Pine Wood recently. The girls put up a barrier to keep people from crossing a slope near the building and covered the slope with bricks and stones to keep soil from washing away. Mrs. E. M. Varnado and Mrs. Ellis Hunt accompanied this troop of junior high girls on camp, where they also completed requirements for first class rank. A reminder of their camp is a much - needed new can opener, which the troop donated to the camp in appreciation of their good times.

Toy Testers Throw Caution To The Winds

ON RAISING CHILDREN
By PATRICIA MCCORMACK

NEW YORK (UPI)—For childish reasons, Dr. Emma D. Sheehy sometimes hops along on a pogo stick.

She tries to yank out teddy bears' eyes and pull the wheels off toy cars.

The professor emeritus also kicks, drops, tosses and generally attempts to break dolls, wagons and other toys.

Once she even put a match near the plastic skirt of a doll and caused a flash fire.

What's more, one of Dr. Sheehy's associates, Dr. Mary Moffitt, has been seen trying to sink her teeth into some boys.

Such antics are part of the day's work when the consultants for the Toy Guidance Council (TGC) evaluate new toys.

Dr. Sheehy, of Teachers College, Columbia University, and chairman of the TGC's panel of toy-testers, has been putting new toys through her rugged obstacle course for 23 years.

Safety's a major consideration. The doll with the plastic skirt that flamed up when a match was held NEAR it, for example, flunked.

Dr. Sheehy said in an interview that the rough treatment is usually confined to toys for pre-schoolers. During the testing, Dr. Sheehy—a grandmotherly type — must pretend she's a toddler.

"We try to do everything to the toy that a child would," she said. "And every child does non - conformist things with a toy."

At the TGA headquarters in New York there also is a play laboratory. There, children from a local day nursery help the toy testers by playing with the newest ones.

Dr. Sheehy, who has taught at Columbia for 30 years, calls toys "play tools." She defines play as "child's work."

"A good play tool," she said, "engages a child's interest. It is something he can work with and receive satisfaction from."

The educator said parents never should hand a child a new toy and tell the child how to play with it.

"Letting a child work with his play tools as he wants to is an indication that you have respect for the child's ingenuity and resourcefulness," Dr. Sheehy said.

Other tips for parents are contained in a TGA booklet, "Development Through Play." In the forward, Mel Freud, president of the TGA, reports:

"If play is to have its maximum values for your child, he must have good toys, properly selected for each of the many stages in his development.

"Toys are not only the tools of play; they perform the even greater service of maintaining the youngster's eagerness, his ability to learn."

Through the TGA, a virtual science of good, safe toys has developed to match the growing understanding of why children play and what makes play worthwhile.

"Good toys are not luxuries," Freud said. "They are necessities for the welfare of your child. But always remember that to be right, a toy must first of all give the youngster fun."

But what about too much of a good thing? That is, what should you do when you home starts to look like a toy museum?

"Too many toys," Dr. Sheehy said, "frustrate a child. When your home begins to look like one big playroom, put some of the toys out of sight.

"It's a good idea to consult with your child about giving some of the toys to a charity for children."

"If you give away his toys without getting his permission, he'll think you're stealing from him."

French Generals Leading Revolt

PARIS (UPI) — Four and perhaps five French generals, all with distinguished war records, Saturday appeared to be leading the revolt in Algeria against their old commander-in-chief, President Charles De Gaulle.

All held high military commands in Algeria. All have lofty ideas of duty and patriotism and all are dedicated to the theory that "Algeria is French" and cannot be given independence, as De Gaulle proposes.

They are:

Gen. Raoul Salan, 61, former supreme commander in Algeria, barred from entering the African territory by De Gaulle and now living in Madrid.

Gen. Maurice Challe, 56, an air force general who also served in Algeria as supreme military commander. He went to NATO as an officer after the January, 1960, settlers uprising in Algiers and then resigned his commission. He went to live in Algeria in retirement.

Gen. Edmond Jauhaud, 56, former commander of the French air force in Algeria and like Challe, a World War II resistance fighter. Transferred to France in 1958 after expressing support for rightwing Algerian settlers, he was named chief of air force general staff in Paris. Became military inspector general, retired last year and went to live in Algeria.

Gen. of the army Andre-Marie Zeller, 63, who quit as army chief of staff in 1956 in protest against moves to give Algeria freedom. He favored all-out war to smasht the Algerian Moslem rebels. Brought back to active duty in 1958, he retired in October, 1959, but remained an influence in rightwing French Algerian movements.

The fifth probable rebel leader is the French paratroop hero, hawk-nosed Gen. Jacques Massu. He believes in the "Algeria is French cause" and French paratroopers swear by him as a symbol of French heroism. He has disappeared from the farm where he had been living in Pau, France.

Rebel Troops Launch Sharp Laos Attack

VIENTIANE, Laos (UPI) — Communist - led rebel troops smashed at government positions on the Vientiane-Luang Prabang highway Saturday in a sharp, mortar-backed attack reported to have killed 18 soldiers and wounded 16 others.

The Pathet Lao rebels, striking while the government awaited news of a cease-fire agreement, attacked at dawn with the aid of a heavy mortar barrage north of Vang Vieng, some 65 miles north of Vientiane.

Gen. Kouprasith Abhay, government commander in the Vang Vieng region, reported that the attacking force on Highway 13 included Communist Viet Minh forces.

A Laotian government source termed the rebel assault a violation of a "tacit cease-fire" already being observed by the royal Laotian army.

"For one week, royal troops have voluntarily adopted a strictly defensive position," Defense Minister Gen. Phoumi Nosavan told UPI.

"Nobody wants to be the last man to be killed," a Western military source said.

On the central front, the Laotian air force's U. S. - supplied Harvard trainer aircraft withdrew from the defense of the menaced provincial capital of Thakhek near the Thailand border. The armed trainers were diverted to the Vang Vieng area for rocket and strafing raids along Highway 13.

The report of the new Vang Vieng fighting followed a government communique that said Communist rebels continued to attack "on all fronts."

The government's war report listed several towns and villages in north, central and south Laos as scenes of rebel advances.

It claimed also that the government troops had inflicted "serious losses" on rebel troops north of Paksane, in central Khammouane Province, and in guerrilla attacks behind the Pathet Lao lines in northern Semneua Province.

A Laotian government source termed the rebel assault a violation of a "tacit cease-fire" already being observed by the royal Laotian army.

"For one week, royal troops have voluntarily adopted a strictly defensive position," Defense Minister Gen. Phoumi Nosavan told UPI.

"Nobody wants to be the last man to be killed," a Western military source said.

On the central front, the Laotian air force's U. S. - supplied Harvard trainer aircraft withdrew from the defense of the menaced provincial capital of Thakhek near the Thailand border. The armed trainers were diverted to the Vang Vieng area for rocket and strafing raids along Highway 13.

The report of the new Vang Vieng fighting followed a government communique that said Communist rebels continued to attack "on all fronts."

The government's war report listed several towns and villages in north, central and south Laos as scenes of rebel advances.

It claimed also that the government troops had inflicted "serious losses" on rebel troops north of Paksane, in central Khammouane Province, and in guerrilla attacks behind the Pathet Lao lines in northern Semneua Province.

9 ft. x 5 ft. load space —on the level

A Volkswagen Pick-up Truck has a 45-square foot flat bed completely level and unobstructed. It carries 1,764 lbs.

With the sides lowered, it's a platform truck. Raise them and you have a true pick-up. Add a fitted tarpaulin with bows (optional) and you have a 161-cubic-foot covered van. Either way, you also have space in a weather tight, 23-cubic-foot locker between the axles.

The VW Pick-up costs about half as much to run as most ½ ton pick-ups. Don't take our word for this. See what VW owners report in the free 60-page illustrated book, "The Owner's Viewpoint". Get your copy today.

REALTOR WEEK - APRIL 23-29

Selling a house? . . . see a REALTOR® first

Selling a house is more than just putting up a sign. For one thing, you have to find a buyer. Then there's the financing, mortgage, settlement, and many other complicated steps.

A Realtor® is a man who finds buyers for houses. And he does many other things besides. He knows about local conditions, financing, mortgages. He knows how to show a house and how to separate the potential buyers from the "lookers."

But even more than that, a Realtor® is pledged to help you get the most out of your house and still make it a good investment for the buyer.

In short, a Realtor® represents integrity.

Realtors® have been accepted for membership in the National Association of Real Estate Boards and the local real estate board as well. This means they have passed the rigid requirements of both the board and the Association, and have subscribed to their Code of Ethics.

Only Realtors® may display this seal.

Selling a house? ... see a REALTOR® first

Selling a house is more than just putting up a sign. For one thing, you have to find a buyer. Then there's the financing, mortgage, settlement, and many other complicated steps.

A Realtor® is a man who finds buyers for houses. And he does many other things besides. He knows about local conditions, financing, mortgages. He knows how to show a house and how to separate the potential buyers from the "lookers."

But even more than that, a Realtor® is pledged to help you get the most out of your house and still make it a good investment for the buyer.

In short, a Realtor® represents integrity.

Realtors® have been accepted for membership in the National Association of Real Estate Boards and the local real estate board as well. This means they have passed the rigid requirements of both the board and the Association, and have subscribed to their Code of Ethics.

ORTHO Liquid Rose Food gives spectacular results in 7 week test

Those beautiful differences appeared after just four feedings! You can expect to see results like this with your own roses when you use ORTHO Liquid Rose Food. Its specially balanced formula fills the particular nutrient needs of roses. Because it's liquid, readily absorbed by roots and foliage, it improves growth quickly. And a special chelating agent releases iron and other soil minerals for additional plant nourishment.

Easy, clean, convenient to use! No more digging in soil, disturbing roots to introduce slow-acting, dry fertilizers. Simply mix ORTHO Liquid Rose Food in water, sprinkle on soil and foliage with watering can. Easier still, apply with ORTHO Lawn Sprayer attached to your garden hose. ORTHO Liquid Rose Food is highly concentrated . . . extremely economical to use.
